BUICK BARGAIN DAYS ARE HERE

Buick Bargain Days are saving days.

A bargain price on a stripped-down car is no bargain. But a Buick or Opel at a bargain is something else again. Because we're not selling some special stripped-down model. We're selling Buicks and Opels, the same great cars we've sold all year. With one difference. The deals have never been better. Which means that you can move out in a new Buick or Opel at a price that's hard to believe. When Buick talks about a bargain, we give you something to believe in.

Opel 1900 Sport Coupe With a 1.9 liter engine that operates efficiently on low lead or no lead gasoline, hydraulic valve lifters for quiet engine operation, power front disc brakes and more.

GM
MARK OF EXCELLENCE

Your Buick-Opel dealer will give you better reasons to buy a new car now than anybody else.

The business of auto safety.

Auto safety is everyone's concern. But it's our business.

And we think the attention that's being paid to auto safety now is a good thing. Because it will result in better driving for everyone.

And, frankly, better driving for everyone means better business for us.

We say Buick is something to believe in. That's why we're trying to make it easy to be safe by putting in safety features that work by themselves. You don't have to do anything to make them work.

Like side guard beams. And the energy-absorbing steering column. And the cargo guard between the trunk and back seat. They start working even before you get in the car.

But two safety features, two of the most vital, are worthless unless you do something first.

Seat and shoulder belts.

Unfastened they do nothing. And you've seen enough [illegible] to know what a difference they can make. So use them.

But that's not all you can do. Because the most effective safety feature of all can't be added to our cars or anybody else's.

That feature is you. And the way you drive.

[illegible] should be defensively. And rested. And sober. [illegible] together. And together we can solve the [illegible] safety problem once and for all.

And [illegible] now.

Likens Negotiators To Kids Fighting Over an Apple

By JUDY CLOCK

The peace negotiators in Paris are acting like "two little boys struggling over an apple and both are unwilling to let go," Rev. Bruce Pierce, pastor of the Boyne City Methodist Church told a group of about 50 persons at the First State Bank in Charlevoix Thursday night.

"It is time to put pressure on our government to make them willing to give away a bit of the skin," Rev. Pierce said.

Rev. Pierce, who was one of a group of Americans who met with peace negotiators in Paris this winter, said the United States should be willing to set a date for withdrawal from Vietnam, contingent upon serious negotiations on a cease fire and the release of prisoners.

"If more than 50 percent of the people of a given congressional district would contact their congressmen by letter, telegram or in person, the 'silent majority' myth could be shattered," Rev. Pierce said.

He also suggested that persons interested in ending the war might be able to add to the pressure on the government by joining such peace-oriented organizations as the American Friends Service Committee or Common Cause.

He also urged support for a constitutional amendment lowering the voting age to 18.

A second meeting with Rev. Pierce is being planned by Charlevoix peace advocates to formulate a concrete plan of action.

Armstrong-Spinner Rites Solemnized

By ANNE OSTERBAAN

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Armstrong, former Ellsworth residents now living in Coopersville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Spinner of Nunica.

The Rev. Kenneth Tunistra officiated at the double ring ceremony witnessed by 400 guests.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of embossed polyester. A matching pill-box hat secured her finger-tip veil. She carried a bouquet of roses, carnations and baby's breath.

Maid of honor was Miss Judy Bye of Three Rivers. Bridesmaids were Gail and Tina Spinner, and Trudi, Tami and Terese Armstrong. Dawn Osmer was flower girl.

The Spinners will live in Norfolk, Va., where the bridegroom is stationed with the U.S. Navy aboard the John F. Kennedy.

DEPT. OF NATURAL RESOURCES

Lawyer Joins DNR Board

Grand Rapids attorney Hilary F. Snell, 36, president of the Michigan Council of Trout Unlimited, was named last week to Michigan's Natural Resources Commission by Governor Milliken.

He was named to succeed Robert C. McLaughlin of Detroit who resigned in early March. The appointment of Snell is subject to Senate confirmation and covers the balance of McLaughlin's term which runs through Dec. 31, 1972.

Local Lions Mark White Cane Week

More than 400 Lions Clubs throughout Michigan are teaming together to "acquaint the public with state laws which have been adopted for the protection of the blind.

They also will promote their special assistance projects for the blind, which include providing sightless citizens with white canes, leader dogs, braille watches, eye examinations and cornea transplants.

There are no other civic club projects more worthy of your whole-hearted support.

During White Cane Week, Lions call attention to the plight of the visually handicapped in two ways: By asking that the public remember to exercise particular consideration for the visually handicapped; and, by asking those who would like to join in helping the visually handicapped to purchase a miniature White Cane from a Lions Club member.

The White Cane

I saw a white cane glisten as he slowly walked along,
And it seemed to catch my fancy as I mingled with the throng.
I thought it rather curious, for all the canes in town
That I had ever noticed were either black or brown.
And then, as he came closer, flashed the thought into my mind:
"I knew the White Cane's meaning - 'tis the symbol of the blind."
To be a little thoughtful to the brother drawing nigh.
When he sees that white cane gleaming in the glory of the day,
There is one who walks in darkness, who needs help to cross the way.
"Tis a blind man's modest symbol that, where'er his pathway wends,
He is certain great and lowly, rich and poor are all his friends.
I've forgotten who began it, or from whom the motion came,
But the white cane for the sightless is a thought deserving fame.
In Life's feverish helter-skelter we go rushing right along,
Little needing, little noting, who may need us of the throng.
But the white cane, tapping, tapping, as a symbol of the blind.
Should remind us to be watchful, to be thoughtful, to be kind.

By Edgar A. Guest

Phil Ruppe Reports From Washington

By Cong. Philip E. Ruppe

The House of Representatives last week passed the Office of Education Appropriations measure for fiscal year 1972. This is the earliest date of passage of this annual appropriations bill in years, thus giving school administrators throughout the country ample time to plan their budgets for next year with the federal aid factors included.

Involved in the bill were some $4.8 billion dollars of federal aid to the elementary, secondary and higher education schools in the country. Among the key amendments considered was a so-called package amendment to add some $728.6 million to a variety of programs included in the bill. The amendment, introduced by Congressman Hathaway of Maine, was defeated 191-187. I voted against the amendment primarily because the bill already includes substantial increases over the previous year's funding. For example, the bill adds $226 million over fiscal 1971 appropriations. Another $400 million will be added as soon as additional authorization measures have passed the Congress. In all, more than $600 million will have added to next years federal education programs, an increase of nearly 15 percent over the present fiscal year.

The Hathaway amendment was the result of some hasty efforts over the previous weekend to devise a package broad enough to attract enough support in the House. This is an annual event for the education appropriations bills. In fact, I have supported the amendments in the past. However, because the Appropriations Committee and the President have both acted this year to increase education funding, I did not feel that the amendment was an absolute necessity. I also felt that the Appropriations Committee itself should have had an opportunity to consider Mr. Hathaway's amendment prior to House action. After all, Mr. Hathaway is a member of the Appropriations Committee.

I did support an amendment to add some $30 million to the Federal Impacted Aid program, which assists school districts located near federal installations. As a result, Federal Impacted Aid will be increased $56 million over the previous fiscal year. It will provide payments of 90 percent of entitlement on "A" Payments (to schools attended by students of families who both live and work on federal property) and it will increase the "B" payments from 68 percent to 73 percent of entitlement. The so-called "B" payments go to schools with students whose families work but do not live on federal property. For many of our Northern Michigan school systems, Federal Impacted Aid is a critical budget consideration.

Indian Campground Now Historic Site

An ancient Indian encampment site at Wycamp Creek north of Cross Village in Emmet County has been added to the National Register of Historic Places, according to official word reaching the Department of Natural Resources in Lansing.

Other locations are Christ Church in Detroit, Old Fort Brady at Sault Ste. Marie, Mariners' Church in Detroit and the Heritage Hill Historic District at Grand Rapids.

The Wycamp Creek site near Lake Michigan was singled out for extensive pottery and stone artifacts circa 600 A.D. to 1700 A.D. Archaeologists have been able to piece together many aspects of early weapon-tool manufacture from the large array of stone-working material and artifacts which they have found at the site.

The Christ Church in Detroit, a Victorian gothic structure built in the shape of a Latin cross and dating back to 1846, is the oldest Protestant Church in the city which is still located at its original site.

Old Fort Brady, with its barracks, stables, officers' quarters, and other structures, was built in 1822 as one in a series of advance posts to serve the American government's national defense plan after the War of 1812.

The Mariners' Church in Detroit, a two-story gothic revival building, was constructed in 1848-49 to serve as a free house of worship for seamen. Still used as a church today, the structure features ship parts, a captain's stand, and other nautical decor originally designed, no doubt, to make its early seagoing worshippers feel "at home."

Virtually every style of American domestic architecture---from Greek Revival to Wright's Prairie style—is exemplified within the district which remains an important residential neighborhood.

Each of these historic points were recommended for the National Register by DNR Director Ralph A. MacMullan, Michigan's liaison officer for the historic preservation program, after being screened by this state's inter-agency task force and advisory council.

Says Diet Cures Some Diseases

Dear Editor:

In that the context of the inclosed letter is "open" and also that it has value to the general public, I would appreciate the printing of same.

Thank you.

Sincerely for good everything,
Rosalie Ottinger

AN OPEN LETTER

April 10, 1971

Dena C. Cederquist, Professor
Food Science and Human Nutrition Dept.
MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY
East Lansing, Michigan 48823

Dear Doctor:

I received your letter of April 5 and after thinking about it a few days, decided to again point out some facts that you obviously are not aware of now. You say, and I quote you not out of context, but verbatim, "My chief concern lies in the area of assuming a change in diet will cure certain diseases". Please THINK about that a minute. Did you never learn that a change of diet would cure the disease of malnutrition, scurvy, rickets and a host of others?

You say you are alive today because a surgeon removed a cancerous growth from you and that no diet would have cured you. This is no doubt true and Adelle Davis probably never would suggest that you not have it removed once there. I am certain if I were to become afflicted with it, I would have it removed. Another CERTAIN thing is that pollution (distortion of human environment) has already caused all sorts of malady.. Rome didn't burn (disintegrate) in a day, but days do come too soon for far too many of us when we find we have cancer, heart trouble, or just plain don't feel well. If we have not LEARNED to care for ourselves better than we have, is it not time to take a better look at what we have "learned"?

You say you have in your possession some of Adelle Davis' books. I say, without malice, now read them. I also suggest you obtain from National Health Federation P.O. Box 686, 211 West Colorado Blvd., Monrovia, Calif., 91016, their booklet number 62. This is 25 cents and is entitled "Cancer, is a Nutritional Deficiency".

You say you are glad we can each purchase and consume what we choose. I would go a step further and say that it would be much more convenient to live where one could obtain pure unadultrated food in any local supermarket, and at comparative prices. This distribution of foods may be out of your "department", but the adultration of foods by way of additives, preservers, emulsifiers and dyes as well as the also toxic sprays should be your "department". If nutritionists do not help the political Food And Drug Administration with pure truth, how, on our polluted earth, can they hope to judge what is "allowable toxins"?

Sincerely for good nutrition,
Rosalie Ottinger

Says God Guides Friske

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response of the letter printed in "The Voice of the People."

It was stated that we of the 106th district made a "Mistake" by "letting" Mr. Friske get into office. On the contrary, most of us knew what we were getting when we elected Mr. Friske. This man is not afraid to call evil, "evil". Also, he does not call it by any other name for those who do not wish to hear it.

We call this nation a Christian nation, but when a Christian is elected, who will not deviate from his Christian principles for personal gain or praise of men, we hear a large commotion. What is the commotion all about? After all, he is there to serve our best interests, if those interests are liberty, freedom, and the right to worship God openly in the church of our choice. We should all be praying for more men as concerned and diligent as Mr. Friske to represent us in our states and our national government.

I believe many people do not understand a man of his spiritual depth and his responsibility to God in regards to what he accomplishes during his term in office. Each of us must also give an account of our every word and deed.

If the election of such a man is termed a "Mistake," then God have mercy on us, and if this is the feeling of the "majority," I would say there is no longer anything Christian about this nation. Truly Mr. Friske has much cause to rejoice for 2,000 years ago Christ said, "Blessed are ye when falsely persecuted for My name sake, for great is your reward in heaven."

The writer said she would like to go on record as agreeing 100 percent with those opposing the questionnaire. Believe me, every word is recorded with God, and I would like to go on record as being in agreement with Mr. Friske.

Now I do not wish to imply that Mr. Friske can save this nation, but he does serve a Christ who can, therefore, we should all be praying for God's blessing on all that he endeavors to accomplish in our behalf. We are all measured by the Word of God. He is the guide and advisor of Mr. Friske.

Sincerely yours,

Donna Tracey

Clockwise

I've had my say on "The Calley Affair." I think it stinks.

Now I'd like you to hear what Miss Barbara Kehn of Capac, Mich., has to say on the same sordid subject. She said it all very eloquently in a letter which appeared in the Lapeer County Press April 15:

Dear Editor:

Perhaps it is appropriate near the time of the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, to stage yet another crucifixion. In that not so distant past the betrayer was called Judas Iscariot. Now in this year of our Lord, 1971, a specter rises and with sweeping hand depicts a multitude. They too have betrayed one of their own. They are preparing the cross. They will crucify him. They are the People, the Military, the Federal Government, the United States of America!

I too have proudly waved my flag. I have wept over my noble dead come home still and cold and lain others to rest in some far distant meadow. Turning from my grief I have sent yet others on into the battle. These things must be done because, right or wrong, if we have made it our battle it must be fought hard and well to the righteous end.

However, now, with the conviction of William Calley, I am no longer proud. I have failed. I am part of a corrupt nation. A nation without honor and full of discontent. But beyond that and most appalling I am part of a spineless mob of people filled with fear! Faith is gone. Hope is gone. Charity is gone. Justice is dead.

Justice is dead. All in the span of a few short months we have seen lies, deceit and fear destroy an honorable young man. Our nation took him, educated him in the ways of our wars and sent him out ot fight a rather senseless battle in a distant jungle land. An honorable young man. Did he question the reasonableness of that war? Or did he question why he, William Calley, had been selected to take part of that conflict? Did he question the orders of his commanders in that treacherous field? I think not for he was an honorable young man.

But was his heart filled with dread and horror because of the things he was required to do? Was he afraid? Of course he was. Yet he fought his war regardless of how sickened he was by the carnage. Since he came from a proud nation, a great land, he fought his war in the manner in which he had been instructed by his country, to protect his people and to preserve the freedom and the justice for his fellow man. He was a young man of honor.

And so he came home. To his People, his Military, his Government and his Nation. The United States of America! He had fought his war with valor. Then his People, his Military, his Government all within his great Nation from the bones of his fallen brothers of the battle, builded themselves a cross! Upon that cross William Calley was crucified.

He was only a strong, faithful American man created by God, until the officials cried out, "Crucify him"! Now it has been decreed that a frightened, bewildered, disillusioned young man shall be abrogated by his brother officers and the brotherhood of man. He has become the sacrificial goat upon the altar of power. The great leaders seem to think that the letting of his blood will protect them not only from the wrath of the ancient gods but also from their own castigation.

So what have we done? What have we gained? William Calley has been destroyed. Can he ever regain his faith, his trust, his pride? Could we, the people of the government and the nation, ever convince him that he is an honorable young man? Will he ever again be able to lift his eyes to his flag and feel that inner surge of pleasure, pride and possession? Will he ever feel the lilt when the band strikes up "The Star Spangled Banner" or "America"? Can any of our hallowed American ways cause his heart to throb and send the blood in great racing swells through the body of William Calley? Or in yours or in mine?

So how about the rest of us? We have allowed this horrendous thing to happen. We are the People. We are the United States of America. Yet we within our own land have methodically destroyed one of our own because he went out and did a job that we told him must be done. For this we crucify him? Yes, I believe the next time I hear "Hail to the Chief" that my eyes will smart, but not from emotion, only from the corrosive dirt of the nation into which we have allowed ourselves to sink.

All to our great nation will yet have to do, having accomplished the persecution and crucifixion of Lt. Calley, is to rise above our mire long enough to cast lots for his uniform and his medals which we flauntingly bestowed upon him. Shall I clutch my share of the loot in soiled hands, stand tall and shout, "Thank God I am an American?" Or shall I hang my head in shame and cry, "God forgive me, I am an American?"

Think about it my fellow Americans. Think about it.

If it Fitz

Immortal Uncle Walt

By Jim Fitzgerald

It has recently occurred to me, tragically, like a kick in the gut, that some day Uncle Walt is going to die.

Skeezix was 50 years old in February, God help us all, and time stops for no man when he lives on Gasoline Alley.

Little Orphan Annie hasn't aged a minute in 40 years. Egad, she hasn't even changed her dress. Dondi was an Italian orphan of World War II and the poor kid is still in elementary school today. Charlie Brown has been a little leaguer for 15 years. Dagwood's wife is built better today than she was 30 years ago. And Dick Tracy is the world's only active cop older than J. Edgar Hoover.

That's the way it goes in most comic strips. The characters never age. Except on Gasoline Alley. Uncle Walt found the infant Skeezix on his doorstep in 1921. Skeezix has always been 5 years older than I, sort of a big brother. We grew up together and went to war together. We've raised our families and wrestled with milk bills together. And now we're beginning to grow old together.

But my father died a few years ago. So what about Uncle Walt? He's been aging right along with Skeezix and me. He's got to be closing in on 80. He can't live forever. Not on Gasoline Alley where everything is honest.

I'm not sure this nation can handle the death of Uncle Walt.

Look what happened a few times on T.V. A soap opera star has grown sick of the suds and run away to Hollywood. The writers explained the character's absence by having him killed in a plane crash or dying suddenly of the mange. And there was great wailing and gnashing of upper plates from the public. Housewives demanded that Professor Bob be brought back to life or they would quit buying the sponsor's soap.

That's the type of threat that makes sponsors responsive to public opinion. So now the stars are never killed. If an actress quits, she is simply replaced with another actress. The character's sudden change in appearance is explained by an overdue visit to the most marvelous beauty shop. And everyone is happy.

But Uncle Walt cannot be replaced in this manner. His problem is not that he's fleeing to Hollywood. It's that he will begin to lose his believability when Skeezix celebrates his 90th birthday and Walt shows up at the party.

And the final loss of Uncle Walt will create a national uproar many times louder than any caused by a TV death. Soap operas are fleeting things, never lasting more than a few years at the most. But Gasoline Alley and Uncle Walt have been with us every day since 1921.

Can you imagine the mourning when Walt is erased for good? It will be the world's most watched death scene. What a funeral that will be! Skeezix will get a billion letters of condolence. And several newspaper offices will be stormed and bombed.

Truly, there is a sad day coming. The more I think of it, the more cataclysmic it gets. I think this tragedy must be avoided, for the good of the nation. Uncle Walt must live.

I can't think of any better solution than a heart transplant from Little Orphan Annie. I haven't liked that kid for 40 years anyway, ever since one day I got gosh-awful sick from drinking too much Ovaltine.

National Geographic Feature

In China, Everyone Plays Table Tennis

International table tennis matches bear little resemblance to the friendly recreation-room game that most Americans play.

Professionals stand 15 to 20 feet from the table and slam the wildly spinning ball at speeds reaching 60 to 100 miles an hour, the National Geographic Society says. "It smarts pretty badly if you take a direct hit on the head," a tournament novice commented with a wince.

Chinese Dominate

A team from Communist China recently captured four of seven events at the 31st World Table Tennis Championships held in Japan. In an unexpected goodwill gesture, the Chinese invited the United States tournament representatives, who finished well down the list, to visit mainland China.

While on the goodwill tour, the Americans will compete against China's leading players. Table tennis is not only China's national sport, it is a mania.

Every commune, factory, and office has a government-sponsored league. More than three million registered players compete in the national championships. Top players often practice from dawn to dusk.

In Contrast, the United States has only about 2,800 registered players.

Young Sport

Among the world's youngest sports, table tennis or Ping-Pong, as it is often called in the United States, received its earliest known mention in an 1884 London catalogue, which advertised a "miniature lawn tennis game."

Players used small racquets to strike a firm, light ball covered with knitted web over a net stretched across a dining room table.

The game's origin is uncertain. Its inventor has been variously identified as an American in New England, an Englishman in England, and a British Army officer in either India or South Africa.

BRITISH FIRST

The new game stirred little interest in the United States at first, but the British immediately adopted it. The sport became their favorite pastime, especially after a speedy celluloid ball replaced the webbed sphere about 1900.

The craze soon faded, however, and the game was almost forgotten for a quarter of a century. Its revival led to the formation of the International Table Tennis Federation in 1926. Six nations formed the organization; more than 90 now belong.

The fast-paced sport has grown ever trickier over the years as cork and sandpaper-covered paddles gave way to rubber facing and, most recently, to sponge-covered racquets.

BALL SPINS

Sponge surfaces give the ball incredible spin, eliminating lengthy volleys. Before their introduction in 1952, a single 21-point game often took hours in competitive play. In one world championship playoff, the first point lasted an exhausting hour and 40 minutes.

Table tennis is not just a professional's game. Countless millions bang the little ball back and forth in Europe, America, and Asia. But in recent years, the Asians—last to take up the sport—have dominated almost all international contests.

Jobless Rate Dips In Area

Employment in nonfarm industries in the East North Central States, including Michigan, amounted to 14,723,200 in December 1970, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported today. This was a decline both since September and since a year earlier.

William E. Rice, Acting Director of the Bureau's Regional Office in Chicago, compared the December total to the all-time high reached a year ago when 14,969,200 were employed during the survey week.

Rice noted, however, that record high employment levels in the various industry divisions were reached both before and after December 1969. Hitting peaks before the end of 1969 were mining in August 1968, and construction and manufacturing in September 1969. Reaching record high totals in 1970 were government in April, finance, insurance and real estate in July, services in October, and wholesale and retail trade in December. Employment in transportation and public utilities hit a high point in July, but the record high was in 1953.

Manufacturing employment declined 4.0 percent from September to December reflecting declines of employment in 62 of 66 groups reported separately. Discounting a seasonal drop in canned and preserved foods, half of the quarterly decline occurred in three heavy-industry divisions—primary metals, fabricated metal products and machinery. Over the year, manufacturing employment has declined 7.6 percent in durable goods, and 5.0 percent in nondurables. Notably lower since a year ago were totals in machinery (especially metalworking machinery), transportation equipment (mostly motor vehicles), and apparel and related products.

In concert with the over-the-year slump in manufacturing, employment has declined in three other industry divisions—mining, construction and transportation-public utilities. However, employment gains were reported in finance insurance and real estate services, and government. Employment was up only slightly in trade; a 2.0 percent rise in wholesale employment was largely offset by declines in most retail groups.

The Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission last week awarded $100,000 to the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District for improvement of the vocational education center in Petoskey.

Announcement of the grant was made April 13, the day after voters rejected a proposal for one mill operation of the Petoskey center and other vocational education programs throughout the district.

The grant to the C-E district was included in $1,200,529 in grants approved by the Commission for projects throughout the northern portions of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. The commission met in Madison, Wisc.

Other large Michigan grants included $240,000 toward construction of an "industrial incubator" building at Sault Ste. Marie, which is faced with a massive unemployment problem.

Prospective industries will use the building and its training programs until convinced they can operate profitabley on their own. They would then relocate permanently in the area's industrial park.

Lake Superior State College is participating in the $300,000 project, a new approach to attracting industry to depressed areas. The Commission also approved a $50,000 technical assistance grant for the project for the upcoming fiscal year.

Another sizeable grant was $135,000 toward construction of a $1.7 million community hospital at Gaylord.

The commission adopted unanimously to adopt a proposal by Gov. William Milliken that all commission projects be revised for their environmental impact.

"As we help attract industries to the Upper Great Lakes area, we must seek those industries that are environmentally responsible and willing to install effective air and water pollution control equipment," Milliken said.

Library Notes

The Library recently received a valuable and unusual collection of science books from the private library of Mr. Marion Miller. We would like to list some of the important titles from this collection which was so generously donated by Mrs. Miller.

"Astronomy of the 20th Century" by Otto Struve and Velta Zebergs, as authoritative image of this period of astronomical achievement, the discoveries, the techniques used and the scientists involved.

"We Are Not Alone" by Walter Sullivan not only offers the reader a tour of the universe, showing the likelihood of our sharing it with other civilizations, but also discusses the historical background of our attempts to communicate with other worlds.

"A Planet Called Earth" by George Gamow reflects the findings and theories about the life history of our world from its birth billions of years ago to its death in the far-distant future.

"The Immense Journey" is a slim book by Loren Eiseley in which an imaginative naturalist explores the mysteries of man and nature. It is a pleasant, easy-to-read book which will be of interest even to the non-scientist.

"Intelligent Life in the Universe" is a unique collaboration between a world famous Russian astronomer and a leading American space scientist. It is well illustrated with some color plates and although it contains small print technical material of interest to the scientist, it is written primarily for the intelligent layman.

"The Milky Way" by Bart J. Box and Priscilla F. Box provides the reader with an invitation to tour the "Road to the Heavens". Merely by sitting in one's rocking chair, we are permitted to pay a casual call on the sun's nearest neighbors and then visit the real depths of our universe—the big stars and little stars and clusters of stars within the larger system of the Milky Way. The book offers an incredible journey.

"Stars and Men—A Guide to Astronomy for Everyman" tells all about navigation, time, the sun, the moon, the seasons, the weather and hundreds of other scientific and historical facts.

The collection included two other large, handsome books on astronomy. One by Fred Hoyle is a history of man's investigation of the universe. The other is a pictorial book on astronomy which is a complete and fascinating survey in text and photograhhis, with maps, drawings and diagrams.

DNR Hopes to Plant Swedish Salmon in State

Fisheries officials for Michigan's Department of Natural Resources hope to obtain free Atlantic salmon eggs from Sweden next winter as rearing stock for an experimental introduction of 100,000 fish in the spring of 1973.

Wayne H. Tody, DNR fisheries chief, reports that "progress is being made" to gain disease-free certification of the eggs, which is required before they can be imported into this country. Once that step is cleared, hopefully by this summer, he will make a formal request for 200,000 Atlantic salmon eggs through the Director of the Fisheries Board for Sweden.

Tody notes:

"We may hit a snag along the way which could set our plans back a year or two, but we're going to keep working on this program because we think Sweden has a source of Atlantic salmon which holds a lot of exciting potential for our state."

If the DNR succeeds in getting the eggs, he sees a good possibility that the fish to be raised from them could help fill the summer gap in this state's Great Lakes stream fishing, and produce excellent cost-benefit returns.

Tody explains that "Atlantics" move up streams in the summer which means they would provide action fur Great Lakes fishermen during the slack season between spring steelhead runs and the fall migrations of steelhead and salmon.

From the first eggs to be sought, the DNR hopes to be able to raise about 100,000 smolts (4-7 inches) for planting in the spring of 1973. The first runs of adults from that release would occur in 1975, with additional runs taking place through 1977, reports Tody.

After next winter, the DNR would like to obtain another 200,000 eggs from Sweden for each of 4 more years to span the 5-year life cycle of Atlantic salmon. It needs continued supplies of the eggs over that period in an effort to establish Michigan's own egg source, and to see whether Atlantic salmon take hold in this state.

Tody reports that a stretch of the Boardman River below the Brown Bridge Dam is the DNR's current No. 1 choice for planting the first batch of Atlantics it hopes to raise. He explains that the Boardman has exceptionally favorable water temperatures and stream flows for salmon during the summer period.

The Pere Marquette River is also rated high on those key biological points and is being considered as the second best stream in Michigan for the opening Atlantic salmon releases.

The Boardman holds an important edge over the PM because its physical features offer better opportunities to control Atlantic salmon runs for egg-taking, limited fishing, and research work.

Some of them—only a few, admittedly—survive spawning and escape anglers to return to big waters where they put on additional growth before running back up streams the next season.

Those which go through more than one spawning season and, consequently, enjoy extra growth in open waters, may reach 30 pounds or more. On the average, adult Atlantics weigh about 10 pounds, says Tody.

In any case, these fish offer trophy-class catches and they are highly rated in sport-fishing circles because they hit readily on gaudy flies and make sensational leaping runs when hooked.

Tody is particularly impressed with Sweden's egg supply because that country has worked out a rear-and-release system which has succeeded in reversing the long decline of Atlantic salmon in waters of the Baltic Sea. Angler returns from the program's planted fish are running up to 20 percent and that, in Tody's opinion, is "extremely good and the kind of batting average we'd like to have with Atlantic salmon in our state."

Tody is especially enthused about a pure strain of land-locked Atlantic salmon in Sweden which has been self-sustained by natural reproduction for some 4,000 years. The fish mature in Lake Vaner and spawn in Gullspring River where a relatively modest number of their eggs are taken each year for stock improvement and propagation in other areas.

Tody would like nothing better than to get at least 10,000 eggs from the Gullspring run next winter as part of the 200,000 eyed eggs which he plans to seek from Sweden.

"The Atlantics produced from this pure strain are exceptionally fine fish and they would fit beautifully into our fish management niche for the Great Lakes. Unlike many other strains of Atlantic salmon, the Gullspring fish spend only one year in a stream and then live 4 years in open lake waters where they grow tremendously—many to 30 pounds and up."

Tody adds:

"This means that it wouldn't take much time, money, or effort to raise these fish to planting size. We could plant them out at minimum costs and draw maximum returns be letting the fish grow to lunker size in the Great Lakes. And believe me, when we plant a fish at 4-6 inches and some fisherman catches it a few years later at about 30 pounds, that's a nice, big dividend."

Tody says the DNR's regular hatchery budget could absorb all of the shipping, handling, and rearing costs for the 200,000 Atlantic salmon which the Department hopes to get from Sweden next January or February.

Champion Silver Poplar Grows on Warner Farm

If you'd like to have a look at the largest silver poplar tree in Michigan — and probably the whole United States — you don't have to travel any further than the Jasper Warner farm on the Barnard-rd., two miles south of Charlevoix.

The gigantic popular, which has a girth of 228 inches and stands 86 feet tall, shades the entrance to the Warner's driveway — so you don't even have to leave your car for a close-up view.

Paul W. Thompson, chairman of the Michigan Big Tree Committee, reports that the Warner's tree is still state champ as far as the Michigan Botanical Club is concerned.

But it has been dropped from a list of National Champion Trees compiled by the American Forestry Association because the big silver poplar is a species which does not develop from seed.

"Otherwise, I believe this tree might be listed as a national champion for that species," Thompson writes. "At the time of this change, this tree was the biggest of its kind on record.

NOBODY knows for sure how long the big poplar has been around.

Mrs. Jasper Warner says the tree has been there as long as any members of her family can remember, just as big as ever.

In addition to its astounding girth and height, the Warner's poplar has a spread of 112 feet, another figure which is used in designating champion trees.

Florida now leads the nation with 59 champion trees, followed by Michigan with 53. California has 44, Missouri, 27; Oregon, 23; and Illinois, 22.

The championship is awarded to the tree of each species rating high points based on the sum of the girth in inches, the height in feet and one-fourth of the crown spread in feet.

Michigan reached its high ranking as the result of an intensive ten-year campaign promoted by the Michigan Botanical Club. Members enlisted the assistance of other conservation and natural history organizations, schools, museums, foresters, county agents and other interested parties.

The Big Tree Committee, set up by the Michigan Botanical Club, collected data on several thousand different trees.

To aid in the protection of the state's heritage of giant trees and to give recognition to these champions, the committee has placed four by six aluminum signs on the three or four largest trees of each species, designating them "Michigan Big Trees."

In Michigan, Oakland County leads with 18 champion trees, followed by Macomb and Wayne, nine each; Washtenaw and Leelanau, eight each; and Grand Traverse and Cass, six each.

Michigan has eight national champion willows, three champion maples and five champion oaks.

THE TOWNSHIP OF CHARLEVOIX ORDAINS;

Section 1. The words "parks" and "public places," unless specifically limited, shall be deemed to include all parks, beaches, grass plots, playgrounds, recreation areas, athletic fields, and other areas which are now or may hereafter be acquired by purchase, gift, devise, bequealh, lean or lease. Any term in the singular shall include the plural.

Section 3. No unauthorized person or persons shall fire or discharge any firearm or throw stones or other missiles; nor fire, discharge or set off any rocket, cracker, torpedo, or other fireworks containing any substance of an explosive nature in any public park or playground. The last inhibition shall not prevent special fireworks expositions to be given under the auspices of the Township Supervisor.

Section 4. No booth, tent, stall or other structure shall be erected for any purpose, and no hawking or peddling shall be done or any article or thing sold or exposed for sale in any public park or playground except by written permission of the Township Supervisor.

Section 5. No person in any municipal park or recreation area or beach area shall bring in or dump or deposit bottles, glass, ashes, paper, garbage, or other refuse or trash, and no garbage or trash shall be placed in receptacles in the park, except that in the park use. Where receptacles are not so provided, all rubbish or waste shall be carried away from the park by the person responsible for its presence, and properly disposed of elsewhere.

Section 6. No parades, drills, expeditions, political meetings, religious meeting, concerts, speeches, lectures, or assemblages of persons shall be held in any park, except upon written permission of the Township Supervisor.

Section 7. No person shall use any threatening, obscene, profane or indecent language in the park, or be guilty of any disorderly or indecent conduct therein; nor shall any person engage in any game or conduct which threatens the general enjoyment of the park by the public.

Section 8. No person shall sleep, whether in a vehicle, trailer, tent, hammock, or other manner, in the park, public way or other public place during the night time.

Section 9. No person or persons shall loiter or remain upon any public park or playground between the hours of 2:00 A.M. and 7:00 A.M.

Section 10. No person shall advertise any placard or advertisement of any kind in the park; nor shall any person distribute any matter, or place any handbill, pamphlet, circular, etc., nor post, stencil or otherwise affix any notice of bills of advertisement of other papers upon any structure or thing in or about the park unless it be with the written consent of the Township Supervisor.

Section 11. No person shall carry on any trade or business or sell or display any goods, wares or merchandise in the park, unless it be with the written consent of the Township Supervisor.

Section 12. It shall be unlawful for any person to write upon, cut, mutilate, deface, damage, remove or destroy in any manner any building, equipment, structure, fountain, fence, bench, masonry, statue, ornament or any other property, real or personal, or any appurtenances thereto, owned and operated by the Township, and located upon or in any park, park way, boulevard, playground, or in any other place or property under control of the Township.

Section 13. All motor vehicles are prohibited from all park areas excepting the parking lot of said parks

Section 14. Any person, firm or corporation who shall violate any provision of this ordinance shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and this upon conviction thereof, punished by a fine not to exceed one hundred ($100.00) dollars, and the cost of prosecution or, in default of the payment thereof, by imprisonment for not to exceed ninty (90) days, or both, such fine or imprisonment in the discretion of the Court. Each day that a violation is permitted to exist shall constitute a separate offense. The imposition of any sentence shall not exempt the offender from compliance with the requirements of this ordinance.

Section 15. Should any section, clause or provision of this ordinance be declared by the Court to be invalid, the same shall not affect the validity of this ordinance as a whole, or any part thereof other than the part declared to be invalid.

Section 17. This ordinance is to take effect on May 21 1971.

chairman, vice-chairman, secretary and treasurer. Operating funds to be provided by fund-raising campaigns, subscription and pledge or such other lawful means as shall be deemed advisable by the Board of Directors (adult sponsors)

Article VIII states that activities shall be subject to the local curfew. One night per week is reserved for youth age 12-15; one night for the college age crowd while all other planned evenings are reserved predominantly for 16-year-olds and up.

Entertainment consists of musical groups, development of hobbies, study and discussion groups. Breakthrough fosters a facility where coffee, soft drinks and snacks may be served with smoking for those under 18 forbidden.

Bruce says that drug use, drunkeness, selling of drugs, gross indecencies and other illegal activities are subject to police action.

Every Thursday evening is "Bible rap" night. When the subject is treated in depth, a local minister is asked to be present so that erroneous interpretations may be eliminated.

It is apparent the Breakthrough youth group is dead serious in their concern not only for their own improvement but also for the improvement of the environment. When adult groups recently circulated petitions to keep a section of the Lake Michigan shore south of the city undeveloped and free from threatened exploitation, the Breakthrough youths took copies and solicited signatures alongside the "Establishment."

When members of Breakthrough need something, they pray for it. God often answers through local citizens such as Dr. and Mrs. Baillargeon, Mr. and Mrs. Jerrald Redeker, Rev. and Mrs. A. F. Mansen and many others not directly among the sponsors. With attendance in the hundreds the youth group needed furniture: They got it! They needed coffee pots and those too were supplied by unsung donors! They needed coffee pots and those too were supplied by unsung donors!

Breakthrough needs a reserve fund and Charlevoix citizens must accept the challenge. To start the fund, Miss Annabel Comfort has secured a CBS showing of Great Photographers and their Works from the owner of the film, The Alcoa Aluminum Co.

Two showings are planned – afternoon and evening with the date and place to be announced later. There will be no admission charge at the door but there will be a "free will" offering that hopefully will assure Breakthrough of a break in its financial dilemma.

City Faces Lawsuit Over Sewage Contract

Shaw-Henderson Threatens Action

City Attorney John Michael told the City Council Monday night that Shaw-Henderson Inc. of Cheboygan has threatened to file suit against the city charging it with irregularities in the awarding of a contract for the construction of the city's proposed waste water treatment plant to Clark Construction Co. of Lansing instead of Shaw-Henderson.

Michael said he learned of the pending lawsuit in a telephone conversation with Charles Boyle of Chicago on Monday. Boyle is Shaw-Henderson's attorney.

The lawsuit could further tie up state and federal monies for the project and, if successful, force the city to ask for bids a third time.

The decision on the lawsuit apparently was reached by Shaw-Henderson after a meeting April 22 in Charlevoix attended by members of the council, Michael, Tom Shaw and Jim Henderson of Cheboygan, Boyle, Attorney Peter Patrick of Cheboygan and Engineer John Holland, representing McNamee, Porter and Seeley.

Shaw-Henderson was second low bidder on the project, but objects to the awarding of the contract to Clark mainly on grounds that one of Clark's subcontractors, Axtel-Hardy of Traverse City, withdrew its bid after discovering an error and Clark was allowed to "pirate" Shaw-Henderson's subcontractor, Wares and Son, also of Traverse City.

Shaw-Henderson initially filed a complaint with the federal Water Quality Office in Chicago, which was sufficient to tie up state and federal monies. Now the formal lawsuit is threatened.

In his telephone conversation with Michael, Boyle reportedly suggested that action would be stopped if the city dropped one of its deductible alternates, such as, paving, making Shaw-Henderson low bidder. The council declined to do so.

City Superintendent Thomas Hanna pointed out that the city is losing money by the delay as the bond index creeps higher. He said the index has climbed from five percent to 5.48 percent in the past month, meaning a loss to the city of $30,000 over 15 years on the planned $700,000 bond issue for the project.

In other business the council:

–Took under advisement a request by Art Reibel for year-'round docking space at the city dock for the North Shore, recently purchased by Reibel and Jack Cross from Forest Montgomery. The space presently is leased to Churn White. Reibel and Cross plan

TEN CHARLEVOIX young people joined hundreds of thousands from across the country in protesting the war in Vietnam in Washington, D.C., over the weekend. The group left Charlevoix Friday morning and returned Sunday night.

Area War Protesters March in Washington

Ten Charlevoix young people are back home this week after a whirl-wind weekend visit to Washington, D.C., to let Cong. Philip Ruppe know how they feel about the war.

They gave Ruppe petitions with about 500 signatures from residents of Charlevoix and Petoskey asking for a speedy withdrawal of troops.

But a spokesman for the group, Mrs. Al Laughlin of Antrim-st., says the congressman was "pretty indifferent to the petitions and our being there at all."

"Ruppe said he is behind the President all the way and thinks he is doing a fine job," Mrs. Laughlin said.

Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin were among the drivers in a three-car caravan which left Charlevoix and Petoskey at 6 a.m. Friday morning.

Going from Petoskey were Rick Allen and Alex Heller.

The trip was organized on the spur-of-the-moment last week and Charlevoix residents kicked in $200 to help the young people make the trip, part of a nationwide Vietnam war protest which attracted more than 250,000 persons to the capital.

Ruppe reportedly was reluctant to meet with the group at first, but finally met the local delegation at his office.

After the meeting the Charlevoix contingent joined the march to the capitol, but because of the crowds they were unable to approach with a half a mile of the speakers' platform.

Mrs. Laughlin reports that the attitude of everyone they met was friendly and sympathetic.

DONNA BENNETT and Evelyn Gee, students at North Central Michigan College and residents of East Jordan, practice hiking at a fast clip on a recent visit to Charlevoix. They and dozens of other area young people, including several from Charlevoix, will take part in a march from East Jordan to Charlevoix, via Boyne City, Saturday May 8, to raise money for charity, chiefly hunger relief around the world. Sponsors are being lined up by each participant to contribute a given amount for every mile walked.

Bay Chalet Sold To Bavarian Chef

Heinz Leutheuser, 45, chief chef at the Chalet Restaurant in Gaylord, has purchased the Bay Chalet in Charlevoix from Dave Cease.

Leutheuser says he plans to reopen the Bridge-st. restaurant about May 25. Formerly called the Sugar Bowl, the restaurant has been closed all winter while Cease worked in the kitchen at Boyne Highlands ski resort.

Although he is a native of Bavaria, Leutheuser says he won't limit his cuisine to German dishes.

"We'll specialize in excellent food of international origin," he said, "including some Cantonese specialties."

Leutheuser came to the United States from Germany 20 years ago and made his home in Grosse Pointe while working as executive chef at the Detroit Yacht Club and the Whittier Hotel. He moved to Gaylord one year ago.

He learned his trade in Europe, working in restaurants in Germany, Holland and Denmark.

Leutheuser said his wife intends to open an art gallery above the Bay Chalet after the restaurant business becomes established.

CHS Takes Track Meet

Charlevoix High School trackmen won their first meet of the season April 22, defeating Alpena Catholic Central and Gaylord.

Charlevoix rang up 74 points, compared to 57 for Alpena CC and 17 for Gaylord.

Larry Potter broke a school record for the high jump set in 1938 by "Big" Bergmann. Bergmann's record was five feet, 10 and ¾ inches. Potter jumped five feet, 11 and ¾ inches.

Allocators Get Budgets

Next meeting of the Charlevoix County Tax Allocation Board will be at 9 a.m. May 17 in the courthouse.

The new seven-man board held its organizational meeting April 19 to receive budgets of participating governmental units.

The board will decide how the county's 15-mill tax levy will be divided among the county, school districts, townships and the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District.

New member of the board this year is Oscar Stroud, Charlevoix Township supervisor, who represents townships

School Millage Hinges On Vo-Ed Budget

A final decision regarding millage needs to meet the budget for the 1971-72 school year will be made after Robert Cook, coordinator for the Vocational Education program, presents a budget for the program's needs, it was decided at a special meeting of the Charlevoix Board of Education Monday night.

The board had voted to place a 6½ mill proposal on the ballot in the June 14 election thus continuing a proposal approved three years ago that expired this year.

The amount of additional millage to compensate for monies lost to the school district by Governor Milliken's cutback in State Aid plus funds necessary to maintain the present program was discussed but no final decision made. Cook said that if the school is to meet the vocational needs of its Juniors and Seniors it will mean transporting 40 students to the Petoskey Area Center or opening new programs here. He added that the millage suggested would really place the program in a bind.

He said that the areas of commercial foods and auto mechanics seem to attract the greatest number of students and unless these needs could be met, the school is not meeting its obligation.

As president of the Charlevoix Education Association, he said that teachers were looking for a cost of living increase and that the millage proposed over and above the 6.5 mills would not meet these needs.

He was asked to meet with his Vocational Education committee and bring a realistic proposal to the board for discussion before May 10.

In other action, the board:

--Decided to offer the Building Trades house in Hampton Village for sale after appraisal to the first bona fide buyer to make an offer through the bank designated as the school's agency. The advantages of offering it to the highest bidder or through this method were discussed before it was decided to have it appraised by the F.H.A., two realtors and a bank. A price would then be placed on the property and it would be offered for sale.

–Gave permission to the Senior Class to change its plans for a class trip from New York to Cedar Point near Sandusky, Ohio. Nancy Fochtman, class president as spokesman for the class, said that costs had risen to a point where the class did not feel it

Garden Club Hopes For More Petunias

By Mrs. Ross Alexander

The Charlevoix Garden Club is urging residents to sing the praises of the petunia by planting as many as possible this year. The flower was recently adopted by the Charlevoix City Council as the city's official flower.

At its April meeting, members of the Garden Club learned that:

–They can achieve more bloom and color from a single package of petunia seeds than any other plant.

–Petunias are easy to care for and last well into the fall after cold weather sets in.

She said women have been the traditional family gardeners since the days of early Egypt. In England, women are judged by the tidiness of their cottage dooryards and women of most nationalities have traditionally maintained some kind of garden.

Mrs. Stenman said the first book on gardening published in America was written by a woman–Mrs. Martha Logan of Charlestown, S.C. Her book appeared in 1774. Mrs. Logan was an avid gardener and sold seeds and plantings.

Even one empress of China was so fond of chrysanthemums that she tended them herself.

Mrs. Pearl Rowe spoke on "The Pursuit of the Rainbow through the Iris." She said the iris is one of the oldest cultivated garden flowers and is sometimes called "the poor man's orchid." Like petunias, they require very little care and thrive on decayed compost and bonemeal.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Carolyn Klooster on Meadow Lane May 11.

MISS JANE Wimmer has been selected delegate and Miss Christy Potter alternate to Girls' State, to be held at Eastern Michigan University in June.

Miss Jane Wimmer Girls' State Delegate

By Beth Genett

Miss Jane Wimmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wimmer of 821 State St., has been named delegate to the American Legion Girl's State to be held at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti during the week of June 13 through 20.

The announcement was made by Mrs. George Shearer, president of the Auxiliary of Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226, and by Mrs. Ray Wood, chairman of the selection committee.

Jane is 17 and a Junior at Charlevoix High School. To qualify the girl chosen must be outstanding in leadership, scholastic ability, consideration of others, have a pleasing personality, and a high regard for Americanism. She also must be approved by the principal and two teachers of the local High School.

More than 500 girls from throughout the State are selected to attend the convention which centers on educational study of governmental recognition and organization. Miss Wimmer will travel to the meeting with other girls from the immediate area, with funds provided by each Auxiliary, including all costs for transportation, physical examination, food and lodging and spending money.

During the convention two girls are chosen 'Governors' to represent the state of Michigan at the National Convention to be held at Washington, D.C., later in the year.

The girls from each state are elected at each State meeting to attend.

Miss Christy Potter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Potter, who also met all the qualifications, will serve as alternate if Miss Wimmer is unable to attend.

Royal.

Every inch a Chrysler. Yet with Royal, the deal starts $112 less than Newport, previously our lowest-priced series.

The Royal is just as big as our most luxurious New Yorker. And bigger than its competition — Buick LeSabre and Olds Delta 88 Outside and in.

Royal's 360 V-8 delivers more power, too. Power for freeway cruising without strain. Power for safe passing. All on regular gas.

Royal also gives you a better suspension system: torsion bars instead of coil springs.

The ride is firmer. More controlled.

On a trip to the supermarket, you might not notice the difference. On a quick expressway lane change or a tight turn, you surely will.

Outside of Chrysler products, only two American cars have torsion bars — Cadillac Eldorado and Oldsmobile Toronado.

Another difference: Royal's body is welded into a single solid Unibody. It's the strongest way to build a car. And there are no body bolts to work free and rattle.

Buick and Olds use the old body-bolted-to-frame technique.

Yet for all this extra value, Royal is priced just about the same as LeSabre and Delta 88 Royal. With everything you expect of a Chrysler. At a price you don't.

Make two people happy with an unexpected call.

There's a little love out there . . . for you. Love you experience all too infrequently.
A birthday card. An occasional letter. The Christmas phone call. Why not break the pattern, with an unexpected call? You'll make two people happy . . . someone you love, and you.

Another nice thing. If you talk for one minute, you pay for one minute. Not three. And, as always, there's no quicker or more personal way to say "I love you"—or even "I like you an awful lot"—than by phone. So if you want to make two people happy . . . don't hesitate to call!

Mack, Drost Swap Motel, Candy Shop

Located at 1938 Hollywood Blvd., the candy shop specializes in all types of hand-made candies and frozen custard.

Drost and his wife, Ann, have sold their two other candy stores in Florida and plan to spend most of their time in Charlevoix running the motel.

"We'll go to Florida in the winter, but we aren't going to work down there," he said.

A team of visiting laymen, headed by Joseph Charles of North Liberty, Ind., will conduct a Lay Witness Mission this weekend at the United Methodist Church, according to Raymond Carr, local lay leader.

The program will start with a family potluck supper at 6:30 p.m. Friday, April 23, after which the weekend agenda for youth and adult groups will be decided.

Saturday morning will be devoted to small, informal group discussions in private homes followed by luncheon at the church. A second potluck supper is planned for Saturday evening.

Youth leaders will take part in the church school classes at 9:45 on Sunday morning and Charles will deliver the message at the 11 o'clock worship service.

A farewell luncheon will be held at the church for Mission leaders and the congregation, and at 6:30 p.m. the weekend activities will conclude with an evaluation session.

CHAMBER

Sunnyside-Up

By TOM MERTA
Chamber of Commerce Manager

The Waterfront Art Fair Committee in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce has sent out applications for our 13th Annual Exhibition. This year applicants will be kept to 200 entries. In limiting the entries, confusion, over-crowdedness and artists complaints should be eliminated.

The Hobbycraft Show Committee met last Wednesday, April 14. Plans are underway now to make this 3rd annual affair the largest, most organized Hobbycraft show yet. We have sent out over 90 applications and are looking forward to expanding its' exhibitors even further. The deadline for applications is June 1, 1971.

If you have any questions or wish to enter either show write, call or stop in at the Chamber of Commerce office.

Did you know that we are planning a Spring Ball? Plans are not definite, but it should be on or around June. So plan on being in Charlevoix for this fun evening. I will announce the exact date and details as soon as they are available.

The Chamber of Commerce "Vacationland Tabloid" is in the process of being put together, I again urge every business in town to be represented in it. We'll be printing and distributing over 25,000 of these this year!

It looks like we're going to have a new business in town... it's going to be an "Old Fashioned Ice Cream Parlour."

As I look out of my office, overlooking Round Lake, I can definitely understand why we say, "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

Library Notes

Recently a book critic recommended a current title by saying: "Great!...Recommended for the majority!" There are not too many books that fall into this category. Men generally prefer who-dunits or adventure stories or tales of survival. The ladies, of course, will read any book at all, on any subject providing it's about love. In spite of this, we have selected some new titles which, we feel, will be entertaining to the great majority.

"Calico Palace" by Gwen Bristow earns top billing as a new book which will appeal to everyone. The author has already won laurels for "Jubilee Trail", "Celia Garth" and "This Side of Glory." Her new book is about the gold rush in California, and the reader will have difficulty picking a favorite character. It is fast-paced and just about the best yarn to come along in many months.

"The Man In the Yellow Raft" is by C.S. Forester, and that, in itself, is enough to recommend it to every man who loves a good book. The ladies will enjoy it because the book is a collection of eight of Forester's best stories. Some of them are extremely funny and light-hearted; others have enough top suspense and interest to captivate any reader. All of the stories take place aboard the Boon, a U.S. destroyer, active during World War II. The first story, "The Man in the Yellow Raft", which is also the title of the book, is one you won't soon forget.

"Jamie," by Jack Bennett, is an exciting and moving novel of a boy's adventure in search of revenge. Anyone who remembers the immortal "Yearling, will find this a novel to take its place beside that great classic. Jamie Carson is a 12-year-old growing up on a South African farm. His life is a paradise. He has his dog, his horse and his gun. He has a warm relationship with his parents, but suddenly life on the farm turns into a nightmare, and Jamie's life is thrown toward the brink of destruction. This is a quiet, simple story that sweeps the reader along, and it is especially compelling because of the clear, unsentimental manner in which Jack Bennett writes. This one is definitely for the majority!

"Papa La-Bas" by John Dickson is a novel of old New Orleans. The author has beautifully captured the strange, lush country and the brawling city that was New Orleans one hundred years ago. From manor house to docks to byways to small rooms filled with dark magic, the story races on, with swirls of crinoline, the rumble of wheels and an occasional pistol or two. This is a slim volumn with less than 300 entertaining pages.

Fluoride Program Set May 21 - June 1

The summer topical fluoride program will be held in Charlevoix at the Charlevoix Library from May 21 to June 1, according to Mrs. W.F. Wilson, chairman of the Charlevoix Public School's topical fluoride committee which sponsors the program in cooperation with District Health Department No. 3 and the Michigan Department of Public Health.

According to Mrs. Wilson, 83 children have enrolled in the program. The procedure consists of four visits to the clinic. The child's teeth are cleansed on the first visit and a fluoride solution is applied directly to the surfaces of the teeth. The fluoride application is then repeated during the three succeeding visits. This technique has been shown to reduce tooth decay by about forty percent compared to the sixty to sixty-five percent reduction obtained with fluoridated water, she said.

In addition to providing protectiong against cavities, the program offers a valuable dental experience for children with no discomfort. Dental health education by the clinic personnel is an important part of the program Mrs. Wilson said.

Parents of children enrolled in the program will receive appointment cards about two weeks prior to their children's first appointment.

In addition to the clinic in Charlevoix, about 40,000 children will be receiving fluoride applications this summer in 200 similar clinics throughout the state. Michigan.

$700,000 on Tap For Home Loans

Secretary of Agriculture Clifford M. Hardin has announced that the Farmers Home Administration rural housing program level has been increased to $1.47 billion for this year.

Secretary Hardin stated it is now clear that addition federal financing of rural housing is needed to supplement the private sector funds moving into rural areas for low-income families.

A recent survey shows that we may be experiencing a slow down in the rate of home building in rural areas and that there is a need for a high level of federal financing.

Eligible families are those which are unable to obtain adequate housing credit from other sources.

The Bellaire Office, which serves Antrim, Charlevoix and Otsego Counties, has been informed that is has in excess of $700,000 in mortgage money available until June, 1971.

Any inquiries may be made in the Bellaire office, Phone 616-533-8415; or every Friday morning between 10 a.m. and noon in the Gaylord ASCS Office, Phone area 517-732-4166 or every Friday afternoon between 2 and 4 p.m. in the Cooperative Extension Office.

Cancer Crusade Deserves Support

The American Cancer Society's annual crusade for funds is under way in Charlevoix County and we hope you will give generously.

The money will be used not only for all-important research into the cause and cure of the disease but also will be used to assist those already afflicted.

Some of the money will be spent to spread the word on what has already been accomplished in the field of cancer control.

And the good news is that many types of cancer can be cured---if you know the warning signals and seek medical attention promptly.

Cancer is no respecter of persons. The young are susceptible as well as the old. The robust are struck down as readily as their more fragile brothers and sisters.

The slogan of this year's Cancer Crusade is "Wipe Out Cancer in Your Lifetime."

To make this dream come true, dig deep when your neighborhood Cancer Crusader calls on you for a contribution.

And if for some reason you are missed, mail your donation directly to Mrs. Albert Seger, sr., County Chairman, 200 E. Hurlbut, Charlevoix; or Mrs. Dorothy Dixon, Crusade Treasurer, First State Bank, Charlevoix.

When the final cure for cancer is found--and it will be--it will be nice to look back and remember that you helped.

Can Protests Change Course of History?

We really don't know.

But we do know that the veterans' march in Washington, D. C., last week, followed by the students' march over the weekend called more attention to the war in Vietnam than it has received since the last series of "war moratoriums" staged in the fall of 1969.

Some observers claim such demonstrations have been responsible for changing many former congressional hawks into doves so far as the war in Vietnam is concerned.

Others believe the protesters are butting their heads against a brick wall of official indifference.

Historians undoubtedly will have much to say about the internal turmoil stemming from the war, but only time will tell whether the protesters have changed the course of American and Vietnamese history.

But from here it appears that it is better to travel to Washington and sound-off than to sit at home and do nothing.

The Courier tips its masthead to Mr. and Mrs. Al Laughlin, C. J. (Smokey) Kiffer, Paul Kroll, Jim Denny, Mike Etienne, Rindy Luedke, Rick Allen, Mike Bergmann, Peggy Falting, Jerry Buttliere, Jerry Dohn and Barb Novotny who made the long trip to Washington over the weekend to add their voices to the rising clamor for a withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam.

By the way, when was the last time you wrote your congressman?

Kids Still Concerned About Environment

Just when we were starting to think that Earth Day, as it was celebrated last year, was a one-shot deal, along come a group of Charlevoix High School and Middle School students to show that interest in improving the environment is still very much alive, at least among the younger set.

The students met after school at the Middle School last Wednesday and Thursday to pick up leaves and other refuse throughout the city.

City trucks were donated to haul the debris away and adults volunteered as drivers.

As a result, the city looked spiffier before Friday's snowstorm that it has all winter.

With such interest in the environment developing among our young people, Charlevoix will continue to be "Charlevoix the Beautiful" for a good many years to come.

Child in Womb Human, Bishop Tells His Flock

Bishop Joseph Breitenbeck, Roman Catholic Bishop of the 29-county diocese of Grand Rapids, including Charlevoix County, issued an official letter to his people on abortion. The letter was read at all masses on Sunday, April 25. Following is the text of the letter:

Dear Members of the Diocese of Grand Rapids,

I speak to you on a matter of grave import – the proposal in our State Legislature to liberalize the laws against abortion.

There can be no doubt as to our moral teaching on this matter. It is clearly expressed in a recent statement of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops:

"The child in the womb is human. Abortion is an unjst destruction of a human life and morally this is murder. Neither the expectant mother nor society has a right to destroy this life."

We all have the obligation to safeguard life.

An attempt to destroy life by abortion at any time after conception is a serious violation of the rights of an unborn and defenseless child. A fetus is not simply "a potential human being, but a human being with potential."

Our opposition to abortion is not just a "Catholic" position, but a moral position. Our conviction arises from the consideration of the sacredness of human life. The value we place on life cannot be determined by emotional reasons but by sound moral principles.

We Catholics have a grave obligation, not only to oppose personally the legal gambits that would liberalize abortion, but to make every effort to bring our fellow citizens to a right view of this matter. On this "DDF Sunday" – when our concern is directed to the material needs of our Diocese, we cannot ignore the moral issue that confronts us.

The obligation rests with each of you to make your position clear on this matter and, as a citizen, to make it effectively known to those who represent you in the legislature. Our Diocesan Council of Catholic Women is working with priests and parishioners to take effective action against the proposed legislation. I ask your earnest cooperation to create a morally acceptable climate in regard to this issue throughout our State.

Cordially,
Joseph M. Breitenbeck
Bishop of Grand Rapids

Only Way To End War Is Win It

Charlevoix Courier
Charlevoix, Mich.

Dear Editor:

For more than nine years American forces have been committed to battle in Vietnam. We have nearly half a million troops supporting that effort, and we are spending over two billion dollars per month to continue the war there. Yet, in all that time we have failed to stop North Vietnam, a country that is smaller than our own state of Missouri, with practically no industry of its own, and a population of only 17 million people. Something is very seriously wrong here.

It is a shame for a nation as great as the United States to bow down to the small country of North Vietnam. Yet, despite the fact that the United States is the greatest industrial giant in the history of man, defective equipment and a shortage of badly needed supplies had consistently plagued our troops in Vietnam since 1961. However, we give foreign aid to the Communist countries which in turn hand it over to the very forces that are seeking to destroy us.

Our men need a purpose for which to fight over there in those hot, sticky jungles. That purpose must be a complete victory in Vietnam. We owe it to ourselves to win so that we maintain our national honor. The United States is the greatest nation, and it must stay that way. We cannot continue a so-called war against such a minute country. We must set our goal to win this war.

It is time for the public to demand: Let's stop all aid to our Communist enemies, now! It is time to insist: Let's win this war and bring our boys home!

While our brave men die, we must do something here at home. What is there to stop us from victory? Romans 8:31 says, "If God be for us, who can be against us." It is time for us to get involved. It is time for a flood of letters, petitions, telephone calls, and telegrams to every politician, every source of news media, and every person of influence in the United States. It is time for every citizen of this great nation of ours to band together and go to the great Patriots' March for Victory in Washington, D.C., on May 8. With God's help I'll be there, and every able-bodied American should. There is no substitute for victory in Vietnam.

I stand with General Curtis E. LeMay, an outspoken former Air Force Chief of Staff, in saying: "The way to end the war in Vietnam is to win it!" America is the "land of the free, and the home of the brave"; let's keep it that way! For bus reservations or more information, call or write me.

Sincerely,
Judy Friske

Same Rules Should Apply To Everyone

Dear Mr. Clock:

Many of the people who are upset by the Calley court-martial verdict are those who subscribe to the premise that a national commander-in-chief has the right to designate a foreign regime as an enemy, and then the national military establishment has the right to do anything that it considers necessary to defeat that regime.

Generally they are also the first people to deny the same license to foreign leaders and their military establishments.

After World War II the Allies established some elementary rules to protect civilians from political and military authorities, and applied those rules retroactively against the German and Japanese authorities. We should have insisted that those rules be applied to both North and South Vietnamese leaders equally. Since the United States government involved itself in the conflict those rules should apply to American participants as well.

If we were really trying to promote self-determination in Vietnam we should have advocated a referendum in all of Vietnam to determine:

1. If the Vietnamese wanted one or two Vietnams.

2. If the Vietnamese wanted to be ruled by the Hanoi government, the Saigon government, both governments, or neither government.

To justify our murdering, bombing, burning, and starving millions of Orientals on the grounds that they have no respect for human life while we are the greatest humanitarians in the world is the most flagrant hypocrisy imaginable.

The only justification for the existence of national political and military establishments is to serve and protect their citizens. When they cannot perform this function they should cease to exist as sovereign establishments.

The present irresponsibility of national political and military leaders, collectively, and the lethal capacity of the weapons at their disposal indicates that this situation has long since been reached.

Ray E. Peltz

Clockwise Let's Get Out

How much more of the war in Indochina can the American people stand without coming apart at the seams, physically as well as emotionally?

No one knows, of course, but it appears that the breaking point is awfully close.

A case in point is the recent veterans' war protest demonstration in the nation's capital last week, followed by the student protest march over the weekend.

It cut me up pretty badly to see American veterans hurling handfuls of medals and campaign ribbons on the capitol steps.

I didn't like it one bit when I heard that the Viet Cong flag was paraded up Pennsylvania Avenue.

But the deepest cut of all was to learn that President Nixon conveniently absented himself from the White House during the demonstrations, tangible evidence of his unwillingness to share the nation's anguish over the continuing, senseless slaughter in Vietnam.

The extreme measures taken by protesters in the latest assault on the capitol are a good sign that the breaking point is dangerously close and that it would behoove the President and Congress to move swiftly to end the war in an effort to save the American people from themselves. I only hope it is not too late.

The 10-year-old war in Vietnam has claimed almost 50,000 American lives and left hundreds of thousands wounded, some of them maimed for life. And the war is no closer to a successful conclusion today than it was a decade ago.

Unfortunately, President Nixon has said that he will not be the first American president to preside at a defeat on the battleground. Although he has made elaborate long-range plans for the gradual withdrawal of American troops and the so-called "Vietnamization" of the war, we are afraid he is going to have to swallow his pride and end our involvement in the conflict post-haste if the United States is going to survive as a nation.

And time is running out.

Aside from the dreadful carnage taking place in Vietnam, I think the war poses a far more serious problem at home which the President and Congress should consider very carefully.

The American people have become so sick of the Vietnam war that it is unlikely at this point that they would be willing to take up arms again in any conflict, even if the United States itself were threatened directly by an aggressor nation.

We have lost so many men in Korea and Vietnam and we have wasted so much of our substance fighting wars for other countries, that the very idea of another armed conflict in the near future is anathema to most of us. And our willingness to fight appears to be diminishing with every passing day.

While our two greatest potential enemies — Russia and Red China — are enjoying an unprecedented period of peace and prosperity, the United States limps along on a wartime footing year after year, squandering men and materials in an Asian sinkhole that has no bottom.

I, for one, have difficulty in believing that President Nixon is continuing the war simply because he doesn't want history to remember him as the first American President to lose a war. Certainly there is more humanity in him than that. And more good common sense.

Can he possibly hold President Thieu and Vice President Ky in such high regard as statesmen that he wants to inflict their own particular brand of tyranny on the whole of Vietnam? It is doubtful.

Can he possibly believe that the United States is "helping" the South Vietnamese by defoliating their countryside, destroying their villages and murdering their women and children? Doubtful again.

Does he really feel that the people of South Vietnam would be worse off under any form of government than they are today, with American aircraft spewing destruction over the land and American artillery making rice pudding out of their paddies? Highly unlikely.

Then why does the war continue?

Frankly, I think that President Nixon is afraid to end it.

He is afraid of the economic consequences of shifting from a wartime economy to a peacetime economy.

He does not want to see hundreds of thousands of ex-servicemen forced into an already overcrowded job market.

He doesn't want to listen to the anguished wail of arms manufacturers and other military suppliers when their standing orders are cancelled.

Shamefully, it appears to be a matter of economics, sheer economics — lives and dollars weighed on the same scales.

Admittedly, we will experience some economic upsets when the war ends. But we are still a strong nation, economically if not morally.

We are in a far better position to deal with any economic reverses we may encounter at the end of the war than with the growing moral dilemma that has engulfed us because of it.

Church Is Improving

By JIM FITZGERALD

This man said maybe God doesn't exist in a human form, maybe He's a mass of electricity.

I nudged my wife and whispered: "Is our Edison bill paid?"

Another man said he believed in God OK but he had a hang-up on Jesus Christ. The resurrection is a lot of malarkey to him and Easter is just another Sunday except he is always careful to wear a clean shirt to church.

A third man said maybe God is dead but did it really make any difference?

And a young woman said she talked to God regularly, usually at home.

This was not a bunch of heretics sounding off in the corner saloon. These people were standing up and sounding off during Easter services in my favorite church. I was there for the usual cebgious reasons: my daughter was singing "Everything Is Beautiful" but things wouldn't have been so beautiful for me if I hadn't shown up to hear her.

Veteran readers of this weekly nonsense may recall it was in 1965 that I wrote a column titled "My Church Is Inside." It was in response to a reader who asked why I didn't go to church every Sunday. I told him. I said I was turned off by preachers who were constantly quoting the Bible and counting heads and raising funds to build magnificent, tax-free churches that were really country clubs. I said too many preachers were speechless on the real moral issues–such as racial injustice–and too many congregations refused to listen to any minister who dared promote true Christianity as it was taught by Jesus Christ.

This is no attempt to revive that old hassle. Reader response at the time established firmly that I am either a sacrilegious sap or a fine fellow, take your pick, that's what makes the world go 'round. Some people think preachers should stick to their pulpits. My gang thinks preachers should go to wherever the good fight needs fighting, be it city hall or the county jail; even if it means cancelling the 7 p.m. prayer meeting, for goodness sake. To each his own, as it is tattooed over my indigestion.

But, 6 years later, I would be remiss if I didn't admit that things are looking better as judged by the standards of a guy whose "church is inside."

My favorite church (organized) is constantly taking kids to visit other churches, Jewish, Quaker, Christian Science–the whole list. They also visit ghettos and give deprived children some love.

Some local congregations hold joint services, Catholic and Protestant. The most splendid sight I've seen in years is Catholic priests and nuns in a Protestant church, singing loudly. It made my skin prickel and I felt good. When I was a kid, a bolt of lightning would have flattened the church.

There was a Sunday when a fine tenor stood up in the choir loft and sang "What's It All About, Alfie?" from the risque move of the same name. There was a black visitor from a Detroit slum. His grammar was ragged but his story was about how some lost boys needed finding. Everyone listened hard–and then gave him some help.

And then there was Easter when the pastor sat in the congregation and let the teenagers run the service. And the kids invited the congregation to give their own sermons. And that man made me wonder about my Edison bill.

Excuse me, Pastor, but it was all so much more meaningful than the scripture readings which usually set me to eyeing the pretty girl across the aisle.

Onward and Upward and Amen.

Says Calley Responsible For Actions

E. J. Wulfman, R-3, Charlevoix, joins the discussion of Lt. William Calley's court-martial and conviction for his role in the My Lai massacre. His contribution is a question submitted to the Rt. Rev. Richard S. Emrich, Episcopal Bishop of Michigan, and Bishop Emrich's answer, which appeared in the Detroit News Wednesday, April 21, 1971:

QUESTION: A great deal of feeling has been aroused over the condemnation of Lt. Calley. It seems to me that once again this war is dividing the nation in a terrible way. Some people say that the government, not Calley, should be condemned and others say that we should have some understanding of how soldiers act under the pressures of battle. Is there some principle in all this emotion that can unite us?

ANSWER: Dear G. H.: I agree that it is a very complicated matter, with the emotions over the war making quiet reason very difficult. Here, I think, is one issue that can unite us:

When Lt. Calley was convicted after a long trial, the principle was affirmed that men (and that means all of us) are responsible for our actions even under the pressures of war. It is not necessary to kill babies, old men and women. If this principle prevails, it affirms the moral responsibility of all men, holds us up to our highest and makes it less easy for men to commit acts of brutality in the future.

If, on the other hand, we excuse Calley, rob him of human responsibility and argue that he was only a pawn of the circumstances, then we make all brutality easier for all men in the future. The principle to discuss, then, is this: Do you believe that men are responsible and, therefore, accountable for their actions?

If we deny that principle, we must be willing to take the consequences. At that level, it is a very serious matter that bears upon all of our lives

Make Bees Look Like Loafers

The humble earthworm makes the busy bee look like a loafer.

The remarkable worm works so hard and so well that it could justly claim to be man's best friend.

No less a scientist than Charles Darwin wrote: "It may be doubted if there are any other animals which have played such an important part in the history of the world as these lowly organized creatures."

As a soil creator, conditioner, and preserver, the earthworm has no rivals, the National Geographic Society says.

Eats Weight Daily

Tirelessly boring through the ground, an earthworm eats its weight in organic matter and mineral soil every 24 hours. It takes in leaves, grass, stems, dead insects and animals, larvae, and the like along with subsoil.

All of this material passes through the worm's formidable digestive system, which includes a muscular gizzard where soil is throughly ground. The residue is deposited in the familiar mounds called "castings."

These castings actually are enormously rich topsoil. Compared to the surrounding earth, castings contain five times as much nitrogen, seven times as much phosphorus, eleven times as much potash, and three times as much magnesium–in a form that plants can readily use.

Many Functions

More than 1,750,000 earthworms may churn through one acre of rich farmland, producing as much as 40 tons of topsoil every year. Their tunnels and root growth, allow air to penetrate underground, and improve drainage, thus preventing erosion.

Besides farmers and fishermen–who have found angelworms good bait for centuries–the earthworm aids archeologists. Their ceaseless activities over the centuries gradually have helped to cover and preserve ancient cities.

A few years ago, worms even pointed the way to a lost city. An archeologist searching for an ancient Roman city outside Vienna saw bits of brightly colored soil among worm castings. Analysis showed the bits to be from Roman frescoes. The site was excavated, and the remains of Roman buildings emerged from a thick layer of humus.

Lots of Muscle

The common earthworm (Lumbricus terrestris) comes equipped with tiny clusters of bristles on each segment. The bristles serve as hooks as the worm extends and shortens its body and so propels itself.

For its size, an earthworm is amazingly strong. A worm weighing just one-thirtieth of an ounce can move a two-ounce stone–60 times its own weight.

Lacking lungs, the earthworm breathes through its skin. It can live for months submerged in water without food, but a heavy rain may force it from its burrow because water filtered through soil contains little oxygen. Then the ground surface may look as if it had been "raining worms."

Curiously, in spite of the earthworm's omnivorous appetite, it does have a sense of taste. In a laboratory, worms will pass up cabbage if celery is offered and reject celery if carrot leaves are available.

U.S. Funds OK'd For Waste Plant

Mayor Andrew Essenburg jr. received word April 29 that the federal government has approved funds for Charlevoix's proposed waste water treatment plant, one of the final roadblocks before construction of the $1,714,605 facility can begin on the Lake Michigan shore between Boulder Park and the Medusa Cement Co. plant.

The federal action not only assures Charlevoix of federal participation in the project but also clears the way for the approval of state funds, which together will finance 55 percent of the project.

The move also weakens the stand of Shaw-Henderson Inc. of Cheboygan which had threatened legal action to halt the project on grounds that the city erred in awarding the general construction contract to Clark Construction of Lansing, the low bidder.

Shaw-Henderson's attorney, Charles Boyle of Chicago, told Charlevoix City Attorney John Michael on Monday that his client intended to file suit charging irregularities in the Clark bid. The Cheboygan firm had claimed that one of Clark's subcontractors had withdrawn after the bids were opened and that Clark has been permitted to "pirate" Shaw-Henderson's piping contractor, Wares and Son of Traverse City.

However, no official word of the threatened lawsuit has been received by the city, according to City Superintendent Thomas Hanna.

The federal share of the project, five percent, had been tentatively set at $64,250, based on estimated construction costs of $1,500,000. However, the federal grant probably will be higher after the bids came in almost $215,000 over the original estimate.

Likewise, the state's share of the project, 50 percent, was originally figured at $642,500 but will probably be increased proportionately.

Furthermore, the city stands a good chance of picking up additional federal monies for sewage plant construction, as have other communities in the area.

The balance of the project will be raised locally through a $700,000 general obligation bond issue and other city revenues.

The Michigan Municipal Finance Commission was to meet Tuesday to approve the bond issue. City fathers expect approval to be almost automatic.

After approval, the bonds will be advertised May 12 and go on sale May 19, Hanna said.

The project involves four major contracts: Clark Construction, general con-

Rainbows Are Biting

THIS PERFECT specimen of a rainbow trout was caught off the south pierhead at Charlevoix April 29 by Fred Looze, 108 Palmer-st. The fish weighed 14 pounds and was 33 inches long.

Catches 14-Lb. Rainbow Off South Pierhead

He strolled out on the south pierhead about 8 a.m. armed with his light fishing tackle and six pound test line to see if the fish were biting.

His first cast into the channel brought in a 14-pound rainbow (steelhead) trout that bent the pole almost double.

Looze hadn't even brought a landing net with him, but managed to keep the trout hooked on his Little Cleo for 15 minutes until employes at the state Fish Hatchery nearby noticed his predicament and rushed to his aid with a net.

The trout measured 33 inches long and was a perfect specimen, with nary a lamprey scar to mar its flanks.

Looze's main worry was what he and his wife would do with so much fish.

He thought maybe he'd have it mounted.

Meet James Mielke, City's Newest Merchant

Charlevoix's newest business – The Park Place – opened Saturday in the Hogan Building at the corner of Bridge-st. and Park-ave.

Specializing in books, greeting cards, gift wrapping, records, stereos, stereo tapes and art supplies, the shop is owned by Jim Mielke, a former resident of Kalamazoo who has had his heart set on moving to northern Michigan ever since he and his family began vacationing in the area several years ago.

The shop fills the last vacancy in the Hogan Building. Other units are occupied by Ski and Shore Properties, The Little Shop Around the Corner and Breakthrough.

Mielke has devoted the entire second floor of the shop to books, including 2,000 titles in paperbook and a wide selection of hard-covers, including reference and children's books.

He carries the Norcross line of greeting cards, making him Norcross' northernmost account in Michigan.

In addition to photo supplies, The Park Place offers film processing. The art supply department is one of the best equipped in northern Michigan, with stocks of acrylics, watercolors and oils; brushes, canvas and paper.

Mielke also is the only merchant in Charlevoix handling sales of Mrs. Earl Young's colorful map of northwestern Michigan. Original prints of the map, which has been up-dated, have long been collector's items among residents and visitors to northern Michigan.

A native of Sandusky, Ohio, and a graduate of the University of Ohio at Columbus, Mielke was marketing manager for the Rob-Roy Division of Vecta Group, Inc., in Kalamazoo

East Jordan-Charlevoix Hike to Help Charities

More than 700 Charlevoix County young people, including several from Charlevoix, will take part in northern Michigan's first "Walk for Development" Saturday, May 8, from East Jordan to Charlevoix, via Boyne City.

The young people hope to raise money for charity, including overseas hunger relief.

The day's activities will start at 7 a.m. with a rally at Boswell Field in East Jordan, with the march itself starting about 9 a.m.

The marchers will walk to Boyne City via Deer Lake-rd., then west along the Lake Charlevoix shore to Ironton where they will cross the South Arm on the ferry, continuing west to Charlevoix.

The marchers are seeking individual pledges ranging from a penny to 50 cents or more a mile for every mile they complete of the 30-mile route.

The money raised will go to the Community Chest Nurses' Fund, Charlevoix County Big Brothers, a camp for the children of migrant workers in Macomb County, "Operation Boot Strap" in Tanzania, Africa, Children's Medical Relief and the "Freedom From Hunger" fund.

Other walks have been scheduled the same day in Battle Creek, Kalamazoo and Detroit.

'Kissing Disease' Hits 40 in Schools

The kissing disease is back.

Dr. Robert S. Libke, health officer for District Health Dept. No. 3, reported Monday that about 40 cases of infectious mononucleosis have been reported by Charlevoix physicians, mostly among High School students, with some cases in the Middle School.

Dr. Libke says the disease can be spread by a practice common among high school students, namely dipping toothpicks into a vial of cinnamon oil and then sucking them for the flavor. Repeated dippings spread the disease among students using the same vial of oil.

The disease can also be spready by kissing, hence the popular nick-name.

Dr. Libke urges parents to warn their youngsters against dipping toothpicks and to avoid contact with other youngsters with known cases of "mono."

The disease is characterized by fatigue, sore throat, a mild temperature, headache, muscle ache and all of the symptoms that ordinarily

CHS Seniors Plan for Future

Dr. William Ratigan, CHS counselor, reports that about 31 percent of the senior class plans to attend four-year colleges or universities.

Michigan State University is the most popular among the new grads, with 14 or 15 indicating it as their first choice.

Four each plan to attend Central Michigan University, Northern Michigan University and Ferris State College, and one each will go to Lake Superior State College, Grand Valley State College, the University of Michigan and Evangel College in Springfield, Mo.

About 26 percent of the senior class will attend junior or community colleges, with the majority (21) planning to enroll at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey.

Three plan to attend Lansing Community College; two Davenport Business College in Grand Rapids; and one or two will enroll at Northwestern Michigan College in Traverse City. At least one student has indicated he will attend Gogebic Community College at Ironwood in the Upper Peninsula.

The college-bound students make up about 56 percent of the senior class, Dr. Ratigan says. A substantial number of these will be enrolled in programs that used to be associated largely with so-called trade or technical schools, rather than colleges, like programs for auto mechanics.

Dr. Ratigan points out that Charlevoix graduates have a high average of completing such programs, about 80 percent.

However, he says it is becoming more difficult to chart graduates progress through the levels of higher education because "today's college students don't follow the lock-step, straight jacket pattern of former years."

"They enter college perhaps a year after graduation, deciding to work or travel meanwhile," Dr. Ratigan says. "Young men may decide to complete their military obligation and then attend college on the GI Bill. Young women may marry and raise families in between college attendance."

"The so-called dropout principle does not really apply to campus decisions," he reports, since so many students start college, withdraw to work, travel or raise a family, and then resume their education.

Dr. Ratigan said it is surprising how many CHS graduates who received their diplomas five, 10 or even 20 years ago write to the school asking that transcripts of their grades be sent to various colleges.

"A growing number of graduates and non-graduates who entered the world of work or took short-courses are now applying for further education, both technical and professional," Dr. Ratigan says.

Just under seven percent of the present graduating class have plans to enter technical schools, including the Petoskey Beauty Academy, Lansing Business University, IT & T, Minnesota Business School and a nursing school.

What kinds of work do the 1971 graduates intend to pursue?

Medical services have attracted the largest number, including five prospective registered nurses, three pre-veterinarians, one or two medical technologists, a pharmacist and a medical assistant.

In the business field, eight seniors have selected secretarial programs, including legal and private secretarial work; two intend to become certified public accountants and others have opted for general office work, business management, merchandising, retailing and bookkeeping.

In service occupations, two or three have elected to become beauty operators, two, cooks; three, social workers; two, receptionists; two, carpenters; a policewoman, civil aviation worker, turf grass manager, a salesgirl and — believe it or not ... a professional poodle clipper. Ten or 12 have not made career choices and will enter colleges as liberal arts majors while they look around.

In the mechanical field, CHS has three potential auto mechanics, a diesel mechanic, a small engine mechanic and a machinist.

In the technical field are three computer programmers, a key punch operator, two electronics technicians, an air conditioner technician, a welder, an electrician, an architectural draftsman, a construction worker, a professional diver and one or two farmers.

Six seniors are interested in the field of communication arts, including journalism, writing, speech, and allied fields. One plans to work at another job while writing short stories.

In other professional fields, 11 seniors plan to become teachers, two intend to study psychology and others plan to enter the areas of civil and electrical engineering, mathematics, law and conservation.

Four seniors already are housewives, Dr. Ratigan reports, "and others are looking forward to that occupation as one of the career choices made sooner or later by most females in our society, either before or after choosing other occupations in the world of work."

A number of seniors plan to get their post-graduate training in the armed forces, while others are hoping for on-the-job training as civilians.

About nine seniors have no immediate plans to settle down to any one occupational specialty.

"Most of them plan to travel and look around before committing themselves to any set career pattern in today's culture," Dr. Ratigan concluded.

Honor Society Initiates Members

The National Honor Society, Ellsworth Chapter, initiated its new members on Wednesday, April 21, in ceremonies in the high school cafeteria.

About 40 guests, primarily parents of the members, were welcomed to the ceremony by Patti Ruis, chairman. Dennis Drenth followed with a history of the society. Diane Best, Noreen DeGroot, Colleen Clark, and Pat Drenth enacted a candle ceremony as they described the four qualities that members are judged by: scholarship, character, leadership, and service.

Jake Drenth introduced the speaker for the evening, the Rev. Hewitt Johnston, pastor of Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix.

Rev. Johnston stressed that one should take full advantage of our God-given talents. Growth should be in three areas as youth works for success. First, for economic rewards. This shouldn't be ignored with present day philosophies. Second, for political participation. The future will be determined today's youth. Third one should aim for theological development to serve our fellow men. There is much to be done in human relations. All should be done with the help of God.

William Vescolani, principal, told of the society's place in the school, and mentioned that membership is an honor that can be lost if standards are not maintained.

The Honor Society now consists of 13 members: Dennis Drenth, Judy Friske, Patti Ruis, seniors; Pat Drenth, Jake Drenth, Noreen DeGroot, Diane Best and Colleen Clark, juniors; Darla Best, Joy Drenth, Barb Vandenberg, Debbie Wallace and Tim Wynsma, sophomores, who are provisional members.

At the conclusion of the meeting open faced sandwiches, cake, punch and coffee were served from a table centered with a flower arrangement in blue and gold, the society's colors, which was furnished by Mrs. Ikens, society advisor.

Charlevoix Hospital

The following patients were admitted to Charlevoix Hospital:

Library Notes

Some Books Satisfy Almost Everybody

Some of the new books which will greet you the next time you come to the Library will include:

"Amalie's Story" by Julie McDonald, the story of a young girl growing up in the picturesque surroundings of the 19th-century Denmark, knowing that she does not belong to her parents. Even when she is swept off her feet by the fascinating young nobelman she marries, she is troubled by the mystery—and even the joys of love cannot entirely erase the shock when at last she discovers the truth.

"The Collected Stories of Jean Stafford" contains 30 of the author's best stories. This is a wonderful volumn for pick-up reading and relaxation.

"A Walk to the River" is a new novel by the author of "The Trumpet Unblown" and "Yancey's War," William Hoffman. It is the story of a plain, decent man who, when a crisis arises in an outraged town, is forced to become a detective, a prosecuting attorney, a judge and jury. This is another compelling, realistic novel by a fine American writer.

"The Blacking Factory" and "Pennsylvania Gothic" are a short novel and a long story by Wilfried Sheed who won the National Book Award in 1966. Both of the stories included in this book are related in theme. They deal with that time of crisis in the lives of teenage boys that perhaps shapes the course of their lives. They also deal with an American past that died around the time of World War II. This is a rewarding book by an extremely fine author.

"Lonesome Traveler" is by Weldon Hill, author of "Rafe." Hill has been called a modern Mark Twain. With the tenderness he displayed in his beautiful book "Rafe," and the good-humored wit that marked his best-seller "Onionhead," he now tells the story of Clem Marlow, 14 years old, just about penniless, without family except for his mother, who lies ill in a hospital 700 miles way—and for whom he is agonizingly lonely. Clem sets out in a small cart drawn by his pet burro, Pedro, and his dog, Duke, to be reunited with his mother. This is the tale of his incredible journey from Oklahoma to New Mexico and the extraordinary assortment of people he meets along the way.

"The Blood of the Lamb" is a departure from the sort of book we generally expect from Peter De Vries. It is the story of someone who loses his faith as a child when his brother dies, and tries to recover it in manhood when his daughter is threatened. Religion and human meeting recur as basic themes. In scenes wildly comic and deeply moving. This is a startling novel, and it is a tragic comedy, like life itself.

Senior Wins Scholarship

Debra Smith, Charlevoix High School valedictorian for the class of 1971, has been offered a Michigan State University Merit Scholarship to be used only at MSU.

The scholarship was based on results of the National Merit Scholarship Exam administered to seniors across the country last fall.

Sessions Slated At Camp Daggett

A one-week boys' session will be held June 13 to June 19 and two two-week sessions for boys will be held June 20 to July 3 and July 4 to July 17.

A one-week girls' session is planned July 18 to July 24 and two two-week sessions for girls are planned July 25 to Aug. 7 and Aug. 8 to Aug. 21.

Application blanks and health forms are now available at local school offices and the Chamber of Commerce.

A non-profit camp located on Walloon Lake, the camp will be under the directorship of Charles Wilson.

Wilson says two new programs will be offered this summer: a course in riflery and a course in pleasure boating.

The riflery course is designed to help youngsters meet requirements of a new state law which demands that all youngsters between the ages of 12 and 17 show proof of hunting experience or pass an approved hunter safety course before a 1971 small game hunting license is issued.

The course includes instruction in the operation of various firearms, handling and storing weapons and ammunition, safety procedures, sportsmanship and respect for the rights and property of others. All instructors have been approved by the Department of Natural Resources.

The pleasure boating course will allow youngsters aged 12 to 15 to comply with another Michigan which requires them to have completed a course in safe boating if they are to operate a motorboat powered by an engine of six horsepower or larger. Youngsters who pass the course will be presented the required safe boating certificates.

City Hosts Visiting Firemen

By Beth Genell

The semi-annual meeting of the Cooperative Fire-Fighters Association was held Tuesday evening, April 27, at the Charlevoix City Hall.

Eleven firemen from Boyne City, seven from East Jordan, five from Ellsworth and eighteen from Charlevoix attended.

After a chicken dinner prepared on the barbecue by Don Meggison a film covering fire-fighting of gasoline storage tank fires was shown by representatives of the Cities Service Oil Co.

The association is comprised of firemen from the four communities who meet twice each year to compare notes on new fire fighting methods, look over new equipment, and re-assess the cooperative features which enables each department to work together in emergencies.

A dry chemical fire extinguisher, donated by the Charlevoix Oil Co. as a door prize, was won by Dick Wells of Charlevoix. Lee Moerland was re-elected to continue as secretary-treasurer of the group for an indefinite period.

The next meeting of the group is scheduled to be held at Boyne City in mid-October.

State Aid For April Paid in Full

School Superintendent Robert Miller reported Monday morning that the school district had received a check covering the balance of the April state aid payment — $16,576.

However, the balance of the February payment — $19,288, is still outstanding, Miller said.

He added that the June state aid payment has been figured at $41,431.58, plus reimbursement for remedial reading. He said he is uncertain how much the district will receive for remedial reading. Last year the payment came to $3,884.

Miller said total state aid for the year will amount to $272,151.58 — plus reimbursement for remedial reading. Last year the district received $278,793.97.

The Board of Education will meet May 10 to make a final decision on extra millage for the 1971-72 school year.

The board already has agreed to ask for a renewal of 6.5 mills, but it is generally acknowledged that extra millage will be needed to meet rising costs.

Miller said the school district's state equalized valuation has increased only 1.25 percent this year, compared to 7.5 state-wide. He said the local increase will not be sufficient to maintain the same program on the same millage.

Furthermore, the district would like to add two more vocational education courses next year, auto mechanics and food service.

Mushroom Hunt Slated May 8-9 in Boyne City

May is a coming-alive time in Michigan—a time when wild mushrooms push upward through the cool soil to await an army of pickers. A time, too, when tulips bloom by the thousands in Holland and most community events are geared to the outdoors, according to the Michigan Calendar of Travel Events.

Hundreds of mushroom pickers annually descend upon the small northern Michigan communities of Boyne City and Lake City in search of these tender morsels.

This year the National Mushroom Festival at Boyne City and the annual Mushroom Days in Lake City will be held May 8-9. Mushroom hunters vie for honors in various categories, including the largest mushroom found and the most mushrooms picked in a specified time period, with prizes awarded the winners.

Holland's 42nd annual Tulip Time is May 12-15 when the Netherlands of Michigan bursts forth in a myriad of colors with a profusion of tulips. A popular attraction is the Klompen Dancers, more than 600 high school girls wearing copies of authentic costumes of the various provinces of the Netherlands and wooden shoes, who give several free performances daily. Tulip Time visitors also can tour a wooden shoe factory, a typical Dutch market and explore the 12-story, 200-year-old windmill, "De Zwaan", brought over from the Netherlands and reassembled here.

Two historical moments in Michigan's past will be re-enacted—the journey of Marquette and Jolliet beginning at St. Ignace and the Indian attack on Fort Michilimackinac.

The re-enactment of the Marquette-Jolliet journey along the shores of Lake Michigan and down the Mississippi River begins May 17, continuing through May 28, as part of St. Ignace's year-long tricentennial celebration. The Indians' 1763 takeover of Fort Michilimackinac will be re-staged in the shadow of the Mackinac Bridge May 29-31.

Elsewhere in Michigan, canoe races will be held in Hastings, sailboat races at Tawas City and in Dearborn, there will be a Country Fair of Yesterday at Greenfield Village.

Anyone with a drop of Scottish blood will thrill to the drums and skirling pipes, the bonnie lassies dancing and the brawny lads competing during the fourth annual Highland Festival and Games in Alma on May 22.

New Book on Fishing Is Yours for Free

One of the most complete books ever published on Michigan fishing is now ready for distribution, according to William T. McGraw, director, Michigan Tourist Council.

A year in preparation, the new 36-page publication, "Fishing in Michigan," was produced by the Michigan Tourist Council in cooperation with the Fisheries Division, Department of Natural Resources.

"Fishing has become an increasingly important factor in bringing more out of state visitors to Michigan as well as encouraging state residents to spend more leisure time in recreational travel," McGraw said.

"As an example," he pointed out, "a recent report to the Department of Natural Resources indicated that Coho fishing alone prompted more than $8 million spending on that sport in 1970."

Illustrated with full color photos, the book describes the how, when and where of Michigan fishing. Eleven pages are devoted to descriptions of Michigan's 20 game fish, including physical characteristics, habits and habitats. How to catch 'em instructions are provided with each individual fish description, along with tips on cooking. An entire section of the book is devoted to recipes.

For those who have never before tried their luck on this age-old sport, instructions on bait and tackle and how best to use them is included.

On safety's side, one page of the book contains Great Lakes safe-boating information as well as illustrations showing official U.S. Coast Guard traffic signals and warning flags.

From stream and inland lake fishing, angling through the ice to dipping for spring smelt, Michigan's fishing scene is completely covered, according to McGraw.

Copies of the publication, "Fishing in Michigan," are available without charge from the Michigan Tourist Council, Lansing, 48926.

Librarians Will Meet In Gaylord

An all day library conference on public relations, Tuesday, May 11, at the Otsego County Library in Gaylord, will feature an address by Miss Jan Stobbart, librarian in St. Charles and former publicity director of Gerity Enterprises. During the morning session she will talk on "Better Communication with Legislators, Community, and Schools."

The conference, which is sponsored by the Trustee Division of the Michigan Library Association, will begin at 9 a.m. with registration and coffee. There will be brief reports from representatives of the Michigan Library Association and the State Library. At lunch, a lively film depicting the library's role in the community, "The Hottest Spot in Town," will be shown.

In the afternoon there will be discussion on the public relations problems and successes of individual libraries and on proposed legislation for the regionalization of libraries throughout the state. Attention will also be given to bills to establish a network of major research libraries in Michigan and to identify the Detroit Public Library as a state resource and appropriate funds for it.

Steelhead, Salmon Worth $8.3 Million

Michigan's spectacular steelhead and salmon fishery in the Great Lakes area was worth an estimated $8.3 million to this state's residents in 1970, according to results of a study recently completed by the Department of Natural Resources.

The estimate is pegged to other figures from the study which show that 200,000 sportsmen recorded 1.76 million angler days of fishing for steelhead and salmon in Michigan's Great Lakes waters last season.

Findings of the survey, conducted by the DNR's Office of Planning Services and Fisheries Division, also reveal that the Department's steelhead-salmon program is bringing in about $10 for every $1 in state funds which is spent for maintenance and operational costs.

In projecting what they learned from the study, DNR specialists expect this excellent cost-benefit ratio to continue for at least the next 30 years. Over this long-term period, they estimate that the steelhead-salmon program will generate upwards of 2 million angler days of fishing annually.

The survey, covering about 10,000 of Michigan's licensed anglers, was conducted by the DNR to help gain a representative reading on how steelhead - salmon management benefits stack up against the program's costs.

Beyond that, and even more importantly, it was designed to provide the DNR with a key, comparative bearing on what directions it should take with other phases of its total fish management effort.

A PAIR of mallard ducks have mingled with Bridge-st. shoppers during the past several weeks, begging for handouts along the way. Above, Jim Crothers, an employe at the Little Shop Around The Corner, extends a breakfast invitation to the pair. The ducks also have found employes at Schroeder's Drug Store to be a soft touch.

CHAMBER

By Tom Merta
Chamber of Commerce Manager

It's a good bet the ice will disappear for another season by next weekend, and not any too soon. . . don't you agree "Beaver Islander."

Our office has been receiving an average of eight to 15 letters daily requesting information on cottages and summer housing. Looks like we're in for a great summer season.

Speaking of seasons, we've got a couple shops opening here in Charlevoix, both have been working frantically to open by May 1. Jim Mielke has the new bookstore, The Park Place, which offers books, artist supplies, and greeting cards, good luck on your new venture, Jim. Jeannine Wallace is also opening her gift shop, "Shop of the Gulls. Jeannine is an "old hand" in the gift shop business but we'll wish her good luck too!

Have you seen what's happening to the old Charlevoix County Bank Building? It's reverting back to the past as "Bits of Yesteryear." Frank Lenox, the owner, from Bellaire, has completely remodeled the interior of the bank building. I was inside last week and I must say he has accomplished something in making his new gift shop look like something from yesteryear, but in an elegant and comfortable atmosphere. Excellent job Frank. Frank intends an opening sometime in May.

Artists and Hobbycrafters COME FORWARD. . . the Waterfront Art Fair and the Lakeside Hobbycraft committees are still accepting applications for their annual exhibits.

Our Tabloid Vacation edition is coming along just fine. I hope that we'll have an excellent cross-section of businesses represented in it.

Believe it or not, we have two beautiful sailboats in the city docking facility already. Summer can't be too far away. . . can it?

Channel Bids Under Study

Mike Perrini, public affairs officer for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Detroit, reports that a decision is expected either late this week or early next week on a contract for completion of the Pine River Channel revetment fronting the Weathervane Inn.

Perrini said bids were opened April 13 and are being evaluated.

The 300-foot section of channel bank was seriously damaged by wave action last November during 80 mph winds. The Corps of Engineers laid a blanket of crushed stone on the bank which has held up well during the winter.

PTO Meeting

The next PTO meeting will be held May 19 at the Elementary School, beginning with coffee at 7:30 p.m. Candidates for the school board have been invited to discuss their views.

FROM FARM BUREAU

Trio at Middle School Win Awards for Essays

Three Charlevoix Middle School students earned awards for their entries in the fourth Annual Freedoms Foundation Eighth Grade Essay Contest sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance Group.

Awards were presented April 30 by Farm Bureau agent Charles Elzinga of Charlevoix, Margaret Warner, first place; Dan Mort, second place; and Steve Bloom, third place.

The top essayists received antique parchment reproductions of historical documents. The Declaration of Independence reproduction for first place was awarded to Margaret. The second place award, a replica of the Constitution, was presented to Dan. A copy of the original Indian Treaty giving Mackinac Island to the British was the third place award received by Steve.

Some 200 schools and 4,000 students participated in this year's contest which was conducted through 52 Farm Bureau Insurance Group Offices around the state. Last year, 204 schools and 3,500 students competed.

In three years the Essay Contest has expanded from a Lansing area competition, to a massive statewide program. The basis for this appeal is the concept of the competition...encouraging youth to seriously consider the heritage and future of America through the topic "What I Can Do For My Country."

For the 1970 Essary Contest, Freedoms Foundation conferred the George Washington Honor Medal Award on Farm Bureau Insurance Group in February. This was the third such award in as many years.

The school awards represent an important first plateau in the statewide contest. Student essays earning a first place school award are placed in statewide competition for the top award...a fully expense-paid, four-day, three-night trip to Washington, D.C. for student, parents and teacher.

Display flags and desk flag sets will be awarded to the top three state essayists and their schools as judged by state Supreme Court Justice John B. Swainson; Earl E. Nelson, State Representative from Michigan's 57th District; Charles E. Chamberlain, U.S. Congressman for Michigan's Sixth District; Clifton Wharton Jr., Michigan State University President; and Bob Talbert, columnists for the Detroit Free Press.

Band Gets II Rate At Festival

The Charlevoix High School Symphony Band narrowly missed the First Division rating last Saturday, being awarded a final Rating of II in the annual event, the State Band and Orchestra Festival held in Otsego, Mich.

According to Director Clarence Odmark, the band received a I from one judge, and II's from the other three judges.

While disappointed in not receiving the top rating, Odmark was very pleased with the performance, terming it "as good as I had hoped."

The Band stayed overnight at the Howard Johnson Motor Inn in Grand Rapids on Saturday night, and returned home late Sunday afternoon.

Chaperones included, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Cummings, Mrs. Don Brown, president of the Band Boosters who helped sponsor the trip; Mrs. Harold Wilson, Mrs. Evelyn Peters, Miss Julie Odmark, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Stutzman, Richard Odmark and Mr. and Mrs. C.A. Odmark.

ALTHOUGH THE calendar said it was May 2, there was still plenty of ice in Pine River Channel. Shifting winds and currents carry a regular parade of ice floes from Lake Michigan into Round Lake and back again.

The Woods Are Dry, Watch Out for Fires

Because of the unusually dry spring, there is a potential fire hazard in northern Michigan until the woodlands begin greening up, according to the Forest Fire Division of the Department of Natural Resources Field Office in Boyne City.

In rural areas, landowners must have a permit to have an open fire, such as land clearing or debris burning, when the proper type of container is not used.

These containers may be built of masonry or metal which have metal covers with openings no larger than ¾ of an inch.

Failure to use such approved containers or to obtain permits for burning debris in forest or grassland areas carries a fine of $100 and or a 90 day jail sentence.

In Charlevoix County free permits can be picked up at the Boyne City Field Office, or by calling 582-6681 between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

One arrest has been made in this area for burning without a permit.

Motorists traveling in rural areas are reminded to use their ash trays to dispose of cigarettes, lighted matches or tobacco. Any one who flicks such "smokes" from a moving vehicle will be subject to a $100 fine and or 90 day jail sentence.

Outdoor users who go afoot in rural areas face the same penalties if they pose the threat of touching off wild fires by disposing of cigarettes and other burning materials which are not dead out.

Residents of cities or villages are asked to check with local authorities for burning restrictions.

Under Act 348, Public Acts of 1965, the Air Pollution Law, any permit applicant wishing to burn industrial waste, copper wire, salvaged automobiles, houses, dumps, tires, plastics, and the like must obtain permission from the local health department before a permit is issued by the DNR office.

Boys Selling Candy Bars For Uniforms

Larry J. Ford, coordinator for the local baseball program, has announced the start of a drive to secure uniforms for the nine-to-twelve age group.

Approximately 40 to 50 boys aged 5 to 15 are knocking on doors in the Charlevoix area in an attempt to sell giant, brightly-wrapped candy bars labeled "Boys Baseball."

Ford says the boys will appreciate any support the community might give the project, either by buying candy or by making donations to the Charlevoix Baseball Program, c/o L. J. Ford, Box 235, Charlevoix, 49720.

ALWAYS EXPECT EMERGENCIES WHEN DRIVING IN FAMILIAR SURROUNDINGS. AUTO CLUB STUDIES SHOW THAT LAST YEAR 75 PERCENT OF ALL TRAFFIC FATALITIES OCCURRED WITHIN 25 MILES OF HOME. BE ALERT AND "BRING 'EM BACK ALIVE!"
Bring 'em back ALIVE!

The annual pageant at historic Fort Michilimackinac in Mackinaw City which has been called "The Re-enactment of the Massacre at Fort Michilimackinac" since its first performance in 1963, will no longer be known by that name.

The 1971 Memorial Day Weekend drama scheduled for May 29, 30 and 31 at the restored fort will be known simply as "The Fort Michilimackinac Pageant".

The change in name, and some changes which will be made in the script, are the result of objections by present-day Indians to what they regard as depictions of their ancestors as bloodthirsty savages. Not so, they say, and object to the word "massacre" as applied to the aftermath of the famous bagataway (lacrosse) game in 1763 which enabled the Chippewas of the area to gain entrance to the fort and overcome the British garrison.

The term should be "a military victory", says Gerald Chingwa, chairman of a committee representing several Indian organizations whose members are determined to correct what they regard as stereo-typed images of Indians in America.

"It was a battle, not a massacre," says Chingwa. "The word 'massacre' implies indiscriminate slaughter. That was not the case at Fort Michilimackinac. The Indians achieved a military victory after their surprise attack. Only the British were killed or taken after their surprise attack. Only the British were killed or taken captive. The French traders and inhabitants were spared, so of course, the battle results could not be called indiscriminate slaughter."

The committee representing Mackinaw City citizens, who present the annual spectacle, agree, and have promised not only to change the name but to modify several actions or narration statements which Indians consider offensive. Co-chairmen Raymond Desy and Kenneth Teysen, Mackinaw City businessmen who portray British officers, say it can be done without sacrificing dramatic impact or historical accuracy.

"Although there has been violent bloodshed in many of the conflicts between Indians and white soldiers in our past history," says Teysen, "it has been practiced by both sides - in many cases more by the whites than the Indians. We have never intended to defame the ancestors of our Indian friends, and have considered the script, written by a recognized historian, to be historically correct.

"We do, however, see that some parts are unnecessarily offensive to Indians and we are glad to change them - while still insisting that the pageant be accurate as far as the facts are known. Actually, the dramatic conflict at the fort in 1763 is only a short part of the period from 1715 to 1781 which is covered in the drama, so the old title was inadequate and the new one may be better."

The pageant starts with the building of Fort Michilimackinac by the French in 1715, the lives of the garrison and inhabitants, the fort's takeover by the British in 1750, their defeat by the Indians in 1763, the fort's reoccupation and the decision that it could not again be successfully defended, and its removal to Mackinac Island in 1780-81. Most dramatic is the bagataway game by which the Chippewas gained entrance to the fort, and the defeat of the British in 1763.

> "It was a battle, not a massacre. The word 'massacre' implies indiscriminate slaughter. That was not the case at Fort Michilimackinac. The Indians achieved a military victory after their surprise attack."

"The clever ruse by the Indians was a series of intertribal games in front of the fort," says Raymond Desy. "Bagataway was similar to our present-day lacrosse games. As the Indians competed, the unwary soldiers watched from the walls or open gate. Many enjoyed wagering on the outcome, not noticing that Indian women, their robes gathered around them, were near the gate. At an exciting part of the game the ball was knocked directly toward the open gate and the Indians ran after it. Before the garrison knew what was happening the braves grabbed weapons which the Indian women had hidden under their robes and dashed into the fort, overwhelming the soldiers."

The only eyewitness to have left a written account of the affair was Alexander Henry, a British trader whose diary present-day Indians believe gives a one-sided account of the battle.

"They rightfully point out that British soldiers of that time were often as violent as Indians," says Teysen. "Actually, some historians say the practice of scalping vanquished enemies, for example, was 'taught' the Indians by whites. The revised script will point out such facts and will try to show the Indian point of view much more than in the past. We have assured Indian objectors that we do sincerely agree that some parts should be changed and have made written statements to that effect which we hope will be widely circulated in Indian publications."

Several meetings have been held between pageant officials, Chingwa and other members of Indian organizations, and Indian advice is being sought in revising the script. Many Indians have expressed satisfaction at the sincerety of the Mackinaw City people and have promised their friendly cooperation.

The Fort Michilimackinac Pageant and many other entertaining events of the three-day celebration are free to the public. No participants are paid except director Robert Stern, formerly of Michigan State University and presently Professor of Speech and Director of Drama at Lake Superior State College. About 200 Mackinaw City townspeople, many of whom have some Indian ancestry, make up the cast.

Warning: Flooded Wells Pose Hazard

Dr. Robert S. Libke, director of District Health Department No. 3 has issued a warning that water from flooded wells may be unsafe or even dangerous to drink.

Because of the unusually high water problem this spring many private wells and septic systems, particularly in some of the resort and water front properties, have been flooded.

This results in malfunctioning of the septic system with overflow into the ground water which then seeps into wells and contaminates the drinking water.

In some cases owners have been suspected of pumping the contents of flooded septic tanks into an adjacent lake or river. This is illegal both by state and county law and should be discontinued immediately.

Dr. Libke advises that if you have any reason to suspect that your well water may be unsafe, you may pick up water sampling bottles at the Health Department Office in the County Building and send in a sample to MDPH Laboratories at Lansing for testing.

In the meantime, if you are unsure of your drinking water supply you can render it safe by boiling it for five minutes before use.

Take your problems to Church this week — millions leave them there!

Fair Treatment Key To Railroads' Survival

Saturday, May 1, was a nostalgic day for railroad buffs and other citizens who remember when the railroad was the chief method of getting from hither to yon and back again.

That was the day when one-third of the nation's remaining 285 inter-city passenger trains passed into history, as the federal government's new Amtrak system took over operation of long-haul rail passenger service formerly offered by 19 different railroads.

As of Saturday, only 191 passenger trains are now operating throughout the United States, compared to 20,000 a scant 40 years ago.

But the era of the railroad is far from over, according to W.F. Lindsey of Ludington, a veteran employe of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad and district chairman of "ASTRO" -- short of America's Sound Transportation Review Organization.

The group was organized in 1969 by the Association of American Railroads to make an in-depth study of present national transportation policies and recommend steps needed to assure a balanced and progressive system.

ASTRO came to the conclusion that railroads are, and will continue to be, essential to the nation's safety and progress.

However, in order to survive, the railroad's must be treated equally with other forms of transportation by the federal government.

The biggest hangup is that railroads are the only mode of transport which must provide for both equipment and right-of-way from private sources. They bear the entire cost of building and maintaining their own roadways.

Furthermore, they pay local property taxes on every square inch of right-of-way they maintain, in contract to trucks, buses, airlines and barges which operate on rights-of-way provided by the government. Although some user charges are assessed (in the form of license plate fees for trucks, for example), such fees in no way cover the total cost of the facility.

To put the railroads back on a profit-making basis and save the industry, ASTRO recommends:

1. Rail transportation facilities be exempted from local property taxation. Because state and local governments have depended upon these taxes, the federal government should reimburse the state for the revenue lost, which would be consistent with the tax-sharing concept.

2. The federal government presently earmarks $350 million a year for grade-crossing separations, but the present law does not require that the money be spent. ASTRO wants Congress to direct that these monies be used to separate all grade crossings, not merely those where "federal-aid" highways and rail lines cross.

3. Present highway trust funds be merged into a general surface transportation fund to which railroads would contribute.

4. That the government guarantee loans, up to $400 million annually, for railroads to improve their facilities.

5. That rapid tax amortization be allowed to encourage investment in new technology, coupled with tax depreciation allowances on such investments as tunnels and grades.

6. That federal assistance after natural disasters, be offered just as it is to the highways which parallel them.

7. That the federal government participate in rebuilding railroads to overcome present deficiencies and keep pace with increasing demands.

8. That research and development efforts be balanced among the various modes of transportation. Currently less than four percent of federal transportation research is spent on railroads.

The railroads would also like more freedom in establishing rates, more freedom to organize multi-model transportation companies, using trains, trucks, barges, and other means of transport, more freedom to prune non-profit operations and fast action by the government on proposed mergers.

Ever since the first railroad was established in the United States in the 1830's, the railroad has been an integral part of the national economy.

Even today, the railroads are the nation's biggest hauler of freight, carrying 41 percent of inter-city traffic. By 1980 they will handle, at the very least, one-third more traffic than now -- moving over one trillion ton-miles a year.

But something obviously must be done to put freight service railroad back on a paying basis. The alternative is to turn everything over to the federal government, as has been done with passenger service through the creation of Amtrak.

"In a society beset with traffic congestion, air pollution and a scarcity of available land, a viable rail system is a national mandate," ASTRO asserts.

We hope the nation's lawmakers will give ASTRO'S recommendations all the attention they deserve in order to give a belated assist to this long-suffering segment of the American economy.

'Thank God You Are an American'

To the Editor:

In answer to Miss Barbara's letter:

Yes, think about it, Miss Barbara! Think about it and be proud to be an American. In spite of everything you say so beautifully in your letter, thank God you are an American because when you take a map and look around the globe you will find that locks and chains are keeping most of the people from saying whatever they would like to tell the world.

Here, you can still cry out your indignation, you can still march, you can still write, you can still meet and choose our own representatives. You can arouse the people with speeches and tell that wars have outlived their false, hypocritical, ignorant, brutal heroism and that the human race has grown up to realize that there must be other ways and means to settle differences than spilling the blood of our strongest and finest young men.

It takes time and patience to learn this lesson, but we are on the way and it's in America that the ideas are being born and it's here that we are going through the labor pains, of a rebirth of a free new world.

So don't be ashamed of being an American. Look around and see how many countries are still living in the middle ages, whose governments and not the people are waging constant wars. Sure we are making mistakes, and there will always be victims of mistakes, but since the government consists of common people like ourselves, we have so far not been able to produce supermen and we will probably continue to make mistakes.

Fortunately we can cry out and object. How many countries are there left in the world today who are blessed with free speech? So, dear Miss Barbara, don't be ashamed of being an American and don't dispair—but thank your lucky star!

Hails Kids For Working In System

R.F.D. No. 3 Box 241
Charlevoix, Mich. 49720
April 26, 1971

The Hon. Philip E. Ruppe
Congressman, Michigan's 37th District
United States House of Representatives
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Ruppe:

Thank you for seeing the delegation from Charlevoix and Petoskey Saturday. Even though you did not agree with their points, it was important for you to see them, to learn what an increasing number of your constituents are feeling. More important, these young people were working within the system and had you persisted in your refusal to see them, they would have come home convinced of the inadequacy of the system. That was the point Mrs. Dammann and I felt so important to get across to you.

It is indeed a shame that you were awakened so early Saturday morning. Attribute that to youthful enthusiasm and the conviction that the most important matter before our society today is to stop the insane killing in Southeast Asia.

As for our telephone conversation, I would like to point out that although you have never questioned my credentials when I have interviewed you for the DETROIT NEWS, GRAND RAPIDS PRESS and TIME magazine on such matters as the abandonment of the Chief Wawatam or the feasibility of year round navigation on the Great Lakes, you did so to my wife Saturday morning. Therefore, I suggest you ask Herb Klein (President Nixon's Director of Communications) about me. He published my material for years when he was editor of the SAN DIEGO UNION. You might also ask President Nixon, with whom I have travelled in the Soviet Union and Southeast Asia.

My wife is telling people that you have the honor of being the first man ever to hang-up the phone on her during a conversation. Your act strikes me not only as rude, but an incredible aberation for a politician.

Yours truly,
Tom Dammann

Clockwise

Take Heart

The other day I read something in the paper that upset me more than most of the things I read in the paper

It was a doomsday report by a group of scientists who are convinced that the world is going to h— in a handbasket.

They point to overpopulation that will lead eventually to starvation and food wars.

They are concerned over chemical and physical pollution that threatens to destroy the ecological balance in many parts of the world.

They are alarmed over poverty and poor health care that demeans and disenfranchises millions.

They are uptight about racism that breeds hate and division.

They are worried about rising crime rates and unequal administration of justice that punishes the poor and pardons the rich.

They are chagrined at inadequate educational systems that rob people of achieving their mental potential.

They are disturbed by outmoded transportation systems that frustrate and isolate all but the few.

They stay awake nights fretting over the possibility of nuclear war.

And they want to do something about the world's problems, but, by and large, they aren't very optimistic that anything much can be done to solve any of the problems at this late date.

However, they think there may be hope if all the scientists in the country forget about such things as space travel and jump in one big "think tank" to come up with solutions–sort of a gigantic brain trust to solve the world's ills.

Which is all well and good, but I can't help but think that people the world over, particularly in the United States have developed a mania for looking at the gloomy side of life. We have become so oppressed by the war, by pollution, by over-population, by racial strife and an uncertain economy that we don't stop to look around to see what's good, if anything, about life today.

Frankly, I think it's encouraging that we have been able to isolate and pin names to some of our problems. Recognizing them is half the battle; solutions should not be long in coming.

But just for a minute, let's take a look at some of the brighter things of life as this crazy old world tilts on the edge of May in A.D. 1971.

The war in Vietnam has been long and discouraging, but the American people – at long last – are beginning to demand that our involvement in it end – fast. Some congressmen are beginning to respond to mounting pressure and I think the end is in sight.

Although the economy has been shakey for several months, the prospect for the remainder of the year is relatively optimistic. Buying pressure is building and the job market should loosen up shortly.

Although over-population is still with us, our rate of growth is increasing at a decreasing rate. With wider knowledge of birth control measures and changing social patterns (later marriages and less pressure to conform to established social norms), I believe the day will soon arrive when the population problem will take care of itself, at least in the United States. Women's Lib is probably a step in the right direction so far as over-population is concerned.

The state and federal government have acted with encouraging rapidity in clamping down on industries, municipalities and individuals who are polluting our water and air. New sewage plants, for example, are building across Michigan and the major industrial polluters have been ordered to clean up or go out of business. It is going to cost us more to live in our cleaner environment, but won't it be nice to be able to see the skyline of our big cities once again?

Racial problems? Or course, they're still tragically pressing, but for the first time in my lifetime folks are beginning to drag out their prejudices and examine them in the light of day, witness the TV serial, "It's All in the Family." If such a program can be aired nationally, we're not in such bad shape.

Crime? Not too much to be optimistic here, but a stronger economy should help, plus a greater awareness of the drug problem which leads directly to so much of our crime.

Education? We're trying to improve it and that's something. With the bumper crop of new teachers and administrators in our schools, we should be seeing some changes for the better before too many years pass.

Furthermore, we're on the edge of May in stunning northern Michigan. The hills are green, the water's blue and the trout are biting. It's a pretty good old world after all.

It's a shame the scientists are too busy treading water in their "think tanks" to enjoy it.

If it Fitz

Yank the Cord

By Jim Fitzgerald

One time I yanked the cord just once and the lawn mower started. THE VERY FIRST TIME! Wow. I felt like the world's leading machinist.

My first inclination was to phone the director of the high-school band and ask him to start a parade. Great occasions should be celebrated properly. I would push my roaring mower (it's self-propelled, but only downhill) at the rear of the parade, among the Blue Star Mothers, so as to not drown out the drums and bugles up front.

But I decided against the parade, mostly because it would have required that the mower be switched off so the band director could hear me on the phone. It is my policy to never turn off the mower on purpose. It's like having a car with a bum battery. When I park the mower, I let the motor idle while the grass grows. I'd probably let the fool thing run from May until September, fueling it in flight like an airplane with no landing gear, but no chance. The mower regularly gasps and heaves and shudders and quits flat on its own with no help from mortal man. I suspect it is offended by my grass which smells from a lack of chlorophyl. Clorets don't help.

All of which is my backhanded way of admitting I made a mistake last summer when I bought a lawn mower, the first one I've ever owned. And now it owns me. I have $200 invested in the miserable thing and, by God, I'm going to get my money's worth out of it if it costs me $2,000 in energy, aspirin and repair bills.

In all fairness to the manufacturer, I should point out it is not his fault. It is mine. Machines and tools that work for everyone else never work for me. Screwdrivers fall apart in my hands. The only time I ever pound a nail solidly is when I'm driving it into the wrong wall. Once I had to ask a stranger how to put the hood up on my own car. He was a patient at a mental institution.

The other day it was time to get the mower out of winter storage and prepare it for another wonderful summer at the repair shop. I read the instruction manual. The first thing I learned was that I had forgotten to prepare the stupid thing for storage last fall. But really, how do you know when to drain the gas and store it? One day you can hear the grass growing. The next day the storage shed is snowed in and there's no way I can get to that mower without shoveling which is against my religion.

So, ignoring past mistakes, I pressed ever onward. "Remove spark plug," the manual demanded. How? Thanks to the TV ads, I know what a spark plug looks like. But I bloodied my knuckles and still couldn't twist the lousy thing loose. I'm sure some tool was needed but the manual didn't say which one and anyway owning tools is also against my religion.

"Spin the crankshaft," the manual commanded. What's a crankshaft?

"Turn carburetor adjusting knob clockwise until needle seats lightly." Needle seats! Is that good grammar?

"Use a 3⅞ inch diameter dowel." Now I know what I want for Christmas.

Where does an alien go to shoot himself?

I trucked the mower back to the store for resuscitation. In a few years it will be able to make the trip by itself, blindfolded. When John the hardware man, did business with me, he didn't lose a mower, he gained a dumbo-in-law.

To go Onward and Upward, "just yank the starter cord once." You bet.

Rural Ills Moving to Big Cities

Dear Mr. Clock:

Productivity increases in farming, mining, lumbering, and fishing have forced an accelerating rural to city migration during the past century.

In the mean time the private industries and commerce that were the economic foundation of the cities have become antiquated and moved to the suburbs taking the housing, the higher income families, and the economic base with them.

The cities replaced much of the old tax producing structures with tax consuming structures, government buildings, and streets. City private payrolls dropped and public payrolls increased. The incoming rural migrants find no job opportunities available in the cities, they occupy the decaying homes of the central cities and are forced to rely on welfare. So the tax loads of the cities increase while the tax base shrinks accelerating the economic migration out of the city.

This is the economic plight of the cities that the mayors are complaining about, but they were indifferent to the economic plight of the rural areas that forced the people to migrate to the cities in the first place.

Spirit of Old West Lives in Ghost Towns

The spirit of the Old West stalks hundreds of ghost towns scattered from the deserts of New Mexico to the mountains of Idaho.

Some slumber in ruins, others cling doggedly to life and a few thrive by showing visitors restorations of "the way it used to be," the National Geographic Society says.

Prospectors still prowl California's Panamints, working out of near-abandoned towns at the foot of the mountain range. "Heartbreak Ridge they call that range," explained one glumly. "Those mountains are full of faults. You usually hit one before you can follow a vein very far, and then you spend every nickel you've got trying to find out which way the vein slipped."

TROUBLESOME RICHES

Fanning out from California, pioneer prospectors hit pay dirt on the Nevada slope of the Sierras in 1859. But it was difficult to mine, for troublesome "black stuff" encased it. The black ore proved to be loaded with silver.

Shells of ruined stores, and a few wood shacks are all that mark Hamilton, Nev., a town that attracted 15,000 people in a frantic, short-lived silver rush.

Miners sank shafts, investors as far away as London sank fortunes; one syndicate raised $10 million to back a seeress whose visions never paid off.

ATONEMENT TOWN

Treasure City, three miles from Hamilton and nearly 10,000 feet above sea level was born when an Indian led three prospectors to a fabulous silver vein to atone for stealing a pot of beans.

Motley hordes swarmed in and a city rose, built partly of rock hauled from the mine shafts. Two late arrivals built a hut of stones picked up on their claim, then after carefully examining their home "mined" it the following spring for $75,000 in silver.

BOOMING PROSPECTS

"Prospects were never more encouraging," wrote a visitor to Eureka, Nev., in 1872. He was right: In the next quarter century, the city poured out gold and silver and led the world in lead production. Crowds cheered the era's brightest stars at an elegant new Opera House. Now only a curio shop holds the spotlight.

Colorado's prospectors found gold near Pikes Peak, and 100,000 "fifty-niners" rushed to one of mining's greatest fiascoes. But fortune waited at Leadville and at Aspen, today a flourishing ski resort.

Central City, Colo., laid a path of silver bricks for President Grant's visit. The bricks are gone, but a well-preserved mining town still greets visitors.

Some former ghost towns have struck it rich again with tourist dollars–for instance, Virginia City, Nev., and Tombstone, Ariz. Each August Deadwood, S.D., revives the gold rush spirit with special festivities.

Time has not been as kind to most of the picturesque boom-and-bust communities. Souvenir hunters pilfer rusty horseshoes, faded wallpaper, and in some cases entire cabins from the old towns

Parents, Kids Agree On Issues, Poll Finds

By Sen. Robert W. Davis

Northern Michigan High School seniors essentially agree with their parents on popular issues of the day—except on the price and tax on gasoline and the matter of income tax against the sales tax.

That is what Sen. Robert W. Davis (R-37th) found through tabulation of almost 5,000 replies to 12 questions asked of parents and senior students in the 14-county 37th senatorial district he represents.

While a minority—43 percent—of parents opposed state regulation of gasoline prices in Michigan, 61 percent of the students favored it.

The situation was reversed, however, on the question of approving a one-cent gas tax increase to provide funds for highway improvements, including US-131, US-2, and US-23 in the upper peninsula and northern part of the lower peninsula.

On that question, a majority of the parents—or 58 percent—approved the proposal while only 42 percent of the young people approved.

An even 60 percent of the parents favored an income tax increase over a sales tax increase—if a tax increase were found necessary—but 52 percent of the students favored the sales tax hike.

In the matter of appointive, rather than elective, governing boards of the state's three major universities, students were split an even 50-50 while 62.8 percent of the parents favored the proposal as a means of making universities more responsive to the public.

On all other questions, a majority of both parents and students voted favorably. The questions and the two votes follow:

"Do you favor continuing such auxiliary services as remedial reading, health and nursing programs, driver education, special aid for handicapped children, etc., to non-public students? Parents favoring, 76.3 percent; students 73 percent.

"Would you favor a Constitutional change providing for gubernatorial appointment of governing boards of the three major universities with approval of the senate, which would give the governor and legislature more control over these universities?" Parents favoring, 62.8 percent; students 50 percent.

"Should the shooting of antlerless deer in Michigan be banned for at least three years? Parents favoring, 77.7 percent; students 85 percent.

"Are you in favor of a one cent increase in the state gasoline tax to provide more funds for completion of our highway system if we are guaranteed that US-131, US-2, and US-23 will be part of our road building program " Parents favoring, 58 percent; students, 42 percent.

"Should there be a "truth in air pollution law' with those monitored paying the cost of surveillance?" Parents favoring, 86.1 percent; students, 92 percent.

Parents, Kids Agree on Issues

"Should billboards be more tightly regulated and prohibited in scenic areas?" Parents favoring, 88 percent; students, 83 percent.

"Should the law require that farm land be assessed only on its value as farm land, not on what it might be worth for some other use, provided that back taxes be paid if it is sold for other use at a higher price?" Parents favoring, 77.2 percent; students, 55 percent.

"Assuming an increase in state taxes is forthcoming, would you prefer an income tax increase to a sales tax increase?" Parents favoring, 60 percent; students, 48 percent.

"Would you favor passage of a liberalized abortion bill this year?" Parents favoring, 63.7 percent; students, 68 percent.

"Should judges be given more discretion for punishment of marijuana sellers instead of the present 'minimum mandatory' 20-year prison term penalty plan?" Parents favoring, 60.5 percent; students, 57 percent.

"Do you favor establishing a minimum age, such as 14, for operating a snowmobile on public land or private land made available to the public?" Parents favoring, 78.5 percent; students, 63 percent.

"Should the state regulate the price of gasoline?" Parents favoring, 43 percent; students 61 percent.

INSTANT READER RESPONSE

Mrs. Marshall Tells Why She Resigned

Mrs. Mari Marshall, branch manager of the Secretary of State's license plate bureau in Oleson's Shopping Center, thinks there might be some misunderstanding over a report in the April 28 Courier that she is resigning for financial reasons.

Mrs. Marshall says that she receives 30 cents for each set of license plates sold and 10 cents for each title transfer, and that income from the branch is only enough to pay overhead.

She has notified William N. Hettiger, deputy Secretary of State, that she intends to close the office May 15.

Mrs. Marshall said she had hoped that the Charlevoix branch would be brought under Civil Service, but that only branches operated in connection with driver-licensing offices are eligible for Civil Service status.

In her letter of resignation, Mrs. Marshall wrote:

"I have been told that I have provided one of the better Secretary of State offices since March, 1970, but as a fee branch I no longer can afford to keep this position. It was my hope from the beginning that there might be a chance of the office going civil service. Since this is no longer in sight the negative remuneration has made me realize I can no longer keep the doors open."

Mrs. Marshall says it it up to the county Democratic committee to recommend a successor. A party spokesman says local Democrats have not been informed by the Secretary of State that there is an opening.

Rebuffed by Council, Mayor Ends Meeting

Vote on Attorney Riles Essenburg

Mayor Andrew Essenburg jr. adjourned the City Council meeting after 20 minutes Monday night when the council failed to approve his appointment of the law firm Oliver, Dinan and Schenden, represented in Charlevoix by Steven Graham, as city attorney.

After the last alderman voted "no" on the appointment, Essenburg banged down the gavel and said: "This meeting is adjourned."

He then stalked from the council chamber to the astonishment of the five council members present and a gallery of about 30 spectators. Alderman Roger Westenbroek was absent.

A raft of unfinished business remained on the table, including approval of payroll checks which were to be distributed to city employes Tuesday morning.

Members of the finance committee — Alderman Robert Gill, Nathan Boss and Conrad Klooster — called a special meeting of the council for Tuesday night at 8 p.m. to approve the bills and conduct other routine city business.

After Essenburg's departure, his supporters stayed in the council chamber to argue with the council over Essenburg's appointment for city attorney.

The council maintains that under the Fourth Class Cities act, Graham, who is a resident of Harbor Springs, could not serve as city attorney.

The act specifies (85.9) that "no person shall be elected or appointed to any office unless he be an elector of the city, and if elected or appointed for a ward, he must be an elector thereof..."

An "elector" is defined as a U.S. citizen, 21 years of age, who has been a resident of the state for six months and meets local residence requirements.

Graham, who attended the meeting, said he is leasing a home in Harbor Springs and has no plans to move to Charlevoix.

Graham said he was sure there is an attorney general's opinion on file indicating that city attorneys need only be members of the Michigan bar, but he was unable to cite chapter and verse.

"I'd look silly to go along with the appointment and then find out it isn't legal," Gill said in explaining his "no"

Mill Project Costs Medusa $250,000

Medusa Cement Co. completed installation of a new segregating lining and new grinding balls in one of its 4000 HP grinding mills at the Charlevoix Plant at a cost in excess of $250,000.

Seventy-Five tons of cast liners and grates as well as 270 tons high chromium steel grinding balls, were installed by company employes in a record time.

The liners were shipped by sea from Antwerp, Belgium, to Baltimore, and from there by trucks to Charlevoix. The grinding balls arrived in Detroit on the first ship which cleared the St. Lawrence Seaway this year after opening of the 1971 shipping season.

The lining, invented in Germany, will increase the production rate of the mill by 15 percent to 1600 bags per hour, without extra power consumption.

Charles Elzinga Files Board Petition

School Superintendent Robert Miller reported Monday morning that Charles Elzinga is the first school board candidate to return his election petition to the board office. Elzinga a farm Bureau insurance agent, is running for a four-year term.

Other petitions are being circulated by Larry Warner, an employe of Maxbauer's Dairy; Robert Wasoski, veterans' affairs counselor; and William Wilson, public information officer for Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point nuclear plant. All are seeking the two-year term.

Mrs. Robert Hooper and Jack Rader, present members of the board, are not seeking reelection.

Larry Ford, who originally announced as a candidate, has withdrawn.

Contrary to a headline in last week's Courier, petitions must be returned to the board office by 4 p.m. May 17.

Smile, Kids, There's $$$ In Happiness

If you see lots of smiles around town these days, you can thank the First State Bank.

With the long, hard winter behind us and spring showing more promise every day, bank officials thought it would be a good time to turn on the smiles.

And they would like youngsters in town to help spread the happiness message by drawing their own particular brand of smiling happiness in the space provided in their advertisement on Page 12 of this weeks Courier.

Winners will receive $5, $3 and $1 savings accounts with the bank.

Which is certainly something to smile about.

OK, kids. Go to it. And keep smiling.

Band Earns Praise From Motel Mgr.

Although the Charlevoix High School Band received only a II rating in the State Band and Orchestra Association Festival in Otsego May 1, the trip resulted in more goodwill for Charlevoix High School than any number of I ratings.

Director Clarence Odmark has received a letter from Gary Thomas, manager of the Howard Johnson motor inn and restaurant in Grand Rapids where the band stayed overnight, praising the conduct of the group.

The letter reads:

"It was a pleasure to be of service to you and your band members this weekend. Thank you for remembering Howard Johnson's as Your Host of the Highway.

"Because of the excellent conduct and cooperation of your band members, we, each, wish to say thank you personally. You and your chaperones should have been very proud of the maturity of your group while they were dining at our restaurant."

The letter was signed by Thomas and nine of his staff members.

AN ESTIMATED 700 walkers took part in northern Michigan's first "Walk for Development" from East Jordan to Charlevoix, via Boyne City, on Saturday. Although financial returns are incomplete, some 220 walkers -- most of them young people -- completed the grueling 30-mile trek. Sponsors pledged to donate a given amount of money for every mile walked. Proceeds will go to charity. First "walker" to reach Charlevoix was John Peters, who reportedly ran most of the way. It took him eight and one-half hours to make the trip.

3 Millage Proposals To Go on June Ballot

Voters of the Charlevoix school district will be asked to vote on three millage issues totaling 10¾ mills in the June 14 school election following the unanimous action of the board of education Monday night.

The decision to ask for this amount followed a 75 minute executive session during which the members and the administration threshed out the final decision regarding budget needs.

The first and largest millage is the continuation of 6½ mills for a three year period. This issue expires this year. Monies derived from this levy is earmarked for operational costs and will cost the taxpayer $6.50 on each $1,000 assessed valuation.

The second is for 2¼ mills for one year or $2.25 per $1,000 valuation. This revenue is to be used for the present as well as an expanded program including vocational education.

The third issue is a two-mill levy for five years to establish a building and site sinking fund. A second ballot authoring the board to spread the millage will accompany this ballot. This will cost $2.00 per $1,000 valuation.

During the regular meeting, the board was advised by Supt. Robert Miller that the debt retirement millage will be cut back ¾ of a mill this year. This is millage levied to retire bonds for the present high school and the new K-4 school. This millage will be reduced to 3.15 mills from 3.90 mills or a total of ¾ of a mill.

In other action the board voted to make the last and final payment of $50,000 on a $120,000 state aid anticipation due Sept. 1 at the Charlevoix County State Bank. It was recommended that the note be paid by May 15. Monies received in a State Aid payment and tax monies will be used to pay the note.

Bids for two new 66 passenger school buses were opened. Bids for chassis were received from Barnes Inc. of Eastport in the amount of $5,039.45; Charlevoix Oil Co., $5,979.00 and Erber Auto, $5,734.60. The Barnes bid, being the lowest, was accepted. After evaluating the bids and presenting them to

Chamber 'Tab' To Boost City

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, in cooperation with the Charlevoix Courier, is preparing a tabloid newspaper on what the city has to offer vacationers. It will be widely distributed throughout the midwest at travel and sports shows. Publication is slated for early June.

Advertisers are reminded that such a publication not only will be a valuable asset to the Chamber in promoting Charlevoix but will also help draw new business to their establishments.

Their cooperation in making the publication a success will be appreciated.

Cable Trouble Douses Lights

The city electrical department is attempting to locate a break-down in an underground cable which resulted in a blackout of street lights on Petoskey-ave. and Dixon-ave. Friday and Sunday nights.

City Superintendent Thomas Hanna says the trouble apparently is in a buried cable in the Antrim-st section of street lighting system.

AN OPEN LETTER

The Park Place

Dear Patrons:

Thank you for the warm and enthusiastic reception you gave The Park Place during its first week of business in Charlevoix.

The proprietor of a new business is always encouraged by such remarks as: "We're glad you are here," "Charlevoix has needed a store like this," "I'll be in here often" and "Now I won't have to go out of town to shop."

Your remarks and enthusiasm, have confirmed our aim to fill a real shopping need for Charlevoixans and their neighbors.

But the important things during our opening were your friendly "hellos", warm smiles and firm handshakes.

Naturally we are glad you like our selections of cards, stationery, books and records, as well as our other merchandise. But we were also happy to hear you want us to expand our lines for your added shopping convenience.

We already have begun to do this.

If there is anything we can do to assist you in filling your shopping needs in Charlevoix, please let us know. We will do our best to deserve your year around patronage.

Cordially,

Jim Mielke

Library Notes

Something to Read While Paint Dries?

Everyone needs a rest from spring cleaning, house painting and gardening, so this week's column will suggest some titles which won't tax the brain but, hopefully will ease sore muscles and heal blisters.

'A Man From the Mist' by Mary Elgin is a Gothic novel. This book won't win any medals or awards but it's light and entertaining, and it will pass the time while the pain brushes are soaking in turpentine.

"The Raid," by Roger Frison-Roche is an excellent book. It deals with life among the Lapps in the years after World War II. The people of the far-flung settlements scattered across the immense white plain of Lapland live by and for their herds of reindeer. To guard and increase the herd is the entire business of their days. A stranger arrives in one of the villages to warn the settlers that their herd may be raided. The people don't trust him, but they permit him to stay and hunt. It is a simple, straightforward story of revenge, romance and adventure. It will hold the reader through sheer enjoyment.

"David" is a Biblical biography by Frank G. Slaughter. Nothing much more needs to be said. In this book the universally popular novelist brings his finest talents and scholarship to retelling the story of David, one of the most beloved of all Biblical heroes.

"Something In Disguise" is a witty and compassionate story by Elizabeth Jane Howard. It is her fifth novel. Born in London, the author was an actress and model before she turned to writing. The story concerns a modern-day Elizabeth who runs away from her home in the country to join her dilettante brother. She hires out as a temporary cook and, in this capacity, she meets and falls in love which every reader expects her to do.

"A Compass Error" by Sybille Bedford, deals with the story of Flavia Herbert, who is on her own in the south of France during a golden summer in the 1930's. This is the first novel in five years from Sybille Bedford and the sixth book she has written. It is a fine, entertaining story.

"The Color of Evening" is another distinguished work by Robert Nathan. It is a light and gentle story dealing with the romance between the artist, Max Loeb and a wisp of a girl who enters his life unexpectedly.

"The Widow" by Charity Blackstock, is a fine novel about Sheila Armstrong, widow of a brilliant anthropologist who is forced to come to grips with her own identity and with her role in her husband's untimely death.

Dutch Keeshonden, Pups At Home in Barnard Area

The Barnard area south of Charlevoix has long been known for its residents of Dutch descent, with their tidy farms and immaculate homes.

Among the newest Dutch residents in the area are a pair of beautiful silver and black Keeshonden, a relatively rare breed of dog which originated in The Netherlands.

On Easter Sunday, Tineke, Dutchess of Schuyler, gave birth to a litter of eight Keeshonden puppies — and the breed is well on its way to becoming a popular addition to northern Michigan dogdom.

"His magnificent stand-off silver and black coat with its elegant furnishings truly sets him apart from other breeds. His face is referred to as "foxlike"; his intelligent expression is added to by the striking "spectacle" markings around his dark eyes. Small, pointed and erect ears furnish his head with just the proper touch of alertness. A full plumed tail curled tightly over his back completes the silhouette of the breed," Westcott writes.

The Keeshond actually has two coats. The inner coat is soft, thick and downy. The outer coat is harsher and resists dirt and matting.

The Lehmans have found their Keeshonden to be ideal family dogs, friendly and affectionate with children. They also take easily to strangers whom their masters accept. However, they also are keenly alert and make excellent watchdogs.

The Keeshond is a very old breed, according to Westcott, one of the few throughout its history that has always been raised as a family companion and watchdog.

"The fact that they have not been bred to hunt, kill animals, attack or chase criminals undoubtedly accounts for the gentle, inteligent devotion. They are home-loving dogs, with a special fondness for children," Westcott writes.

Keeshonden are descended from the same prehistoric ancestry from which evolved the much larger Samoyeds, Huskies, Norwegian Elkhounds and the tiny Pomeranian. In the 17th Century they were used extensively as watchdogs on river boats, farms and barges. In Germany they were called "Wolfspitze," in France "Chiens Loup" and in Italy "Lupini."

The Dutch name is derived from Cornelius "Kees" de Gyzelaar, a leader in the Dutch Patriot revolt against the reigning House of Orange, who had one of the dogs as his constant companion. The dog became a symbol of the Patriot Party and when the party was defeated, the Keeshond became rare in Holland because of its political significance.

The dogs later became popular in England, and an English breed club was formed in 1926 with "Keeshond" as the official breed name.

The breed was registered with the American Kennel Club in 1930 under "Keeshonden" (plural for Keeshond) and the Keeshond Club of America was organized in 1935.

The Lehmans' pups, all of which will be registered with the AKC, will be ready for new homes in about three weeks.

MR. AND MRS. Charles Lehman of South Barnard-rd. pose with their male Keeshond, Snowdrift Schuyler, and one of their eight puppies born Easter Sunday. The rare breed of dog originated in Holland.

Brownies' Deadline

Sixty Charlevoix Brownies and their leaders are making plans for the annual Brownie Day Camp which will be held this year from June 14, through June 18, at the Girl Scout Campgrounds adjacent to the Belvedere Golf Club.

This summer Mrs. Edwin Mann and Mrs. Tracy Curtis will head the camp committee assisted by Mrs. Charles Hooker who is planning committee chairman and Mrs. Robert Timms who is the camp purchaser.

During the five days of camp the girls will leave Charlevoix each morning by bus or by car and spend the day at the campsite where they will learn how to plan meals, to build a safe fire, to cook, and then to leave the campsite clean and safe.

For many Charlevoix Brownies this day camp is the only camping which they will ever experience. The Girl Scout Council need volunteers who are willing to donate a few afternoons to teaching the campers such special subjects as nature study, dancing, gymnastics, singing or crafts.

Club Dines Roman-Style In Togas and Sandals

Anyone who wants to argue that Latin is a "dead language" would find plenty of opposition among the 40 members of the Charlevoix High School Latin Club.

The club held its annual spring banquet May 4 and club members turned out in togas and sandals to dine on Latin food with an American accent and sing Latin translations of American songs.

Club sponsor and teacher Mrs. Max Novak said the traditional Roman meal included "everything from eggs to apples – just like we would say from 'soup to nuts.' "

So in keeping with the Roman tradition, the meal – which was served by "slaves" on tables only two inches above the floor – started with a lettuce salad garnished with egg slices and ended with huge wedges of hot apple pie.

Inbetween were such delicacies of oven fried chicken, mashed potatoes and corn off-the-cob.

"Of course, the Romans didn't have potatoes," Mrs. Novak explained, "but the youngsters wanted them."

The Romans would have been equally puzzled by the huge dishes of golden corn. Both potatoes and corn are native to the Americas and were not introduced to Europe until post-Columbus days.

But ancient Romans would have felt quite at home with the hot rolls (panis) whipped up by High School chef Mrs. Marie Blissett and her staff.

So the menu, printed in Latin included "lac, album et fuscum" – white and chocolate milk.

The dinner-meeting was opened by President Debra Smith who delivered the welcoming oration and prayer.

Flumine secundo!
Vivitur, vivitur,
Vivitur, vivitur
Velut in somnio.

In addition to Miss Smith, class officers are Dinne Boss, vice president; Susan Pettis, secretary; Cindy Funk, treasurer; and Bill Wilson, historian;

"Slaves" are Rae Ann Slone, Darcy McCandliss, Connie Crain, Bobby Sladek, Mike Kane, Ed Buday, Judy Hamilton, Laura Custer and Sheilah Brady.

Middle School Principal Max Novak was guest of honor at the banquet He, too, wore a toga and sandals.

Illegal Billboards Plague Freeways

Illegal billboards are going up along Michigan's Interstate freeways about three times as fast as the state is able to take them down, according to State Highway Director Henrik E. Stafseth.

The Department of State Highways, working with the Attorney General's office, removed about 60 illegal billboards last year along three stretches of Interstate freeway in Ingham, Livingston, Oakland, Calhoun and Branch counties.

A recently completed Highway Department survey, Stafseth said, showed that 364 signs were erected during the last year along the 948 miles of Interstate freeways in Michigan. About half are in illegal positions, he said.

The Department expects to move this year against illegal signs along several stretches of Interstate freeway, Stafseth said. However, he added, observations by highway foresters and maintenance men indicate that many more new signs are going up than the Department will be able to take down.

"Michigan's billboard control law is so cumbersome, and so hazily defined in some areas, that we are not able to do the job we're supposed to do," Stafseth said.

He warned that the U.S. Department of Transportation has indicated it will withhold millions of dollars in highway construction funds from Michigan and other states which fail to enact billboard control laws meeting minimum federal standards. Because its law is deficient in that respect, Michigan has failed to share in federal grants to states having stronger controls.

"We definitely need a new or strengthened control law by July 1 of this year," Stafseth said.

Threat of Forest Fires Growing in N. Michigan

Northern Michigan's spring forest fire threat, delayed by last winter's heavy snow cover and this season's late breakup, is expected to reach its peak during May, warns the Department of Natural Resources.

The situation is gradually starting to build up in many northern areas where the last traces of snow have melted to expose dead and drying vegetation. Unless rains fall at the right times and in the right places, it will undoubtedly worsen during the next two or three weeks before spring green-up as debris burning hits full stride and thousands of mushroom hunters, fishermen, and other outdoor users move into northern forests.

"As a general rule," observes DNR Forest Fire Chief Robert J. Compeau, "more than 50 percent of this state's annual forest fire losses are suffered by the end of May because of the combination of conditions which are now developing in our northern areas."

"Naturally," he continues, "we hope to make a big improvement on that standing record this spring, but it's going to take the all-out cooperation of everyone."

On that score, Michigan is off to a good start this spring as 181 fires had burned only 1,631 acres through April 25. Most of that toll occurred in the southern Lower Peninsula where spring green-up is expected to advance far enough by next week to ease the season's fire hazards.

Through the same period last year, 552 fires had swept across 4,415 acres in the state.

In an effort to keep this spring's fire losses below last year, Compeau reminds landowners and outdoor seekers of several stronger safeguards in Michigan's forest fire law which took effect in 1970.

One of those changes requires debris burners in forest and grassland areas to obtain burning permits unless their containers meet new safety specifications. Such approved containers must be built of masonry or metal and have metal covers with openings no larger than three-quarters of an inch.

As in the past, rural landowners planning to burn debris in the open, must obtain burning permits before they set their projects afire. The permits are available free at field offices of DNR fire officers statewide and at local fire department stations in southern Michigan.

Under another tightened regulation which came into force last year, it is unlawful to discard any burning materials—lighted matches, cigarettes, ashes, etc.,—in forest and grassland areas of the state. That fire prevention rule covers motorists as well as outdoor users on foot.

"It means that motorists traveling in rural parts of Michigan must use ashtrays to dispose of their "smokes." The measure also requires foot-bound citizens in these same areas to make sure that their cigarettes and other burning materials are "dead out" when they dispose of them.

PEGGY CUTLER, a student at the Ironton School, demonstrates the throwing style she will use in the Special Olympics, scheduled for May 22 at Petoskey High School.

Shots Help Prevent Rubella in Kids

Local health departments in Michigan have begun the second phase of the statewide effort to "rub out rubella," the disease that has killed or crippled so many babies over the years.

An immunization clinic for youngsters is held the second Monday of each month from 1 until 3 p.m. at the Charlevoix County courthouse.

Other monthly clinics are conducted each month by District Health Department No 3 at the Bellaire courthouse, second Monday, 9:30 to 11 a.m.; Pellston Methodist Church, second Tuesday, 9:30 to 11 a.m.; Boyne City Presbyterian Church, second Tuesday, 1 to 3 p.m.; Gaylord's McReynolds Hall, second and fourth Wednesday, 9 to 11:30 p.m.; and Petoskey's old city hall, second Friday, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m.

Once commonly called German measles, Rubella used to be thought of as mild and unimportant, but over the past 25 years, research has shown it to be a major cause of birth defects and fetal deaths, when a mother contracts the disease during early pregnancy.

In the spring of 1969, a vaccine against it was finally developed and licensed, in time for use just before the scheduled onset of an anticipated national epidemic of the disease.

A "crash" immunization program in Michigan reached more than 80 percent of the kindergarten through third graders in the state - - the most concentrated group among the primary spreaders of the disease. This has successfully averted the epidemic, at least so far.

Now, public health officials point out, the need is to immunize the rest of the major susceptibles – all children from the age of one through eleven years. Until this has been accomplished, rubella still poses a severe threat to the approximately 200,000 women who become pregnant in Michigan each year. Even in non-epidemic years, it is estimated that the disease kills or cripples as many as 75 unborn children annually.

According to epidemiologists, this tragic circumstance – which costs society an estimated two million dollars in special medical educational, and social services – can be virtually eliminated if Michigan's ongoing rubella immunization program is successful.

The plan calls for vaccinating 80 percent or more of the more than one million children who are still potential carriers and spreaders of the disease, and then regular continuing vaccination of all youngsters as soon as possible after they reach one year of age. To help assure long range effectiveness of the "rub out rubella" effort, rubella immunization has been added to the "school enterer's law," affecting all Michigan children when they enter school for the first time.

This year, the public health plan is to reach the majority of youngsters in the target group; the older pre-schoolers and all the new Headstart and kindergarten children who were excluded from last year's public health campaign, as well as all the school children - - particularly in the younger grades – who were skipped or who missed immunization for various personal reasons last year.

The state - and federally-purchased vaccine is being made available free to local health departments and to private physicians so it will be obtainable from family doctors as well as through public health clinics. It is distributed from the state health department to the local departments and from them, to the physicians in their respective areas.

In addition to immunizing against rubella, the public health campaign will attempt to improve the status of other immunizations. Recently there has been evidence that increasing numbers of parents are forgetting to get their children vaccinated against measles, and some of the other disease entities for which the state supplies vaccines – such as smallpox, diphtheria, polio, tetanus (lockjaw), and pertussis (whooping cough).

Parents will be reminded that, just as their children become "Rubella Heroes" when they join the "army of the immunized" against rubella, they become full-fledged, all-around "Health Heroes," when they get their appropriate original or booster shots for these other diseases. They assure protection of themselves, their families, and their entire community.

Did Derby Sway Horse Race Vote?

By Rep. Richard Friske
106th District

After two called strikes, supporters of off-track betting finally got a hit last week in the House. The horse wagering measure, similar to New York's recently-enacted law, passed with two votes to spare. Two earlier ballots had produced fewer than the 56 votes needed for approval. On the third try, the count was 58 to 43.

The measure now goes to the Senate, where considerable opposition is expected. A similar House-passed bill failed to gain approval in the Senate last year.

Even if the Senate does approve, there's a chance Governor Milliken might veto the bill. He has said in the past he takes a dim view of government programs to encourage gambling, but has not to my knowledge stated a definite position on this bill.

The claimed intent of the bill, in simple terms, is to raise revenue for state and local governments without hiking general tax rates. This is to be accomplished by making an established form of legalized gambling more readily available to Michigan citizens.

The bill would establish six betting outlets governed by a central agency in an initial stage. If successful, the system would be expanded later. The pari-mutuel agency would be able to establish betting parlors in cities or townships of 20,000 or more population, if the local government gave authorization. Additional off-track betting establishments could be provided for every 100,000 population in the governmental unit. Local units of less than 20,000 population could request a betting outlet, but compliance with the request would be left to the discretion of the central agency.

Proponents of the plan, who refer to it as "voluntary taxation" or "painless taxation", believe it will raise some $40 million annually.

There are some very serious reservations held about this bill by myself and other opponents. We are simply opposed to state-sanctioned gambling. I see a danger of organized crime involvement, despite safeguards in the bill which seek to prevent such an occurrence.

Oddly enough, the Kentucky Derby may have played a part in successful passage of the bill. The sponsor of the measure commented that the success enjoyed by New York's off-track betting system for the Derby race may have convinced enough legislators of the feasibility of the program to put the bill over the top.

AGE OF MAJORITY

The bill to establish 18 years of age as the legal sign of adulthood in Michigan has completed one-third of the legislative process successfully. The Michigan House voted 73-30 last week in favor of the bill and sent it to the Senate for consideration there. Action on the bill in the Senate is expected to come within the month. Passage in the Senate is not expected to occur without some controversy, but if it makes it through that body it will be only a short time before it becomes law as the Governor has indicated his support of the measure.

The bill as it passed the House embodied all of the recommendations of the Report of the Commission on the Age of Legal Majority except their recommendation that 18 be the legal voting age. That requires a state or federal constitutional amendment. Such action will come at the federal level if 12 more states ratify the proposal. Twenty-six of the 38 necessary to effect a constitutional amendment, including Michigan, have already ratified the proposal establishing 18 as the nationwide voting age.

Michigan's new age of majority, if it becomes law, will literally make the 18 year old an adult legally. All rights and responsibilities formerly attained at 21 will be realized at age 18.

Attempts were made in the House to amend the bill to exclude the age for drinking and betting to leave those rights at age 21. The amendments were defeated, however, after extensive floor discussion, and the bill went on intact. Attempts will most likely be made in the Senate to amend the bill so there is still a chance that those rights will be denied the 18 year old.

The bill carries with it an effective date of July 1, 1971, and if passed Michigan will acquire several thousand new official adults almost literally "over-night."

Passage of a law, of course, can't really "make" anyone an adult. Only the individual can do that through his actions. Passage of this law would be a presumption that our young people are prepared for adulthood. It would then be their responsibility to measure up to that demonstration of faith in their maturity.

OOPPS... I made a mistake in my column last week, Frank Lennox's new gift shop, "Bits of Yesteryear", is located in the OLD "FIRST STATE BANK BUILDING" not the old Charlevoix County Bank Building.

I attended the second annual Hospitality Day in Petoskey at Staffords Bay View Inn last Thursday, May 6. It was a very interesting seminar on the impact of tourism to our area. Featured speakers were: Dr. Robert McIntosh, professor of tourism, Michigan State University and Wesley Tebeau, president of West Michigan Tourist Association. From all indications including our office, this coming summer season will smash all records previously set by tourists for accommodations, money spent, and travel distances. Looks like an excellent season ahead for Charlevoix.

Our tabloid... is coming along fine. Many businesses have contacted us here at the office for information. It will start working for us immediately upon printing, as the Golf Association of Michigan will be mailing it to all the applicants for the MICHIGAN AMATEUR GOLF TOURNAMENT. The Tournament will be held at the Belvedere Country Club on Tuesday thru Saturday, June 22-26 this summer.

The Retail Promotion Committee with Bob Lieberman met Tuesday, May 4. We discussed hours, promotions and general problems the businessmen in Charlevoix are faced with daily.

Shops Sprucing Up For Busy Summer

Although the economy has been touch and go all winter, present signs indicate that Charlevoix is in for a busy, and hopefully, a propserous summer.

Downtown traffic, in case you haven't noticed, is increasing with every passing day. And although it is still early May, it is sometimes difficult to find a parking place on Bridge-st.

Charlevoix residents are returning in droves from Florida, California and Arizona and a good many summer people are moving north early to open up their homes.

In addition, there appears to be an inordinately large number of tourists in town, despite the chill winds that occasionally invade the city from Lake Michigan.

Shopkeepers are expressing their confidence in the economy with all kinds of refurbishing and renovation.

Orm Bergeon has moved his clothing shop next door to brighter and more spacious quarters. A new front is being constructed on the building housing Leo Fairbanks' Pastry Shop and Ken Cellner's barbershop and fresh paint is in evidence all over town.

Furthermore, the summer of 1971 will see some new merchants in town.

Jim Mielke has opened The Park Place in the Hogan Building, specializing in books, greeting cards, stereos, tapes, records and other like merchandise --- a welcome and badly needed addition to the business community.

Frank Lennox is busily converting the old First State Bank Building into a "Bits of Yesteryear Shop," which promises to be an intriguing place for visitors and townspeople alike.

Bavarian-born chef Heinz Leutheuser has purchased the Bay Chalet restaurant (formerly the Sugar Bowl) and will open shortly on a year-'round basis. The restaurant has been closed since last fall.

And builder Steve LaBlance has a spanking new office complex under construction at the corner of Bridge and Upright-sts.

All of which seems to point toward a bright and prosperous summer for Charlevoix.

Walk for Development: Fun Way for Funds

They weren't mad at anybody.

They weren't protesting anything.

But an estimated 700 Charlevoix area young people, and a few oldsters besides, joined ranks Saturday in an unusual venture to raise money for charity.

They walked the 30 miles from East Jordan to Charlevoix, via Boyne City.

The idea behind the walk was to sign up contributors who pledged a given amount of money for every mile walked by the participant.

The money, when it is collected, will go to the Charlevoix County Nurses Fund, the county Big Brothers organization, a camp for the children of migrant workers, operation "Bootstrap" in Tanzania, Africa; Children's Medical Relief and the Freedom From Hunger fund.

At this point it is unknown how much money was raised, but the total surely will be considerable. Of the 700 who started, 220 finished the trek into Charlevoix Saturday evening, with every mile adding pennies, nickles, dimes and quarters to the fund.

In spite of blisters and aching arches, the so-called "Walk for Development" appears like a healthy, outdoor way to do good --- especially on a sun-shiney spring day.

'FISH' -- A Revival Of Neighborliness

(The following letter regarding the proposed establishment of a "FISH" organization in Charlevoix is being distributed by the Charlevoix Ministerial Alliance. As you will find, "FISH" has nothing to do with lake trout, or coho salmon. It is a unique organization designed to put new life into old-fashioned neighborliness. If you are interested, read on—and then contact Rev. Elmer Faust or Rev. Duane E. Imig to see what you can do to help.)

May 1971

Dear Friends:

Meet FISH! FISH is an organization that was founded in England in 1961. It was born of a conviction that one of the prime causes of our time's malaise has been the rapid decline of old-fashioned neighborliness—of caring about others. It had it's origin in an Anglican Church, with the idea of "getting religion off its seat and on its feet."

The Flyer first distributed in America read – "The FISH is simply a group of Christian people who wish to express their love and concern for their neighbors. There is no charge for any service we provide, you will never be asked to listen to any lecture. When you call the FISH number, a twenty-four hour answering service will put you in touch immediately with a volunteer eager to help."

The works of the average FISH chapter are as direct and uncomplicated as its organization. Each volunteer sets aside some time during which he either acts as the answering service telephone contact or is available to supply such service as emergency transportation, baby sitting, cooking, house work for the sick, etc. Most FISH services require no special talent, no money—just an honest interest in serving one's fellow man. "We must be willing to be inconvenienced, even taken advantage of occasionally and expect no recognition or reward beyond the satisfaction that comes from knowing we have helped someone in time of need."

This information was originally from the Reader's Digest.

The Charlevoix Ministerial Alliance has been looking into the possibility of a FISH organization for our community and perhaps for our county, depending on the interest of Boyne City and East Jordan. You might ask why are we coming to you. Mainly for an answer to a couple of questions and your cooperation.

THE QUESTIONS:

Do you think we need such an organization in Charlevoix?

Would you and your members be willing to support such an organization?

Giving time for services?

Giving money (the main expense being the telephone answering service estimated at $195.00 the first year and $180.00 thereafter.

If the answer to any, or all these questions is yes, could you send the name of someone to serve on a central steering committee. Send the names to: Rev. Elmer Faust 106 State St. Charlevoix, Mich. 547-2654 or Rev. Duane E. Imig 711 Dixon Ave. Charlevoix, Mich. 547-9812.

Sincerely yours,

Charlevoix Ministerial Alliance

Regrets Snafu Over Visit

Mrs. Albert Schaller
Box 528
Charlevoix, Michigan

Dear Mrs. Schaller:

In reply to your telegram of April 26, I deeply regret any misunderstanding that developed with the fine youth delegation from Petoskey and Charlevoix. I was asked, and had planned, to meet these young people over the weekend and simply was not advised that they expected the meeting to take place in my office Saturday morning, with their petition to be delivered prior to the Peace March. Had my previous communication with Mr. Oammann been somewhat more complete, I am sure that no misunderstanding would have arisen.

I feel I benefitted a great deal from my contact with these young people; they are certainly very thoughtful, thoroughly sincere, and completely dedicated to the cause of peace. I am sure that our country will be the better for their active participation in the American political process.

I am sure that you are aware of the widespread interest in the so-called "Mosher" or "Common Cause" resolution that American military involvement in Vietnam be terminated by the end of this year. However, a number of people are not aware that this withdrawal is to be carried out "provided there are provisions for the return of our prisoners and safe withdrawal of our personnel". I am deeply concerned that this resolution, if negotiations for the return of our prisoners were not concluded in the very near future, could lead to an almost open-ended commitment of American forces in Vietnam; I am completely opposed to such a commitment. Finally, I am deeply concerned that the American public would construe the resolution to mean that those Congressmen signing it anticipate the American troops to be out of South Vietnam in 1971. This, hopefully, could be true, but the American public must understand that, by the very terms of this resolution, our withdrawal could be quite distant.

Sincerely,
Philip E. Ruppe
Member of Congress

Gives Thanks For Help in Moving Tents

Charlevoix Courier
111 Bridge Street
Charlevoix, Michigan 49720

Dear Editor:

With the ecological wonders of "earth day" underway, Crooked Tree Girl Scout Council's Camp Sakakawea, near Interlochen, has been nudged into moving a whole unit to save Bass Lake from pollution. The existing wooden tent platforms were, after 15 some years, too flimsy to make the move.

What on earth were we to do? Mr. David Fowler, a member of our board of directors and camp development committee, approached Kiwanians both of Charlevoix and Petoskey. So.. with most generous checks in hand, What on earth were we to do? Mr. Robert J. Cook of Charlevoix High School shop, designed for us a workable tent platform prototype and from Kit Karson's came a low bid on materials. With all that stacked up lumber, What on earth do we do? Mr. Fowler, Mr. Cook and Mr. Charles Berg hammered nails for one long weekend, spurred by reinforcements supplied by Charlevoix Breakthrough.

Without such interest and backing, What on the earth would we do? May we please offer, to all, our thanks and appreciation!

Most sincerely,

Mrs. Julia L. Baer
Camp Director

Textbook Law May Backfire

The State Board of Education complains that twelve of the most widely-used textbooks in Michigan classroom fail to properly present the contributions of minority groups, according to State Sen. Robert Davis.

The board is said to be considering asking the legislature for a new law which would give it the authority to determine what books could be used in Michigan public schools.

While its motives may be good, the board's suggested action appears to have dangerous implications, Davis says.

It would put Michigan in the position of espousing political censorship of public education.

Censorship is a fine line. The term carries a bad connotation when a person disagrees with whatever censorship is being planned.

Before any action is taken to give the board the authority to censor public school textbooks, the other side of the coin should be examined.

What would happen if the board should be granted that authority and later it came under control of extreme rightists or extreme leftists? Davis asks.

If a coalition of, say, Ku Klux Klansmen should seize control of the board and it had the authority to order what the history books should say, how would minority groups fare?

The board would have the authority to approve use of only books that made minority groups look unfavorable.

Backers of the board's proposal should look very careful at it before seriously pushing it.

Clockwise

What's in a Name?

By Bob Clock

What's in a name?

I suppose people in the newspaper business are more concerned about names than folks who sell screwdrivers or bake bread for a living. I don't know.

But I do know that kids today are going around wearing names that I never heard of when I was young. And I'm never quite sure how to spell them unless I ask.

Back in the good old days when I was a boy, males of the species had such names as Bill, John, Fred or Mike. Allen was not a common name, but when a kid was called Allen it was always spelled A-L-L-E-N.

Nowadays a whole new crop of names have hove on the scene and they're spelled so many different ways that reporters, editors and proofreaders have taken to the bottle—the aspirin bottle that is.

Take the name Allen, for example. It can now be spelled Alan (as in Alan Ladd), or Allan or Allen. I even saw it spelled Alen once, but I think that was a typographical error.

In the old days, girls were usually called Mary, Jane, Elizabeth, Ellen, Ruth, Hazel or Virginia. Today we are overrun with Cheryls, Terris, Toris, Debras and a whole lot of names with fancy spellings.

Cheryl didn't really crop up until after World War II and it became very popular in the 1950's. But in those days it was always written C-H-E-R-Y-L.

Today we have such variations as Sherrill, Sheril, Sherry, Sherri, and Sheri. There's no sure way of knowing the correct spelling without asking.

Another relatively simple name that always gives me trouble is Donna. Now back when I was learning how to spell, Donna always had two "N's" – D-O-N-N-A. Today most of the Donnas in town spell it with one "N" — Dona. Phonetically, this should come out "doughna", but it doesn't. They still pronounce it Donna, regardless of how it is spelled.

Another appellation corrupted beyond repair is the good old Biblical name Deborah, with three full syllables. The modern spelling has been shortened to Debra – two syllables – and some youngsters actually are going down in the birth records as Debbie or Debby.

Some names are completely new, for both boys and girls, and it is impossible to determine a youngster's sex by his name. I know both fellows and girls called Karrell, for example. It is pronounced Carol, which makes it even more confusing.

Gail is another name used indiscriminately for both boys and girls. It can be spelled Gail, Gayle, Gaile – and probably a half-dozen other ways. When it comes to spelling of given names, anything goes and usually does.

Some names are wholly new. I never heard the name Kip, for example, until recent years. Now you find Kips in every classroom.

Dawn used to be that time of day just before daybreak. Now it's a cute little blonde with a pony-tail.

And so it goes.

I really didn't expect Matilda, Elizabeth, Gertrude, Agnes, Florence, Wilma, John, Joe, Tom and Bill to last forever, but I sort of miss them.

Lonesome Whistles

By Jim Fitzgerald

Goofy Americans, middle-aged and older, are currently suffering terrible fits of choo-choo nostalgia.

They quit riding trains years ago, because they liked cars and planes better. But now the populace is upset because the railroads have despaired of rolling empty seats across the countryside. Daily passenger service is being eliminated or severely slashed all over the country. And people who rode the train faithfully once every 10 years are wailing and moaning and yearning for the good old days when everyone went down to the depot to meet the 5:10.

I remember trains, too. Like a cinder in my eye. . . . .

Sometimes, in nightmarish flashbacks, it seems like my entire, three-year army career was spent on trains. In 1944, a train took me from home to Chicago, where I was inducted. Those were the glory-days when the high school band and gobs of sobbing relatives showed up at the depot to bid farewell to the brave draftees.

I can still see my two best friends, both 4-F, standing on the platform, laughing and holding hands with my girl friend, as I chugged out of their lives. I can't see them clearly, because the train window was filthy. But the bitterness still comes back clearly. My two friends were husky, healthy specimens. I was six feet tall and weighed 105 and was obviously a poor bet to live until midnight. I never did understand how come I was on that miserable train and they stayed home. Come to think, maybe they weren't holding hands with my girl. Maybe they were holding hands with each other. That window was really dirty. . . . .

In France, I was transported to the front lines in a 40 & 8 left over from World War I. That's a freight car, built in 1900, capable of carrying 40 men and eight horses. The men must be midgets and the horses must be rocking. There is no better way to get to know your fellow man intimately. I sat on the floor between two fat guys who didn't know I was there for the first two days, until I got sick and learned another use for my steel helmet.

It took that French train three days to go 200 miles. We kept getting shunted off onto sidings to let higher-priority trains go through. They probably contained generals and Red Cross girls on their way home for more doughnuts. One of the layovers was in Paris, and I still brag to my kids that I spent a night in Gay Paree. Even though we weren't allowed any farther from the train than the nearest bush (nobody worried about pollution in those days).

A year later, with the war over, I was back in the U.S. where my first assignment was riding shotgun on a prisoner train. I stood in the passageway between cars, with a carbine strapped over my shoulder, and prayed to God that the incredible shaking and bumping didn't make the stupid gun go off. I wasn't afraid of the noise or the bullet. I just didn't want to have to clean the gun because I still hadn't learned how to take it apart. Officers kept telling me my gun was my best friend but then they'd tell me to strip my weapon and that seemed like a vulgar way to treat a good friend. So I never did.

Anyway, seated inside the cars were German prisoners of war on their way to catch a boat home. My job was to make sure none of them jumped off in Cincinnati and went on welfare. Trouble came when I jumped off myself to buy a beer in Philadelphia. The train was supposed to layover for five minutes but a conductor blew a fuse and it pulled out early. And there I was, with my carbine, guarding the depot bar overnight. That was my last out-of-town assignment.

Soon I was sent home for good, in a brilliantly decorated, brand new uniform with which to dazzle my family and 4-F friends. Except the trip was made in a sweaty, 80-year-old Pullman that sucked in soot like a vacuum cleaner. When I arrived at the home depot, my father said: "If your side won the war, I'd hate to see the losers."

Onward and Upward but not by train, thanks.

Charlevoix, Michigan 49720

Dear Mr. Dammann:

Thank you very much for your recent letter. I am pleased to have had the opportunity of meeting the fine delegation from Petoskey and Charlevoix. They are a very thoughtful and well-informed group, and are very much a credit to their respective communities.

I regret our "a.m." misunderstanding. I anticipated meeting students over the weekend, but was not aware that they looked to that meeting taking place in my office Saturday morning, with their petition to be delivered prior to the Peace March.

Your views on political and national issues are certainly to be respected at all times, as is your capacity for articulating both. I regret any reference made regarding your credentials.

Sincerely,

Oil Tankers Getting Bigger Every Year

The ocean isn't getting smaller; the ships are getting bigger.

Mammoth tankers now plying the seas couldn't enter the Suez Canal if it were reopened. The Panama Canal is too small for them. The Strait of Malacca, off Sumatra, is too shallow for the sea-going giants.

BIGGER CRAFT PLANNED

But future tankers may dwarf today's 326,000-ton behemoths, the National Geographic Society says.

A 447,000-ton ship is expected to begin carrying crude oil from the Middle East to Japan in 1973. Japanese shipyards have drawn plans for 500,000-ton tankers, and million-ton vessels are under consideration.

A supertanker's lifeboats are nearly as large as the craft in which the Greeks transported jars of oil 2,400 years ago. The first ships built with tanks for carrying oil may have been 50-foot junks that sailed Chinese waters in the 18th century.

TOO DANGEROUS

The modern oil trade began in 1861 when a ship laden with barrels of oil sailed from Philadelphia with a shanghaied crew. Though seamen had shunned the cargo as too dangerous, the 224-ton brig delivered its oil to London uneventfully.

Square-rigged tankers began crossing the Atlantic two years later and proved so practical that shipping oil in barrels soon ceased. The first steamship designed specifically for carrying oil, the "Gluckauf," was built in 1886.

The 3,000-ton German ship was 300 feet long and 37 feet wide. With its smokestack and power plant in the stern, aft of the cargo tanks, it set the pattern for tankers to this day.

SEVEN-MASTED TANKER

The only seven-masted schooner ever built was a 5,200-ton launched in 1902. Fifty feet wide and 385 feet long, it required a crew of only 16 men, but was lost in a storm in 1907.

Modern 312,000-ton leviathans, with decks nearly four times bigger than a football field, are 1,135 feet long and 174 feet wide. Height from the keel to the wheelhouse equals a 15-story building.

When loaded, the huge tankers draw 79 feet of water—or about 17 feet too many for the Strait of Malacca.

Though they must make a 9,500-mile detour around Cape Horn to deliver Middle East oil to refineries in Europe, the new tankers are more economical than the 24,000-ton ships that used to thread their way through the Suez Canal.

FEWER CREWMEN

The huge tankers, operated by crews of less than 40 men, can deliver 2.3 million tons of oil at a time and load or unload in only 36 hours in port.

477,000-ton ship being built in Japan will be 1,243 feet long and 203 feet wide, but will employ only 36 crewmen. Doppler-sonar instruments will be needed because the bow will be too far from the bridge for the navigator to dock his vessel visually.

Proposals On Ballot

the board, Harold Kaufman, business manager, said that the Barnes Co. bid for the International chassis met all specifications and in some instances, exceeded them.

Three bids were also received for bodies to be mounted on the chassis. The Hoekstra Co. bid for Superior bodies in the amount of $4,895 each was accepted. Other bids were from the Great Lake Co for a Bluebird body, $4,850 and McFadden Co. of Lansing for a Wayne body, $4,950. The Superior body was recommended over the others because of the service the company offers, additional safety equipment not included in the bid and the difference between transporting the chassis to Ohio where the Superior Body Co. is located and Georgia where the Great Lakes Co. is located.

The buses were ordered for delivery by fall. However, no delivery date was promised.

Vane Smith, high school principal, reported to the board that the school would likely receive less money from Title I funds. This would mean a cutback in the library aid program and counseling in the Middle School, areas where the funds had been used in the past. He advised that the available funds be used for pre-school and early elementary fields or it might be cut back even more.

Miller reported on the University of Michigan Accreditation visitation the school had from Philip Hansen of the Bureau of School Services at the U. of M. He said that it was important that the school advance in the area of vocational education and offer additional counseling, especially in this field.

The board also heard a report on the recent Michigan Huron Shores Conference track meeting in which Bruce Meggison set a new record in the high jump after breaking his own record set last year. A motion commending the team and Meggison for their efforts was adopted.

Heard a letter from the Howard Johnson facility in Grand Rapids where the high school symphony band stayed while on a recent trip commending the band, its director, C.A. Odmark and chaperones for the manner in which the band members conducted themselves while at the restaurant and motel. A resolution commending Mr. Odmark and band for the manner in which they represented the school and Charlevoix was approved.

Heard a communication from Mrs. Albert Seger, local chairman for the Cancer Crusade, thanking the board for permitting the crusade to be conducted in the school through the "Send a Mouse to College" program.

Heard Mr Kaufman report he had requested an F.H.A. appraisal of the house constructed by the Building Trades class and that an open house would be planned as soon as it was completed.

The next meeting is May 24. Negotiations and board policy are among the issues to be discussed.

Essenburg's main object is to remove present city attorney John Michael from office, one of the campaign pledges he made when he ran against William Fochtman for the mayor's chair. However, he said he would retain Michael to handle the Shaw-Henderson litigation.

During the open session with the spectators, Alderman Boss said "I couldn't buy enough Tums to keep my stomach settled during the past month."

He said he was told by Essenburg earlier in the day that either the council approve Graham as city attorney or he (Essenburg) wouldn't reappoint Thomas Hanna as city superintendent. Alderman Jack Mol said he was told the same thing Monday by Essenburg.

Boss said that Essenburg failed to show up at a special meeting on the city budget Thursday night, "but the rest of us were here until midnight."

"To my knowledge, this council has never done anything under the table," Boss said. "But if we have to be told how to vote, the city will lose. This town can no longer function under the accusations that have been made in the past month."

Most vocal among Essenburg's supporters was Thomas LaBlance, a resident of Charlevoix Township. He said the city has lost confidence in city attorney John Michael.

William Kusina said he voted for Essenburg "because he ran on a platform of eliminating the city attorney."

George LaBlance suggested that Michael resign, as do members of a president's cabinet when a new president takes over.

"First we must find a qualified replacement," Gill told him, pointing out that the council is not against replacing Michael.

"But (Essenburg) has not elected to stay at the council meeting to discuss these things with us;" he added.

Superintendent Hanna said he submitted his resignation the day after the election, but that it was refused.

Unfinished business at the meeting, aside from bills, included a discussion of the budget and the setting of a date for the budget hearing; certifying the April 5 election; rezoning of the Art Christ property on Bridge-st.; the Shaw-Henderson litigation; the Alice-st. litigation; awarding of a group life insurance contract; and appointment of other city officers and committees.

After the meeting, Attorney Michael told the Courier that the Alice-st. litigation has been decided in favor of the city. Bob Hamilton, who owns property on both sides of the street where it fronts Round Lake, had sought a clear title under adverse possession. He has a small building on the property. However, Circuit Judge James Fitzpatrick last week granted the city's request for a summary judgement to dismiss the case, meaning that the 27-foot strip of land is still a city roadway.

In the Shaw-Henderson litigation, Michael said the case will be heard in federal District court in Grand Rapids after Judge Decker threw it out in Chicago last week on grounds of improper venue.

The suit was filed by Shaw-Henderson, second low bidder on the proposed waste water treatment plant, on grounds that Shaw-Henderson should have been awarded the general construction contract rather Clark Construction because of "irregularities" in Clark's bid.

The suit seeks to hold up federal money for the project and to restrain Charlevoix from entering into a contract with Clark Construction. It also asks the court to award the contract to Shaw-Henderson and have the city reimburse Shaw-Henderson $25,000 for submitting a bid, in addition to the contract.

A Grand Rapids law firm – Mika, Meyers, Beckett and Jones, represented by Steven Dykema – has been retained by the city to handle details in Grand Rapids when Michael cannot be present.

Light Bulbs

Members of the Charlevoix Lions Club will sell light bulbs throughout the city Wednesday, May 12. Door-to-door sales start at 5 p.m.

The bulbs will be sold in packs of two 100-watt; two 75-watt; and four 60-watt.

Proceeds will be used for community activities.

3 Boys Drown in Lake

Adventure on Raft Ends in Tragedy

Three little boys on a fishing expedition drowned in Lake Charlevoix Saturday morning when their raft apparently became awash in high winds.

The victims were Russell Watkins, 11, his brother Jerry Watkins, 9, and their companion Lindsey Knudtson, 11, all students in Charlevoix schools.

The Watkins boys' parents are M Sgt. and Mrs. Lawrence Watkins, 213 W. Garfield. Lindsey's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Knudtson, sr., 287 W. Carpenter.

Their bodies were recovered by skin divers Sunday afternoon in about 25-feet of water approximately 100 feet off the former Foster Boat Co. pier.

Charlevoix County Sheriff Philo Sumner theorizes that the youngsters were fishing aboard a five-by-eight foot work raft in the lagoon at the Irish Boat Shop marina when a gust of wind blew the craft into the open water of Lake Charlevoix.

The wind Saturday morning averaged 25 knots per hours out of the south and southwest. The water temperature was 42 degrees.

Although there were no eyewitnesses to the accident, the boys apparently fell, jumped or were washed off the raft as it passed the former Foster Boat Co. building on the Lake Charlevoix shore.

Sheriff Sumner said the bodies were located about 300 feet apart along a path that the wind-blown raft followed to the north side of the lake.

Members of the Joseph Baillargeon family who live on U.S. 31 north noticed the empty raft drifting in the lake from their breakfast room about 8:30 a.m.

Joe Baillargeon, 14, and his brother, Jeff, 11, later examined the raft when it drifted ashore about one-quarter of a mile east of the Lake Terrace Mobile Court and discovered fishing tackle tangled in the anchor line.

An unidentified resident later notified the Sheriff's Department that the raft had drifted ashore, assuming it had broken its moorings.

Sgt. Watkins, the father of two of the boys, said he was unaware that anything was amiss until 10 a.m. when he and other members of his family visited the marina to see if the boys were having any luck fishing. Their bicycles were on the scene, but the boys were missing.

Russell Watkins

Then one of Watkins' daughters noticed that the raft on which her brothers like to play was gone.

Jim Miller who works at the marina took Watkins in a boat to look for the raft and they discovered it ashore near the trailer court. When he was unable to locate the boys in the area, Watkins notified the sheriff's office and an all-out search for the missing youngsters was started.

Participating in the search Saturday were two helicopters from the Coast Guard station at Traverse City and all available Coast Guard craft out of Charlevoix, as well as city police and sheriff's deputies.

Dozens of local boaters also joined the search to no avail.

Saturday evening the search was continued by Sheriff Sumner and his men, using underwater lights. The water was so roily that the men returned to shore about 10 p.m.

Sunday morning at 8 a.m. Troopers Roger DeVolder of the Traverse City State Police Post and Bruce Smaltz of the Houghton Lake post donned skin diving gear and began a systematic search of the lake bottom, starting at the marina and working northward. Two sheriff's patrol boats were used to tow the divers.

Lindsey's body was found at 12:37 p.m. and Russell's at 2:31.

After a total of four hours in the bone-chilling water the troopers came ashore and the search was resumed by civilian skin divers.

Jerry's body was recovered at 4:45 p.m. by Pete Spieles, a Sixth Grade teacher, and David Fochtman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fochtman of Charlevoix.

All of the youngsters were described as good students by their teachers.

Miss Deborah Jehle, Jerry's Fourth Grade teacher at the Charlevoix Elementary School, said Jerry was a "bright, good student who did all of his work and got along well with his classmates."

She said his main love was fishing and he often brought up the subject during class discussion.

"He was hoping he'd have some luck this weekend," she said.

Lindsey was in Mrs. Vincent Chew's Fourth Grade room. "He was a very nice boy and had the nicest smile," she said. "He was a model citizen, always trying to do better."

On a recent writing assignment, the children were asked: "What does God look like?"

Lindsey wrote: "God looks like someone I knew for a long time. He is good, kind and makes people happy. If God was my father, I would be nice to him."

On another assignment, Lindsey said his chief concerns were "pollution and war in Vietnam."

"He was a very bright boy and had a cute sense of humor," said his math teacher, Mrs. William Haggard.

The youngsters left on their fishing trip about 6:30 Saturday morning. Mrs. Watkins had taken the boys to the Belvedere Golf Course the evening before to look for nightcrawlers and Lindsey stayed overnight with Russell and Jerry.

Sgt. Watkins said he arrived home late Friday night from Chicago and was scarcely awake when the youngsters got up, fixed breakfast and left the house.

Sgt. Watkins has been assigned to the Air Force's Radar Bomb Scoring Squadron even since the unit moved to Bay Shore from Ironwood eight years ago.

Funeral services for Russell and Jerry were held from the First Baptist Church at 8 p.m. Monday, the Rev. John Cail and the Rev. Jack Harris officiating. Burial will be in

Council OK's Hoffman For City Attorney Post

Mayor's Choice Wins Approval

The City Council Monday night approved Mayor Andrew Essenburg's appointment of Robert Hoffman as city attorney. Hoffman replaces John Michael who has held the post for eight years.

Aldermen Robert Gill, Jack Mol, Roger Westenbroek and Nathan Boss approved the appointment. Aldermen Conrad Klooster and Clifton Sundberg were absent.

Last week, Essenberg appointed attorney Steven Graham of Harbor Springs for the post but the appointment was turned down by the council on grounds that the Fourth Class Cities Act does not permit out-of-towners to hold the office.

Essenburg gave Hoffman's appointment top priority on his agenda and the action was approved without discussion.

Hoffman, who has practiced law in Charlevoix since 1965, attended at the special meeting.

Michael was in his office in the Pine River Building, working on a brief to be filed the next day in the Shaw-Henderson litigation.

Michael was surprised when he learned of the council's speedy approval of Hoffman's appointment. He thought the councilmen would have wanted more time to think it over.

Also appointed were Glenn Pemberton, acting police chief, and John Curtis, fire chief.

Essenburg appointed City Superintendent Thomas Hanna to his old post, but Hanna said he would like the council to withhold approval until a job description can be drawn up. The council agreed to come up with a job description outlining his duties within 60 days.

The council set May 24 at 8 p.m. as the time of the hearing on the city budget.

Following the meeting, the council adjourned to discuss the budget, which calls for general fund expenses of $324,300,000.

Councilmen reported unofficially that the budget probably will require an additional four mills for city operation, in addition to an extra six or seven mills to pay off the $700,000 bond issue for the new waste water treatment plant. For the past several years Charlevoixans have paid eight mills for city operation.

Added operating costs arise from improved wages and fringes for city employes who are unionized this year for the first time. The city also anticipates a decrease in profits from the electric fund because of higher charges by Consumers Power Co.

The council also:

–Accepted the LaBlance Agency bid for group life insurance for 34 city employes at a cost of $84.94 a month.

–Adopted a number of resolutions recommended by the state to improve accounting procedures. The action involved setting up a Trust and Agency Fund for special-purpose moneys and a Special Assessment Fund to handle special assessment monies.

–Told Art Christ that the council would come up with a recommendation June 7 on his request for rezoning of his property at 902 Bridge-st., from R-2 to C-1.

–Approved fire and ambulance contracts with Marion and Hayes Townships and a fire contract with Eveline Township.

Society Honors Bob Cook

Robert Cook, vocational education director for Charlevoix High School, has been selected "Master Teacher of 1971" by the Michigan Industrial Education Society.

Superintendent Robert Miller said it was the second time a Charlevoix teacher has been named for the award, Uno Sournela having been singled out for the honor several years ago.

He said until now only large communities such as Detroit and Ann Arbor have had two teachers win the "master teacher" title bestowed by the society.

Cook graduated from Harbor Springs High School in 1935, received his B.S. degree from Western Michigan University and has done graduate work at Michigan State University. He has taught for 31 years, with most of his teaching time logged at Charlevoix.

Cook also has had plenty of practical work experience as a construction contractor and the builder of jigs and fixtures for toys and fishing tackle.

He also helped organize the Top-o-Michigan Industrial Education Association and has been actively involved in Michigan Industrial Education Society affairs.

Cook was honored at a banquet sponsored by the MIES at the Lansing Civic Center May 14.

U.S. Court Weighs Suit Against City

Federal District Judge Albert Engel in Grand Rapids said Friday that he will decide on May 26 on legal issues involved in an attempt by Shaw-Henderson Construction Co. to have the contract for construction of Charlevoix's proposed waste water treatment plant awarded to Shaw-Henderson rather than Clark Construction Co. of Lansing.

Shaw-Henderson, which was second low bidder on the project, has sought injunctions in federal court against the city for awarding the contract to Clark and against the federal government, which is one of the funding agencies.

Shaw-Henderson wants the contract, plus $25,000 from the city for offering a bid.

At the hearing Friday, Charles Boyle, an attorney for Shaw-Henderson, said that if his company is not awarded the contract, considerable unemployment will result in Cheboygan.

At the hearing, City Attorney John Michael submitted a motion that the Shaw-Henderson suit be thrown out on grounds that it should not be tried in federal court.

Judge Engels said he would decide May 26 on: (1) federal jurisdiction, (2) Shaw-Henderson's request for injunctive relief, and (3) the merits of the case.

The hearing was adjourned to the court jury room where attorneys and the judge met from 2:30 until 7 p.m. Friday.

Patricia Ruis, "Hud" Drenth Lead Class

Patricia Ann Ruis will serve as valedictorian and Dennis "Hud" Drenth will be salutatorian of Ellsworth's 1971 graduating class.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ruis, of Ellsworth, Miss Ruis had a grade point average of 3.61.

She is a member of the National Honor Society and has won the Betty Crocker Homemaking award. She will attend Lake Superior State College on a scholarship.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Drenth, Drenth had a grade point average of 3.27.

He has been active in athletics and was a member of the Honor Society his junior and senior years. He will attend Ferris in the fall, majoring in pharmacy.

C. A. Odmark

To Honor Director For Long Service

Clarence A. Odmark will celebrate his 25th anniversary as Charlevoix High School band director at a reception following Saturday evening's Symphony Band concert in the high school gymnasium. The reception is being sponsored by Charlevoix Band Boosters.

Odmark was graduated from Eastern Michigan University in 1938 and began his teaching career at Almont, Mich., about 50 miles north of Detroit.

In February, 1943, he entered the armed services, serving with the 311th Air Force Band at Shaw Field, S.

Vandals Fell Utility Pole, Consumers Gets Warrant

Consumers Power Co. has been granted a "John Doe" warrant by County Prosecutor Harvey Varnum for the "apprehension of any party or parties who have willfully and maliciously injured or tampered with company transmission line facilities" near the Big Rock Point nuclear plant.

The warrant was asked by the company after a 75-foot utility pole near the plant was toppled near the plant last Wednesday night. The pole fell into 138,000 volt transmission lines, automatically shutting down the Big Rock Point plant. Repairs were made and the plant resumed operations the following day at 6 p.m.

The incident apparently was connected with a state-wide strike against Consumers by the Utility Workers Union of America which began the same day as the pole-cutting.

In addition to the warrant, the company is offering to pay cash rewards of from $1,000 to $25,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons found guilty of willfully damaging company facilities.

The strike-bound utility posted the rewards in the face of continuous incidents around Michigan involving damage to some of its facilities.

The reward offer will remain in effect for the duration of the current emergency, the company said.

Consumers also extended the reward offer to persons supplying information leading to the conviction of individuals who willfully interfere with the company's efforts to supply its service to the general public.

Since the strike started, some non-union workers reportedly have been denied access to the Big Rock plant until a sheriff's patrol car arrived on the scene.

Charles Gus Sonnenberg of Charlevoix, president of Local 346 of the Utility Workers of America, says 24 issues remain unresolved in negotiations with the company, including four major ones. They are:

1. Improved wages.
2. Improved pensions.
3. Terms of the contract. (Consumers wants a three-year contract; the union is holding out for a two-year contract.)
4. Combination assignments. (The company would like one crew to do both gas and electrical work on the same project.)

Local 346 has 80 members in Charlevoix, Boyne City, Gaylord, Rogers City, Indian River and Cheboygan. About 30 of the members are employed at the Big Rock Point plant.

Still Some Openings At Girl Scout Camp

Mrs. Julia Baer, director of Girl Scout Camp Sakakawea, announces that the first period, July 18-31 is filled.

The resident camp for all girls in the Crooked Tree Girl Scout Council area still has vacancies in the Aug. 15-28 period; as well as the Cultural Village camp program for experienced campers and Junior High School age girls; Aug. 1-14. This will include special events in dancing, music, painting, and the arts.

Leonard Graf, engineer for Gourdie, Miller and Batzer, who is helping the camp with new construction and sanitary-water facilities, has enlisted the assistance of the Grand Traverse bay Kiwanis Club, which will provide labor to build six new tent platforms.

Dave Fowler of Charlevoix, with volunteers from the Charlevoix schools have built two new tent platforms for Camp Sakakawea, with funds for materials provided by the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club.

Many area service clubs have contributed "camperships" to help girls who might not be able to attend camp for financial reasons. They include the Ludington Opti-Mrs. Business and Professional Women of Cadillac and Traverse City, Boyne City American Legion Post 228, Ludington Moose Club, Traverse City Woman's Club and the Grand Traverse Bay Kiwanis Club.

Applications for assistance are numerous this year, and the council is trying to help as many girls attend camp as possible.

Registrations and applications should be sent to the Crooked Tree Girl Scout Council office in Traverse City as soon as possible.

The Girl Scout programs of the council are partially supported by ten United Community funds in the 11 counties served by the council.

Girls who are 16 to 17 years old and wish to become camp counselors may apply for the Counselor - In - Training program July 11-13. For further information, write to Mrs. Julia Baer, camp director, 718 Park-st. Charlevoix, Mich., or call the Girl Scouts office, WI 7-7354 what is good?

We search constantly for something good . . . good things, good ideas, good people, and good times. But we're seldom satisfied until we begin to understand the only real basis for man's fulfillment. Jesus described it when he said, "There is none good but one, that is, God" (Matt. 19:17). Hear a one-hour public lecture called "What Is the Good that Satisfies?" by EDWARD C. High Water Threatens Great Lakes Shoreline

Various methods of shore protection are possible for Great Lakes residents who are threatened by record high water levels predicted for this year, a University of Michigan expert says.

The U.S. Geological Survey expects the Lake Michigan level to be at least one-foot higher this year than last.

Prof. E.F. Brater of the U-M College of Engineering says that property owners can reduce damage caused by abnormally high water levels–perhaps a foot higher than last year's destructive crests–by means of two well established methods. They can either create a higher, wider beach or build a protective structure.

Brater recommends that anyone interested in these techniques write the U-M department of civil engineering (West Engineering Bldg., U-M, Ann Arbor, 48105) or the Michigan Water Resources Commission (Station B, Lansing 13, Mich.) for the free booklet "Low Cost Shore Protection for the Great Lakes."

Prepared by engineers at the U-M Lake Hydraulics Laboratory in co-operation with the Water Commission, the booklet contains photos, drawings and detailed "how to" information for preventing erosion.

Brater says that building a higher, wider beach is the preferred of the two basic methods for most of the Michigan shore line. This involves using "groins" and placing sand fills which not only stop erosion, but also maintain the beach for recreational purposes.

Groins, Brater explains, are solid dock-like structures extending from the dry beach into the lake at right angles to the shore line. For maximum results they should be built in a successive pattern. However, Brater adds, the particular location dictates the nature of the protection used, including the length, width, height, and spacing of the groins.

Since groins can be constructed of steel, timber, rock, concrete or combinations of these materials, they are within the bounds of most budgets, Brater notes.

Sand fills, the only method of beach protection which requires no structures, are used to raise the flatter portion of the beach. A higher beach causes the waves to expend their energy before reaching the more vulnerable shore areas, Brater explains.

However, sand fills may be gradually–or quickly–carried away by shore currents. They are better retained, and therefore more effective, when used along with a groin system, Brater says.

A revetment–layers of graded stone placed directly on the bank–can be used to provide immediate protection in serious erosion situations, he adds. The layers of different-sized rocks should be placed with largest size on top. The smaller stones prevent water from "jetting through" openings between big rocks, eroding the bank, Brater explains.

The U-M hydraulic engineer notes that revetments actually tend to increase erosion because their smooth surface often provides less resistance to forming shore currents than the original beach.

Brater stresses that sea walls should be used as a last

Detroiter Buys Lot In Twp.

Jordan Raider of Detroit was high bidder on the North Point lot auctioned off by Charlevoix Township May 8. He got the lot for $3,700.

Bidding on the property started at $2,000.

At the township meeting May 10, board members learned that the township has secured 20 refuse barrels from Medusa Portland Cement Co. to be placed at North Point and Bells Bay.

The board entered into a contract with Bill Marme to empty the barrels.

The board also learned that easements have been secured for the laying of a water main from Mercer and Division-sts. east into North Point. Work on the project will start shortly.

The township is hoping to buy water from the city. However, if the city is reluctant to add any more township customers, the township will drill its own wells and go into the water business.

The next meeting of the township board will be at 8 p.m. June 14 at the former township hall on Norwood-rd. which has been refurbished. For several years, meetings have been held in the VFW hall on U.S. 31 north.

A furnace has been installed and gas and water lines are being extended to the building.

Nursery Sets Meeting Date

Parents of pre-schoolers interested in sending their youngsters to the Charlevoix Nursery School next year are invited to a meeting May 20 at 8 p.m. in the basement of the library.

The nursery is winding up its first year of operation in Charlevoix. Classes will resume in the fall.

MRS. ELIZABETH (Mickey) Pierce and Dave Phillips check menu of Grey Gables restaurant which they have purchased from Mrs. Florence Dundas and Clark Nehls. Mrs. Dundas and Nehls will continue at the restaurant in an advisory capacity.

Oakland U. Chefs Buy Grey Gables

Grey Gables Inn, a landmark on Belvedere-ave., has been sold by Mrs. Florence Dundas and her son, Clark Nehls, to Mrs. Elizabeth (Mickey) Pierce and her former boss at Oakland University, David Phillips.

Details of the transaction were handled by Colwell Realty and attorneys for the two parties. Colwell is represented locally by George LaBlance.

Mrs. Dundas and Nehls will stay on at the restaurant in an advisory capacity, the new owners report.

Mrs. Pierce and Phillips come to Charlevoix from Oakland University where Mrs. Pierce was manager of the grill and Phillips was food service manager.

They plan to maintain the same service and high quality food that has made the Grey Gables a benchmark for other restaurants the world over.

"Good food, good service—that's our motto," says Mrs. Pierce, a native of Detroit who got into the food service business during World War II in order to raise enough money to buy a piano for her daughter.

She took a kitchen job with the Fred Sanders Co. and worked her way up to experimental cook for the Sanders chain. She also ran her own restaurant—Pierce's Dairy Bar and Grill—in Rochester before joining Oakland University 13 years ago.

In addition to running the university grill, Mrs. Pierce served hungry patrons of the Meadowbrook Festival eight weeks during the summer. Her gross last season at Meadowbrook was $74,000 – all accomplished with student help.

Phyllips also was born in Detroit and lived in River Rouge where his father was chief of police. He cooked on the steamer E.T. Weir for three seasons before entering Henry Ford Community College as a hotel and business administration major. He also attended chef's school at the American Culinary Institute at New Haven, Conn.

He worked for Schentsul's cafeteria in Grand Rapids and for the J.L. Hudson Co. in Southfield (Northland) and Pontiac before moving to Oakland University as food services director two years ago.

Mrs. Pierce has moved into the apartment above the restaurant. Phillips, his wife, Gale, and 16-month-old son Brian will occupy the cottage behind the restaurant.

In addition to operating the restaurant, they intend to push a specialty they both enjoy—catering to private parties.

Mrs. Pierce says she intends to make all of her own bread and pastry.

In the near future the restaurant will open for lunches as well as evening meals.

Sgt. Warren Frank, wife and family, who is stationed with the U.S. Air Force in North Bay, Ont., Canada, visited the past weekend with Mrs. Frank's sister and brother-in-alw, Mr. and Mrs. William Stevens and family and other relatives. The Stevens live on the former John Smith Homestead.

Mr. nnd Mrs. Larry Heldt and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Swan and daughter, Teresa, all of Detroit, visited the past weekend with their mother, Mrs. Frank Matchett.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Lapp and Wendy and James Warner of Lansing spent the past weekend with their parents, the Jasper Warners.

Recent guests with Mr. William Mayer were sons, William jr. and Dwayne of Stockbridge. During the past weekend, Mr. Mayer visited relatives in Jackson, Stockbridge and West Unity, Ohio.

resort, where any additional slumping of the bank would cause destruction of a home or cottage. The near-vertical faces of sea walls cause a violent up-and-down motion, which tends to scour out the sand in front of the wall. The result is that such walls are undermined and frequently collapse.

Brater advises that neighbors sharing a shore line should form a group and work together. Beach-wide participation is necessary for real effectiveness, he says.

Brater suggests that concerned citizens attend the Coastal Zone and Shoreline Management Conference to be held at the Park Place Hotel, Traverse City, May 26-28. Sponsored by the U-M Sea Grant Program and the Michigan Water Resources Commission, the conference is designed to disseminate information on shore line processes and management.

Ill Wind Claims Three Little Boys

Few tragedies in life are as hard to bear as the death of a child.

And when three youngsters are lost at once, as happened last weekend in Charlevoix, grief extends beyond the family to the community as a whole.

Every household in Charlevoix shared the anxiety of the Lawrence Watkins and Lindsey Knudtson, sr. families when word spread Saturday afternoon that Jerry and Russell Watkins and Lindsey Knudtson, jr. were missing on a raft in Lake Charlevoix. Jerry was nine; Russell and Lindsey were eleven.

Hope ran high until nightfall that the three "Huck Finns" had decided to camp out, had hitch-hiked to Petoskey or were spending the day with friends.

When the bodies were recovered from the lake Sunday afternoon, there was not a household in Charlevoix that failed to share the grief of the bereaved families.

What makes the tragedy so difficult to bear is that it could have happened to any adventuresome boy. The three youths were experienced in and around water. They had spent many hours fishing together in the Stover Creek area. And despite their young years, they apparently had a healthy respect for the Great Lakes and adjoining waterways.

Sheriff Philo Sumner surmises that the three were simply fishing from the raft in the relatively placid waters of the Irish Boat Shop marina when an errant gust of wind propelled them into open water. If this is so, then the accident certainly must be entered as "an act of God" and nothing more.

No number of safe boating courses, no stern advice on water safety would have helped. If Sheriff Sumner is correct, the boys were suddenly moved from a "safe" boating situation into an extremely hazardous one without warning.

"Acts of God" are no easier to accept than those in which fault may be more readily ascribed. But the families of Jerry, Russell and Lindsey might find some small comfort in the knowledge that their sons were neither foolhardy nor timid. They simply were the victims of capricious circumstance.

City Hall Melodrama: 'Me Tarzan, You Jane'

When it comes to Mayor Andy Essenburg and the City Council, you can scarcely say that the honeymoon is over.

In fact, if last Monday's council meeting is any indication of the rapport between the two parties, the wedding is still a long way off.

Mayor Andy has adopted a "Me Tarzan, you Jane" attitude toward the council which doesn't sit at all well with his six strapping subalterns.

And if Charlevoix is going to make any progress at all in the next year there simply has to be more give and take on both sides.

The mayor's walk-out at the May 10 meeting after the council refused to accept his nomination of Steven Graham of Harbor Springs as city attorney was uncalled for. Essenburg knew the council had no other choice after it was pointed out that the Fourth Class Cities Act expressly prohibits the appointment of a city officer who does not live in the city.

The mayor's hasty departure threw city affairs into a turmoil, particularly in the finance department. City paychecks were held up 24 hours until the council had an opportunity to call a special meeting to approve bills.

A second special meeting had to be called for May 17 to take care of all the other unfinished business which was left on the table when the mayor left.

At this writing, the May 17 meeting is still some hours away, but all indications are that Essenburg will appoint Robert Hoffman as city attorney, replacing John Michael. Since Hoffman is a resident of the city and is otherwise qualified, we cannot see how the council can fail to accept the appointment in good faith.

We certainly feel that Michael has done a good job for Charlevoix. He attends every council meeting and is called upon a half-dozen times at each session for an opinion or an interpretation. The number of hours he devotes to city business is staggering.

But Mayor Essenburg ran on a platform of removing John Michael from office -- chiefly on grounds of Michael's alleged dual involvement in the Hampton Village litigation -- and we believe that the mayor deserves the council's support in his choice of city attorney.

Certainly, at this juncture, there is no way that the mayor and the present city attorney will ever be able to work together on the same team, and teamwork is what Charlevoix urgently needs if it is ever to cope with its myriad problems.

Although Michael was cleared by the attorney general of any conflict of interest in the Hampton Village litigation, we still feel that it would have looked better if he had elected to represent either the city or the developer -- but not both -- in an effort to avoid the appearance of conflict.

But Hampton Village is ancient history and today's problems need answers today. If a new city attorney is the solution, let's find one and put him to work. Quick.

Friske Rips Milliken's Share Plan

State Rep. Richard Friske (R-Charlevoix) has branded the state-local revenue sharing plan being promoted by the governor and now under consideration by the House Taxation Committee as "not so much revenue sharing as revenue stealing."

"The plan is nothing more than robbing Peter to pay Paul," Friske said. "We are given the impression that it is something that will be the salvation of local units of government. Actually it would be the damnation of many local governments that would have little or nothing to gain and a great deal to lose. It's nothing but a hoax."

Under the plan, state income and intangible taxes, now shared by the local units of government on a per capita basis, would be distributed under a formula that would take into consideration "local relative tax efforts." This would be determined by dividing the local community's tax effort rate by the average tax effort rate for all local governments in the state.

"If we look at this closely," Friske said, "we can readily see that it would be robbing the suburbs. Suburban residents who pay their fair share of state income and intangible taxes would not be getting a fair return when the state distributes the money with local governments. The plan is heavily weighted in favor of Detroit and other large cities in the state, most of whom already collect local income taxes from suburban residents."

The revenue-sharing plan does not include the sales tax because the State Constitution mandates that that tax be distributed solely on a per capita basis. "I would like to see a similar protective cover for the income and intangibles taxes so that the people who pay those taxes have some assurance that they will get back an equitable share to pay the costs of their local governments," Friske stated.

Friske charged that the "local relative tax effort" as set down in the governor's formula "only tells part of the story of what people are doing for themselves locally."

"Whatever happened to local tax effort for schools?" he questioned. "School taxes account for our biggest item on our local tax bills. But under the new formula school taxes will not be considered in the 'local tax effort.' As a representative of an urban area, I refuse to stand by and see my constituents have their pockets picked."

"Gov. Milliken and Mayor Roman Gribbs of Detroit recently gave the people a long dissertation on TV as to how state revenue sharing would help to solve Detroit's financial crisis. They talked at length as to how this legislation would help Detroit, but not once did they bother to explain what they meant by state revenue sharing."

"As far as I am concerned the Governor is not going to get away with his cooked up formula to rob the suburbs," Friske continued. "If his revenue stealing plan reaches for floor of the House I will do my best to defeat it and I would urge other interested persons to join with me in this effort. My phone number is 517-373-0829."

Clockwise

Sayonara, Joe

By Bob Clock

I received a letter Thursday that sent me spinning back 20 years and across 8,000 miles of land and water to my old Army days in Japan and the buddies I lived with and worked with during the Occupation.

I received my orders for the Far East Command in September of 1951 – orders which could have meant a foxhole in Korea or a desk job in Japan. I was lucky and drew the desk job, being assigned to the Public Information Office of Japan Logistical Command, headquartered in the mustard-colored Customs Building on Tokyo Bay in downtown Yokohama.

Our job was to crank out news releases and radio tapes about GI's serving in Japan for hometown consumption.

We also put out a weekly tabloid newspaper called the JLC Journal which was published each week for the 15,000 American troops scattered throughout the Land of the Rising Sun.

The PIO office had a full complement of officers, including a full colonel, a couple of captains and a lowly lieutenant who was in charge of the radio section.

But the bulk of the news work was done by the enlisted men: Dick Cassidy of Indianapolis, Bob Lentz of Jeffersonville, Ind., Bud Wright of Coffeeville, Kans., Don Koenig of St. Louis, Mo., Tony Ricketti of Philadelphia, Joe Haas of Chicago, and myself, a recent resident of Detroit.

I don't know whether it was because we were so far from home or our mutual interest in newspapering, but I never again expect to work with such a closely-knit group.

We lived in the same quonset hut at Camp Coe, constructed in a bombed-out area of the downtown section only one block from glittering Isezaki-cho, the Bridge-st. of Yokohama.

We ate breakfast together at the mess hall. We walked to the office together. We worked together, ate lunch and dinner together and spent all of our spare time together, which usually meant cabaret hopping from Nikko to Kamakura.

All of us except Joe Haas had some formal college training as newsmen. Haas started as a copyboy on the Chicago Tribune in 1947 and worked his way up to reporter before being drafted. And he was far and away the fastest, most colorful reporter on the staff.

Joe could handle any assignment, but his first love, even then, was the role of critic. I don't think the Journal carried a single book or movie review that didn't carry the by-line: By Joe Haas.

And his reviews were good, too. If Joe like a movie, chances are you would, too. And if he said a book stunk, well it probably did. He has a way with words that could conjur up his feeling of a book or movie in a few deft sentences and his reviews were always good reading.

His heroes were Nelson Algren, author of "The Man with the Golden Arm," and Ernest Hemingway, whose short novel "Old Man and the Sea" appeared in Life Magazine while we were in Japan. Joe thought "Old Man" was one of the finest novels he had ever read.

Joe didn't particularly like being in the Army, but he loved Japan and the Japanese people. He looked forward to the day when he could refer to himself as an "old Japan hand."

If Joe could have turned himself into a Japanese he would have. He even engaged a tailor once to make him an authentic Japanese kimono, something he could take home with him as a reminder of the casual life-style came to enjoy in Japan.

But Joe, with his red hair and stocky built could never be mistaken for a Japanese.

Although Joe admired Japanese simplicity, his own life was scarcely simple. He was too busy, either finishing a book, sampling a new dish, visiting new places or striking up conversations in pigeon English with street girls, fruit peddlers, pedicab operators and cleaning women.

I think he was the only GI in Japan who read the collected works of Lafcadio Hearne in an effort to learn as much as possible about Japanese life and culture.

Joe Haas
...an old Japan hand...

In the fall of 1952, publication of the JLC Journal was discontinued after the command became too big for a single newspaper and the staff was scattered. Bob Lentz was shipped back to the states for discharge, Joe Haas and I were tranferred to Stars and Stripes and Tokyo and the remainder of the staff either stayed in Yokohama or went their separate ways.

Before long we were all discharged and back home again, but we didn't lose touch with each other. There were letters at first, lots of them, mostly about a reunion. And we actually did get together once at Bob Lentz' home in Jeffersonville. It was the weekend of the Kentucky Derby across the Ohio River in Louisville. We went to the races and tied one on in the cocktail lounge of the Brown Hotel.

Then the letters became fewer and fewer, as one by one we married and acquired families and mortgages. In recent years, our correspondence has become nothing more than an exchange of Christmas cards with notes enclosed. The notes always mention a reunion in the not-too-distant future – but it never happens.

Last week I received a letter from Bud Wright who now works for the American Medical Association in Chicago. He enclosed copies of Joe Haas's obituary from the Chicago newspapers as well as a beautiful little editorial tribute while appeared in the Chicago Daily News where Joe had been named book editor March 22.

Joe died May 3 of an apparent heart attack while swimming with a friend in the Sheraton-Chicago Hotel pool. He was 41.

GM Patriot

By JIM FITZGERALD

Immediately upon learning how to help my country, I phoned my friend Larry, the car dealer.

"Listen Larry," I said, "that Oldsmobile you sold me is a mess. The wheels wobble, there's exhaust coming in through the air conditioner and the back seat-vanity mirror is cracked in 2 places."

"Holy cow," Larry said, "I sold you that car 7 years ago. This is the first time you've complained. How come you waited so long?"

"I'll tell you," I said. "I am going to write you a very nasty letter about this lousy car. I am going to write how I have been sick for 7 years because of those exhaust fumes and that's why I haven't been able to complain until now. I am well enough to complain now only because the windshield caved in as I was driving to work this morning and the sudden burst of fresh air revived me and made me realize it was past time for me to write you a letter of complaint."

"You must be nuts," Larry said, getting nasty because he knows I've been holding hands with a Chevy dealer lately anwway. "Go ahead and write the letter. I'll just throw it in the basket."

"That's OK," I said, "but please don't tear it up first. Just crumple it angrily. I'll mail the letter this morning and I'll be around to pick through your trash tomorrow night."

"Why would you do that?" he asked.

"Because, after I press the wrinkles out of that letter, I intend to sell it back to you for $10," I explained.

"I wouldn't give you 5 cents for it," Larry snorted.

"That's no way for a GM man to talk," I said. "You'll never go higher in the organization with that kind of an attitude. Don't you realize that Ralph Nader would pay me $15 for that letter? And the U.S. Department of Transportation would probably go to $20. I am offering it to you first only because you are my friend."

"You've gotta be kidding," Larry said.

"Not for a minute," I said. "I am offering you a great opportunity to impress Mr. Roche and the other GM brass. Wait until they learn that you bought back a complaint letter in its original form, thus saving them the expense of having it micro-filmed first. It is that type of thinking that made GM the biggest corporation in the world."

"Why are you so good to me?" Larry asked.

"What is good for you is good for GM and what is good for GM is good for the United States. That's what Charlie Wilson said just before he opened a GM dealership in the Pentagon. I have never forgotten his inspiring words," I explained. "Selling you back my letter is the patriotic thing to do."

At this point, Larry hung up. But, before the phone clicked, I'm certain I heard a sob.

Rep. Friske Releases Results of Questionnaire

By Rep. Richard Friske
106 District

The results of my recent questionnaire have been tabulated on the basis of a 10 percent return and a 25 percent figure of the return was used. The percentages used are an indication of the consensus figures, so a figure of less than 50 percent does not necessarily mean that the opinion is not that of the majority who replied. The "no opinion" figure accounts for the disparity. I assumed that an unanswered question constituted a "no opinion."

PUBLIC SCHOOLS

On control and financing of schools, 80 percent favor local control with financing to be handled by an increase in the income tax, sales tax or both. A slight differential of 2 percent was not in favor of school districts looking more to local taxpayers for funds with continued local control. All of which leads to an interesting question: Most of you are against state control, but a small percentage do not wish local financing. Where, then, is the money coming from?

ABORTION LAW REFORM

A percentage of 51½ is against legalizing abortion. Forty-seven and one half percent indicated no opinion, which to me would signify that this percentage is not familiar with the existing law. Forty-two percent would leave it up to the wife and husband and 52 percent would favor revising the law to permit abortion in case of rape or incest. With a slight 1 2 percent difference of those who favor no legalization and those who favor "reform" this brings up the question of what is "reform." Certainly this will take a great deal of thought. The law currently being considered would allow abortion on demand and with the 1 2 percent advantage for "reform" the pending legislation would have to be extensively amended or, better still, completely rewritten.

NON PUBLIC STUDENTS

Most of you favor continuation of providing auxillary services such as remedial reading, health and nursing programs, driver education and special aid to the handicapped. Forty-two and one half percent favor aid to non-public schools and 39 percent do not.

ENVIRONMENT

Ban of non-returnable bottles is favored by 81 percent and 75 percent are opposed to citizens reporting alleged pollution violations. Sixty-four percent are against a bonding program to finance pollution control and 49 percent oppose tax supported aid to local governments for sewage system development and improvement. Fifty-eight and one half percent are not in favor of spending more tax dollars to combat air pollution and 41 1 2 percent are against more taxes for such a program. An overwhelming 88 percent feel that damages caused by air and water pollution should be paid for by the violator.

TAXATION AND SPENDING

Those willing to get along with less government spending along with a decrease in taxes totalled 54 percent, and 55 percent favored a plan that would repeal the personal income tax, with 72½ percent not in favor of retention of the personal income tax as an "American Institution." Seventy-five and one half percent are against indiscriminate taxation of farm lands and 72½ percent oppose farm land being assessed on possible other use, but 46½ percent as opposed to 42½ percent believe that back taxes be paid on farm land if it is sold for other use at a higher price. Eighty-two percent are against penalization for selling property because of a sound investment and if an increase in state taxes is forthcoming an income tax is preferred by 45 percent. Sixty-five percent favor removing the property tax exemption on church property other than the place of worship but 52 percent are not in favor of removing the property tax exemption for non-profit institutions. Spending cutbacks most favored were in environmental protection and social services.

TRANSPORTATION

A mass transit system paid for by tax dollars was rejected by 75½ percent and 72½ percent were against state taxes being used to develop it. An overwhelming percentage of 85 favored 14 as a minimum age for operating a snowmobile and the permitting of townships to enact ordinances regulating snowmobile operations.

POLITICAL AFFAIRS

Ninety percent favor questionnaires. Eighty-eight and one half percent would not support a candidate on the basis of party endorsement and 49 percent oppose the legislature passing a law inhibiting party organizations from supplying support in the primaries.

UNIVERSITY AUTONOMY

A percentage of 49½ favor a constitutional change providing for appointments of boards by the legislature of state supported universities and a large 77½ percent agree that administrators of state supported institutions should be discharged for pampering revolutionaries.

ANTLERLESS DEER HUNTING

Thirty-four and one half percent endorse reduction of doe hunting, 39 percent think it should be eliminated and 21 percent believe it should be continued. This question elicited a large percentage of "no opinion" replies.

DRUG ABUSE

A whopping 90½ percent oppose legalization of marijuana and 81 percent believe its sale should be regarded as a crime and 58 percent are against reducing possession from a felony to a misdemeanor.

CRIME

Eighty-three percent feel that parents should be financially responsible for acts of vandalism by their children. Sixty-one percent feel it should be a criminal offense for anyone convicted of felony to own or possess a firearm and capital punishment for murdering a policeman or fireman while on duty is favored by 62½ percent.

GUN REGISTRATION

Gun registration is favored by 51 percent and gun confiscation by state or federal authorities is rejected by 76½ percent. Eighty-two and one half percent believe that law abiding citizens pose no danger by possessing firearms.

ALCOHOL

Funds provided by the liquor industry for aiding those directly or indirectly adversely affected by the misuse of alcohol is favored by 55 percent, but 56 percent would not favor that the sale of alcohol be limited only to liquor and beer stores.

Sales Higher, Income Down At Penn-Dixie

Net income for the year amounted to $500,704, or 17 cents a share, compared to $4,628,834 or $1.57 per share in 1969.

Penn-Dixie's 1969 earnings and sales have been restated to eliminate Castle Capital Corporation (formerly Penn-Dixie Leasing Corporation) from full consolidation.

Jerome Castle, chairman and president, stated that profits declined in 1970 "because of reduced construction activity, higher raw materials costs in both our steel and cement divisions, higher interest charges, and increased reserves and write-offs in our leasing division. With these write-offs behind us, and the outlook for steel and cement shipments significantly ahead of 1970, we look for a sharp rebound in our 1971 earnings."

NINETY-THREE kindergarteners were signed up last week at the Charlevoix Elementary School, 27 fewer than the number enrolled this year. However Principal Glenn Snider predicts that the figure will climb higher before school starts in September. Above, kindergarten teacher Mrs. Ralph McRae signs up a new student.

District Court

The following cases were heard in Charlevoix last week by District Judge W. Richard Smith:

Joe Moby, 46, East Jordan, was assessed $20 on a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

Carl Frank VanDeCar, 18, Bay Shore, waived examination on a charge of unlawfully driving away an automobile. He was bound over to the next term of Circuit Court. Bond in the amount of $1,000 was not furnished.

Edward F. Linse, 40, Charlevoix, was assessed $35 and ordered to pay $45 restitution to the state on a Department of Natural Resources Department charge that he "caught a fish by other means than the mouth." The fish apparently had been caught once before and broke the line.

John Francis Howard, 28, Boyne Falls, pled guilty to charges of driving under the influence of intoxicating beverages and driving while his license was revoked. He will be sentenced later.

Houston VanHoosier, 23, Charlevoix, was bound over to Circuit Court after examination on a charge of assault and battery with a knife. Bond in the amount of $3,500 was not furnished.

be hosted in the High School cafeteria by the Charlevoix Band Boosters, headed by Mrs. Don Brown, president. The audience is invited to attend this reception following the concert.

The concert on Friday evening will open with the 60-piece Seventh Grade Band making its first public appearance. This group, which began instrumental training last summer, will demonstrate materials used in their first year of rehearsals.

The Eighth Grade Band will follow and present a program of Band literature, most of which is designed for Junior High Groups, but until a few years ago was also performed by High School Bands. Included in the program will be the overture "Mountain Majesty," by Yoder; the "Norwegian Folk Song Suite," by Erichson Symphonic Chorale by Osterling plus some spirited marches. Both of these bands will be directed by Stutzman.

The High School Concert Band, under the direction of Mr. Odmark, will close the program with a group of selections, several of which are new to Charlevoix audiences, "La Cinquantaine," by Gabriel-Marie; "Overture to Paris and Helena," by Gluck, and the "Hymn of Praise," by Bruckner.

The Saturday evening concert will be given by the Symphony Band, and will present a program of numbers that are favorites of the band.

C. After his discharge in November, 1944, he taught music in Detroit for two years before moving to Charlevoix in 1946.

He planned to stay two years, but remained 25 instead.

Under Odmark's direction, Charlevoix school bands have won 24 first division ratings in district competition and 13 first division ratings in 24 state festivals.

He is a member of the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association and in 1954 was elected to membership in the American School Band Director's Association. He has been active in the district and state association, holding the offices of treasurer and president. He presently is vice president of District II.

In 1965 he was named "Band Director of the Year" by the MSBOA.

Odmark and his wife, the former Janet Stewart, have three children. Their son Richard is a student at Eastern Michigan University; Robert, a U. of M. graduate, is with the U.S. Army Band in Washington, D.C., and daughter Julie has attended North Central Michigan College and the Petoskey Beauty Academy. She will enter Ferris State College in the fall.

Astronaut Has Ties Locally

Charlevoixans can take a "hometown" interest in astronaut Alfred Worden's flight to the moon in July, according to George LaBlance.

LaBlance says Worden's mother was the former Helen Kroll of East Jordan before her marriage to Merril (Tiny) Worden. The Wordens operated a theater in East Jordan and the drive-in theater on U.S. -31 North.

Relatives still living in the area are Mrs. Edna LaBlance and Fay Davis of Charlevoix, Worden's second cousins.

Fluoride Program Starts on Friday

The summer topical fluoride program in Charlevoix will begin next Friday, May 21, at the Library, according to Mrs. W.F. Wilson, chairman of the Charlevoix Public School's topical fluoride committee.

Theresa Secord, from Grosse Pointe Woods, a senior dental hygiene student at Detroit, will clean the children's teeth and apply the fluoride solution.

According to Mrs. Wilson, 83 children have enrolled in the program, which consists of four visits to the clinic. At the first visit, the teeth are cleansed and a solution of fluoride is applied directly to the surfaces of the teeth. The fluoride application only is then repeated at the three succeeding visits.

ROOF SECTION of the Chickawaygo Lodge on Marion Center-rd. collapses, sending a geyser of flame out of a first floor window. The fire, believed to have been started by lightning, leveled the lodge Tuesday afternoon.

Chickawago Lodge Burns to Ground

Twister Tumbles Trailer

A violent electrical storm, accompanied by what was apparently a miniature tornado, raked the Charlevoix area Tuesday, May 18, setting a fire which destroyed the Chickawaygo Lodge on Marion Center-rd. and demolishing a house trailer on Barnard-rd.

A garage under construction on Barnard-rd. also was leveled by the freak storm which moved into the city about 2 p.m., bringing with it heavy rain and hail.

At one point, the mid-afternoon sky became so dark that all the street lights in the city were turned on by photoelectric control devices which normally are not activated until long after sunset.

Mrs. Newton said the children returned from school about 3:45 p.m. and went upstairs.

"They ran right down again and said one of the bedrooms was on fire," Mrs. Newton reported.

She said she sent the children outside and went to investigate for herself. She found one of the rear bedrooms in flames but was unable to telephone the Fire Department because lightning had knocked out telephone service.

Instead, she flagged down an unidentified motorist who relayed the fire alarm to Charlevoix.

The Chickawaygo Lodge is located about six miles south of the city.

Firemen from both Charlevoix and Ellsworth responded to the call, but the fire in the two-story rustic structure was out of control when they arrived.

The two fire trucks and tankers kept running out of water and had to be refilled from a lake a mile and a half away. During each interruption the fire gained new headway.

During the early stages, passersby stopped to help remove furnishings from the first floor, recovering most of the families personal possessions and dining room furniture.

As the blaze became hotter, the spectators moved the Newton's belongings into a pasture south of the lodge, along with a number of rental

Long-Range Plan Needed, Accreditors Tell CHS

The Charlevoix Board of Education, meeting in special session Monday, was advised by Superintendent Robert L. Miller that no violations of accreditation standards had been noted following the recent accreditation evaluation by the University of Michigan Bureau of School Services.

The report also commended the Charlevoix high school program of studies which offers students a wide variety of courses in many academic areas. The developing curriculum was commended and the vocational program listed as "especially noteworthy" as it is offering many varieties of programs both in the local and on a shared time basis at other schools. Both the shared time and vocational program were commended and expansion is encouraged.

The report noted that the school district had made a special effort to build up instructional materials in all the schools and that the observed participation was very enthusiastic.

The report recommended that the school district study future growth and compile a long range program so that future needs will be provided in an orderly fashion. It mentioned, particularly, the growth of the vocational programs that may require new arrangements but not necessarily major new buildings. The new Building Trades program was mentioned as offering many students the opportunity to learn job-entry skills for the local area without requiring a major addition to the high school. The same is true of the growing Co-op program.

It was pointed out that the report would indicate that the board was moving in the right directions in the development of the improved curriculum.

Miller reported on the State Aid formula that would give the district $279,141.49 toward its 1971-72 budget instead of the anticipated $293,311.65

Rep. Friske Speaker On Memorial Day

Plans for Charlevoix's Memorial Day observance have been announced by Tom Browe, commander of the VFW post, and Ray Wood, commander of the American Legion post.

The parade will form at 9:30 a.m. Monday, May 31, at the corner of State-st. and Park-ave. The march will begin about 10:15, with Bob Wasoski, county Veterans Affairs counselor, as parade marshal.

The parade will travel east on Park-ave. to Bridge-st., and then south to Antrim-st. where the marchers will pause during a Coast Guard tribute to American servicemen lost at sea. The brief ceremony will include a gun salute and the placing of a wreath on the waters of Round Lake.

The parade will then proceed to Brookside Cemetery for the Memorial Day program, M.C.'d by William Cooper.

The Rev. E. Francis Denay of St. Mary's Church will offer the invocation, Ron Bindi will recite the Gettysburg Address and State Rep. Richard Friske will be the speaker.

The program will close with a benediction by Rev. Bob Rutledge of the Assembly of God Church and taps.

Taking part in the parade will be members of the VFW and the American Legion, their auxiliaries, servicemen stationed in Charlevoix and local Scout troops.

Bonds, High Costs Double City Levy

Council Approves Budget

Charlevoix city property owners will find their tax bills more than doubled for the 1971-72 fiscal year because of higher wages and improved fringe benefits for city employes, repayment of the $700,000 bond issue to build the new waste water treatment plant and higher operating costs in general.

The City Council Monday night approved the 1971-72 budget, calling for general fund expenditures of $325,500.

It will require a tax levy of 11 mills, three more than the eight mills that have been levied every year since 1962.

The Council also approved a levy of six mills for bond retirement, for a total increase of nine mills.

The budget actually was higher for 1970-71 — $413,525 — but that figure included $160,000 for the Ferry Beach boat launching ramps, most of which was paid by the state.

City Superintendent Thomas Hanna's budget called for a tax increase of only two mills – from eight to ten – but the budget was so tight that the council favored the addition of another mill.

Based on a city evaluation of $12,349,500, the 11 mills will bring in $122,000 with collections at 90 percent. The city will receive another $4,000 in penalties and interest, bringing property tax revenue to $126,000.

The city also anticipates receipt of $78,200 from other governmental agencies (sales tax, income tax), $52,800 from public service enterprises (golf course, dock rentals); and $34,400 from miscellaneous sources, for a total of $291,400.

The negative balance of $34,100 in the general fund ($291,400 from $325,500), plus transfers to street funds from the general fund, will result in a general fund deficiency of $76,100.

The deficiency will be made up by transferring $64,100 from the electric fund to the general fund and drawing on savings to the tune of $12,000.

Major general fund administrative expenditures include: mayor and council, $6,800; city administrator, $16,600; city clerk, $7,500; city treasurer, $6,650; legal, $6,500; assessor and board of review, $3,700; board of elections, $2,400; protective, $61,650; fire department, $29,400; and health, $5,100.

Recreational: parks, $39,500; skating rink, $5,000; sewers, $5,300; city hall, $9,300; parking, $2,900.

Public Services: golf course, $17,000; airport, $4,600; cemetery, $23,850; docks and harbors, $24,050; ambulance, $5,100; contintent, $42,600."

Separate self-sustaining portions of the budget call for expenditure of major street and trunkline funds totaling $51,600; local street funds, $46,900; general street fund, $68,350; electric fund, $437,400; water fund, $64,300; and sewage fund, $43,350.

In other business, the council:

--Appointed former City Attorney John Michael to handle the Shaw-Henderson litigation against the city. Michael appeared before the council to say he couldn't in good conscience continue on the case without express council approval. Michael was replaced last week as city attorney by Robert Hoffman, Mayor Andrew Essenburg's

CHARLEVOIX HIGH SCHOOL Band Director C.A. Odmark was stunned after his silver anniversary concert Saturday to learn that the CHS band room was being dedicated to him. At left are Mr. and Mrs. Odmark, Mrs. Don Brown, president of the Band Boosters, and Gary Stutzman, assistant band director.

Band Room Is Dedicated To Director C.A. Odmark

The Band Boosters and the Charlevoix Board of Education has named the music facility at Charlevoix High School in honor of Clarence Odmark on the occasion of his silver anniversary.

The move came as a complete surprise to Odmark to highlight his silver anniversary concert played before a record crowd at the high school gymnasium Saturday evening.

A plaque bearing the legend: The C.A. Odmark Band Room.

"Because of his loyalty and intense dedication to his students in the Charlevoix public school over the past 29 years, the Band Boosters and the Charlevoix Board of Education do hereby name this music facility in honor of Clarence Odmark, May 22, 1971."

The plaque and a photograph of Odmark were unveiled by Mrs. Don Brown, president of the Band Boosters and Gary Stutzman, assistant music director to climax the concert.

Earlier James Wilson, student director of the band, had presented a silver-tipped baton to Mr. Odmark in behalf of the students in the band program; Beth Inman presented a new music stand in behalf of the seniors in the symphony band and Stutzman had presented a tape deck and two tape in behalf of District II of the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association.

Thad Hagerberg of Traverse City, president of District II, served as master of ceremonies for the brief program at which Henry Vander Linde of Holland, representing MSBOA, Max Smith of Petoskey and Dennis Johnson of Boyne City spoke briefly.

During the evening Odmark introduced his mother, Mrs. August Odmark of Dearborn; his wife; his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Odmark of Dearborn; his sons, Robert of the U.S. Army Band in Washington, D.C. and Richard, a student at Eastern Michigan and Julie, of Charlevoix and other relatives who had come for the event.

To Address Graduates

Dr. Roland S. Strolle, 59, dean of graduate studies at Northern Michigan University, will be speaker at Charlevoix High School graduation exercises June 8.

A native of Ontonagon in Michigan's Upper Peninsula, Dr. Strolle was assistant dean in Western Michigan's School of Education before joining the staff at Northern in 1969.

In addition to his duties as dean of graduate studies, Strolle is also responsible for Northern's research and development office and the summer school program.

A 1933 graduate of Northern, Strolle earned his masters degree at the University of Minnesota and his doctorate in education at Michigan State University.

Thursday Deadline

Because of the Memorial Day weekend, the deadline for receiving advertising and news copy for next week's paper is noon Thursday, May 27. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

THE SALVAGE boat Sea Systems is working off Nine Mile Point this week in an effort to retrieve wreckage of the Air Force B-52 which exploded and crashed in January, claiming the lives of nine crew members. Five divers are working in "very cold" water 250 feet deep, Lt. John Phillips, an AF spokesman, said the salvage operation is being carried on to determine why the craft crashed and retrieve bodies if possible.

Charlevoix Normal Reunion Set Aug. 11

Plans are progressing for the first major reunion of graduates of the Charlevoix County Normal School, according to Mrs. William Hair, who with Mrs. Ross Alexander, is heading the effort.

Plans call for a potluck picnic at Whiting Park on the Ferry Road at noon on Aug. 11.

Mrs. Hair, the former Ruth Whitney of the class of 1920 and Mrs. Alexander, the former Hilda Carlisle of the class of 1919, are asking interested graduates to call them if they can attend.

Mrs. Hair said that old records of the school found at the Charlevoix High School reveal that the school was in operation from 1903 until it was closed in 1933. Among the records was a list of students listing 444 graduates during the 30 years period. Many still live in the county and many more in northern Michigan.

"It would help if we had present names and addresses of the graduates and could contact them by mail", Mrs. Hair said. "However, this is impossible so we are asking graduates to contact us by telephone or mail. We hope that we will have a good response to this announcement," she said in conclusion.

TWO TRUCKLOADS of steel arrive in Charlevoix for the new 17,000-square-foot boat storage building and workshops at Charlevoix's Irish Boat Shop (formerly Stover Creek Marina).

Irish Boat Shop to Offer Wide Range of Services

Irish Boat Shop, Inc., of Harbor Springs is expanding its service to Great Lakes yachtsmen.

Dave Irish, president of the firm which has grown in eleven years to become one of the most complete yacht service centers in the upper Great Lakes, explains that the new yard on Lake Charlevoix--although oriented to serve the specific needs of sailboaters--will fill the need for good summer dockage, complete boat and engine service and covered winter storage in the Charlevoix area.

Located at the west end of Lake Charlevoix, just south of the channel which connects to Lake Michigan, the new Irish Boat Shop location will offer excellent protected dockage and moorings. A new "Travelift" has been acquired to haul and launch boats up to 30 tons and with lengths to 60 feet. This new hoist unit with its unique open end design will permit the hauling of large sailboats without the necessity of pulling the masts.

The "Travelift" will be complemented by a 15,000 pound capacity forklift truck which will provide improved small boat handling as well as "cubby hole" covered dry storage for boats up to 24 feet long. A new 17,000 square foot steel building to be completed in June will house the cubby hole storage area as well as two heated workshops and will provide covered storage for all types of yachts in off season months.

Dick Babcock, Vice-President of Irish Boat Shop, Inc., points out that all of the quality products and services now offered at Harbor Springs will be available at Charlevoix. Among the marine products being sold and serviced are the Pearson line of sailing yachts including all models from the 22' Ensign racer day-sailer to the Countess 44 a luxurious cruising motor-sailer, Alcort sport sailboats, Hobie Cat Catamarans, Boston Whaler outboard boats, Stamas and Slickcraft power boats, Evinrude outboard motors, Bearcat 4-cycle outboard engines and many more.

As at Harbor Springs, the Charlevoix facility will include a complete ship's store featuring such well known lines as Sperry Topsiders, Stearns life-vests, Canor-Plarex foul weather gear and a complete line of sailboat hardware and other marine accessories.

Joining the Irish Boat Shop staff to assist in the operation of the new yard at Charlevoix are Jim Miller and Rod Stebbins, both of whom have considerable experience in racing and cruising sailboats.

The new yard is located on the site of the former Stover Creek Marina at the foot of Stover Road and adjacent to the Charlevoix municipal boat launching ramp. Dockage with electricity, water, fuel, showers and ice will be ready for occupancy by June 1. The telephone number in Charlevoix is (616) 547-2145.

Tired of carry-outs?

Here's what you need--a Gas incinerator. It takes all the bother out of garbage and trash disposal. And it does it without smoke, odor, noise or polluting the air you breathe.

A Gas incinerator gobbles up all the combustible things you wouldn't dare put in a garbage disposal and can't burn outside. It makes short work of bones, boxes and boots--in fact anything that's combustible. And it does the job conveniently and completely.

So put an end to your carry-out service. Promise yourself you'll see your appliance dealer about having a Gas incinerator installed in your home. Or, visit your Michigan Consolidated Gas Company showroom for all the particulars. And, remember, there's more than enough Gas for all your appliances.

Sons Replace Dads On Boat Co. Board

At the annual meeting of the company's directors May 15, Karl Erber of Charlevoix and Lloyd McDonough of St. James resigned as president and vice president respectively. They also resigned as directors.

The board then elected Erber's son, Jack, as a director and president and McDonough's son, Joe (Bud), as a director and vice president.

The meeting took place at Archie LaFreniere's Motel on Beaver Island.

Erber explained that the two younger men will be in the area year-'round to help make decisions regarding the company. However both Erber and McDonough will keep their stock in the company.

The Beaver Island Boat Co. was formed in 1954 after a group of men from Charlevoix and the Island bought the former Beaver Island Transit Co. for $5,000. The move came after the Transit Company's boat, the North Shore, was condemned.

The new company sold stock and had the motorship Emerald Isle built at the Christy Shipyard in Sturgeon Bay at a cost of $90,000.

After eight years of service, the Emerald Isle was sold to the Arnold Transit Co. at Mackinaw City for $65,000 and the present Beaver Islander was built at the Sturgeon Bay Shipyard, owned by the late Capt. John Roen, at a cost of $215,000.

Karl Erber said the same ship would cost $350,000 to build today.

The boat is in its ninth year of service this summer.

Original members of the board of directors were Karl Erber, Lloyd McDonough, Henry Allen, Dr. Vail, the island physician; and Ted Hine. Other stockholders who were not members of the board were Rogers Carlisle and Archie LaFreniere, both of Beaver Island.

LaFreniere is now secretary-treasurer of the corporation. Other members of the board, in addition to Jack Erber and Bud McDonough, are Fred Annand and Clyde Fogg, both of whom have summer homes on the island.

Said interest will be payable on October 1, 1971, and semi-annually thereafter on April 1st and October 1st of each year, both principal and interest to be payable at a bank or trust company qualified under the statutes of the State of Michigan or of the Federal Government to act as paying agent, to be designated by the purchaser of the bonds, with the approval of the City Council. The interest rate on any one bond shall be at one rate only and all bonds maturing in any one year must carry the same interest rate and each coupon period shall be represented by one interest coupon. Accrued interest to the date of delivery of such bonds shall be paid by the purchaser at time of delivery. The difference between the highest and lowest interest rates bid shall not exceed 50 percent.

Said bonds will mature serially as follows:
$25,000.00 October 1st of each of the years 1971 and 1972;
$35,000.00 October 1st of each of the years 1973 and 1974;
$45,000.00 October 1st of each of the years 1975 and 1976;

$60,000.00 October 1st of each of the years from 1982 to 1985, inclusive;

Bonds maturing in the years 1971 to 1980, inclusive, shall not be subject to redemption prior to maturity.

Bonds maturing in the years 1981 to 1985, inclusive, shall be subject to redemption prior to maturity, at the option of the City; in inverse numerical order, on any interest payment date on or after October 1, 1980, at par and accrued interest to the date fixed for redemption plus premiums (expressed in a percentage of par) as follows:

3 percent of the par value of each bond redeemed prior to October 1, 1982;

2 percent of the par value of each bond redeemed on or after October 1, 1982, bur prior to October 1, 1984;

1 percent of the par value of each bond redeemed on or after October 1, 1984, but prior to maturity.

Notice of redemption shall be given to the holders of bonds to be redeemed by publication of such notice not less than thirty (30) days prior to the date fixed for redemption, at least once in a newspaper or publication circulated in the State of Michigan, which carries, as part of its regular service, notices of sale of municipal bonds. No further interest payable on bonds called for redemption shall accrue after the date fixed for redemption, whether presented for redemption or not, provided the City has money available for such redemption with the paying agent.

For the purpose of awarding the bonds the interest cost of each bid will be computed by determining, at the rate or rates specified therein, the total dollar value of all interest on the bonds from July 1, 1971 to their maturity and deducting therefrom any premium. The bonds will be awarded to the bidder whose bid on the above computation produces the lowest interest cost to the City. Each bidder shall state in his bid the interest cost to the City, computed in the manner above specified. No proposal for the purchase of less than all of the bonds or at a price less than 100 percent of their par value will be considered.

The bonds are to be issued for the purpose of paying part of the cost of acquiring and constructing improvements consisting of a new waste water treatment plant, conversion of existing plant and pumping main in the City of Charlevoix.

The said bonds are payable from ad valorem taxes to be levied without limitation as to rate or amount.

A certified or cashier's check in the amount of $14,000.00, drawn upon an incorporated bank or trust company and payable to the order of the City Treasurer of the City of Charlevoix, must accompany each bid as a guaranty of good faith on the part of the bidder, to be forfeited as liquidated damages if such bid is accepted and the bidder fails to take up and pay for the bonds. No interest shall be allowed on the good faith checks, and checks of unsuccessful bidders will be promptly returned to each bidder's representative or by registered mail.

Bids shall be conditioned upon the unqualified opinion of Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone, attorneys of Detroit, Michigan, which opinion will be furnished without expense to the purchaser of the bonds prior to the delivery thereof, approving the legality of the bonds, the text of which opinion will be printed on the reverse side of each bond. The City shall furnish bonds ready for execution at its expense. Bonds will be delivered without expense to the purchaser at Detroit, Michigan, Chicago, Illinois, or such other place as may be agreed upon. The usual closing documents, including a certificate that no litigation is pending affecting the issuance of said bonds, will be delivered at the time of the delivery of the bonds.

Envelopes containing the bids should be plainly marked "Proposal for Bonds."

Said bonds will be delivered within forty-five (45) days from the date of sale and if said bonds are not delivered by twelve o'clock noon, Eastern Standard Time, on the forty-fifth day from the date of sale, the successful bidder may withdraw his proposal by serving notice of cancellation in writing on the undersigned in which event the good faith check shall be promptly returned.

Grandview News

Hello, again! It's been a long time since we have written news from Grandvue, and we felt it was time to catch you up on our happenings.

Mrs. Marilyn Greene is our new Dietary Consultant. She lives in Walloon Lake at present, but is moving soon to Petoskey. Mrs. Greene is replacing Mrs. Mary Muller.

On May 5 – a few weeks back – Rose Nemee and Glennie Green of our Diversional Therapy Department had a May Day party, complete with a parade and May Day Queen. Our Queen was Mrs. Mary Lenosky, who reigned over the festivities on a beautiful throne covered with paper carnations and crepe paper. Our queen led the parade thru the halls, with several decorated wheelchairs following her, and bringing up the rear of the parade was a funny clown. After the parade, Queen Mary and her entourage enjoyed a party in the day room. It was lots of fun for all - patients and staff alike.

When passing by the Facility, notice our newly painted flagpole and brand new flag flying. Sure looks nice!

Ladies from the Boyne City United Methodist Church came out to Grandvue for a birthday-party on May 11th. Patients having May birthdays were: Felix Kus, Dan McSawby, Charles Nowland, William Duiker, William Fick, Effie Francisco, and Frances Howe. After the birthday party, the ladies held a song fest for all the patients.

At the May 13 Grandvue Auxiliary meeting, a definite date was set for the Used Book Fair and Bake Sale. This Sale will be held June 3, from 1 until 4 p.m. at the Facility. If you have any used books you would like to donate to the sale, they can be left at the Northwestern State Bank in Boyne City or East Jordan, First State Bank of Charlevoix, Joyce Spencer's home in Boyne Falls, or at Grandvue in East Jordan. If you like to read and need some new, refreshing reading material, plan to attend the Book Fair, June 3.

The Auxiliary was very happy to welcome back Mr. Dennis Johnson, band and choral director of Boyne City High School, and his Boyne City High School Chorus, as our program. Their singing delighted Auxilians and patients alike. Thank you, Mr. Johnson and chorus members, for a delightful program. Auxiliary Treasurer Phyllis Malpass states we have around $2,100.00 in our patio fund now.

Mrs. Marilyn Grigg of the Public Health Department visited our Facility on May 17. Mrs. Marilyn Greene was also here that day.

Mrs. Hilda Watkins, our administrator, Mrs. Betty Robertson, director of nurses, and our board members attended a three day meeting in Marquette May 18, 19, and 20. This was the Annual C.M.C.F. Management Conference.

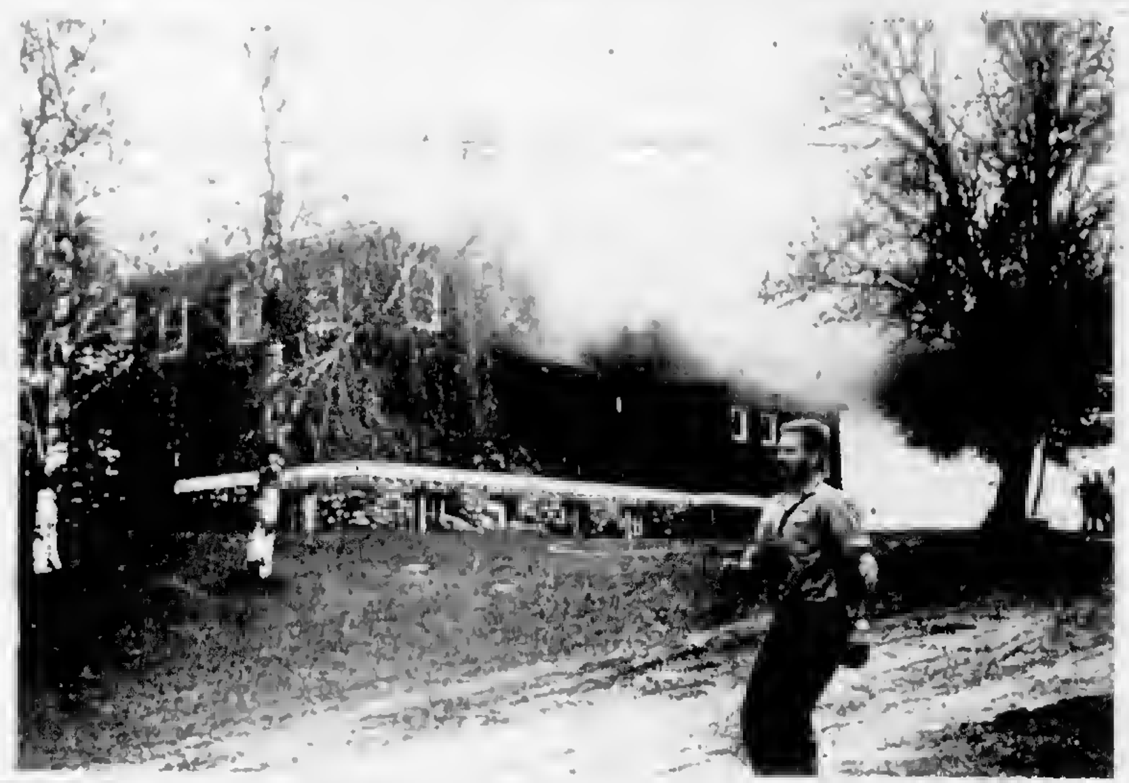
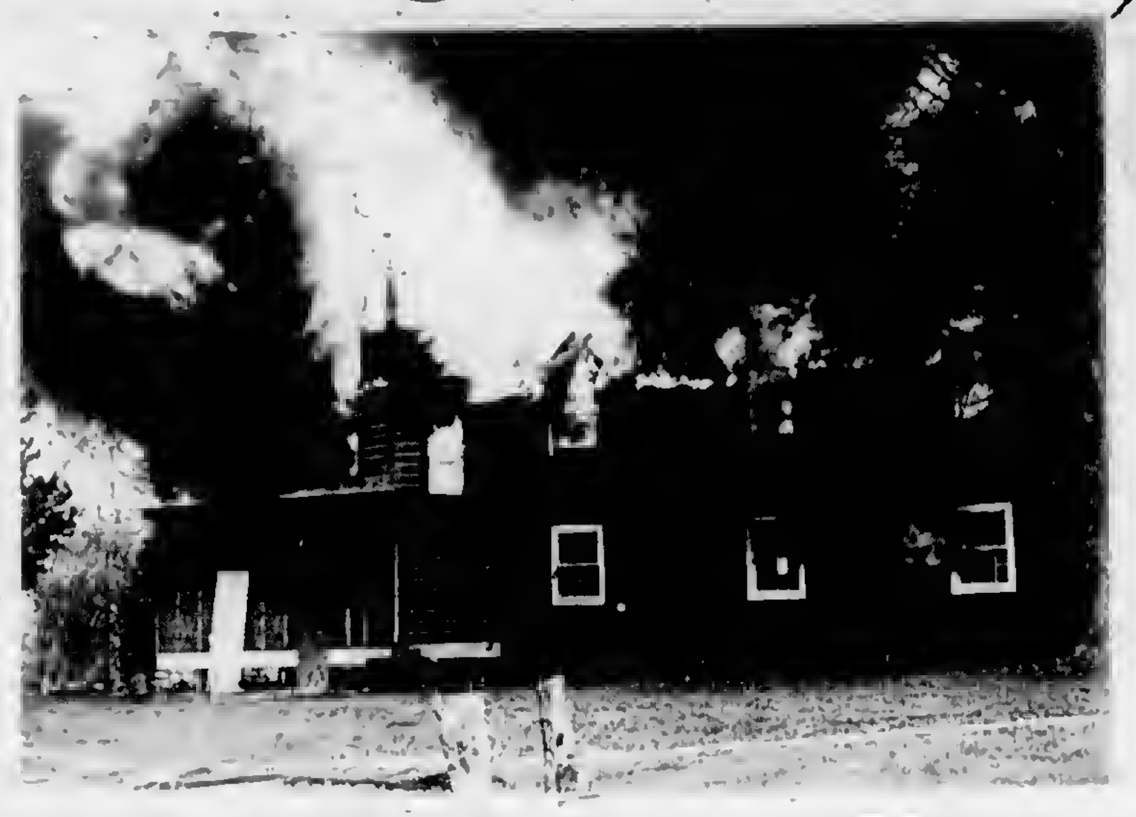
Flames Level Ill-Starred Chickawago Lodge





JUST WHEN it looked as though the Chickawaygo Lodge on Marion Center rd. might become a going concern, fire destroyed the 43 year old landmark Tuesday afternoon. Above left, there was plenty of smoke, but not too much fire in evidence when firemen from Charlevoix and Ellsworth arrived shortly after 4 p.m. Lower left, a Charlevoix utilities truck is used to lift firemen closer to the blaze. Above, passersby helped move belongings of the Tom Newton family a safe distance from the fire. Upper right, dense smoke blackens sky as flames light turret at rear of building. Lower right, spectators on the lawn watched progress of fire as it crept from window to window of the rustic two-story wooden structure.

THE MASSIVE STONE chimney reigns over the ruins of ill starred Chickawaygo Lodge, leveled by fire May 18.

Fate Had It In For Chickawago Lodge

Fate had it in for the Chickawaygo Lodge.

When it was built in 1928 by Seeley and Linton Realtors, the owners had visions of it becoming another Belvedere Club or Chicago Club.

But when crash came in 1929, the Chickawaygo Lodge was one of the casualties. It never became a financial success and stood idle throughout the Depression and during most of the intervening years until Thomas Newton bought it 14 years ago.

Last fall, Newton left his job as an insurance agent in Allen Park and set to work refurbishing the building as a center for snowmobilers. The Chickawaygo was completely refurnished and refinished by Christmas and Newton opened for business in early January.

"My 14-year-old dream is finally coming true," he told the Courier.

During the winter, the lodge became popular with snowmobilers, many of whom would run out for breakfast or dinner at the lodge from Charlevoix on their snowmachines.

It looked as though the Chickawaygo Lodge might make it, after all.

Then last Tuesday afternoon, during one of the most freakish weather days in Charlevoix history, a bolt of lightning apparently struck the building, setting fire to one of the upstairs rooms and knocking out telephone service.

By the time the fire was discovered by Newton's youngsters, it already had gained considerable headway. And there was a further delay while a passerby could be flagged down to report the fire.

When firemen from Charlevoix and Ellsworth did arrive, the tinder-dry structure was past saving, even if the water supply had held out.

Fate had it in for the Chickawaygo Lodge.

Give Firemen Chance To Get There First

When the Chickawaygo Lodge burned last Tuesday afternoon, it was the spectators who helped remove furniture and clothing from the downstairs rooms while the fire raged on the second story.

And it was the spectators who kept moving snowmachines and household goods back from the fire as the building became an inferno.

Furthermore, without the assistance of spectators, the Tom Newton family would have been hard put to find a means of moving their valuables across the road to the Sam Straw barn after the building finally burned to the ground.

Which is all well and good.

But Thursday night, when a tractor at the Joe Martinchek farm on Black-rd. caught fire, a flood of spectators in their automobiles almost kept some bonafide fire-fighters from reaching the scene.

But if it had been a bad one, the traffic jam on Marion Center-rd. could have been disastrous.

One late arriver counted no fewer than 70 cars returning from the fire along a two-mile stretch of highway.

Firemen later reported that southbound traffic on the road was so bad shortly after the fire whistle sounded that some firemen had trouble reaching the scene.

Fire Chief John Curtis says the situation is always aggravated with the arrival of warm weather. More cars are cruising around at night, and with storm windows down the fire whistle is clearly heard in every home in the community.

Residents have been amply warned not to follow the fire trucks too closely. But the problem of spectators clogging highways apparently is a new one.

If you must attend a fire, give the Fire Department and the firemen a chance to get there first.

After all, it is their job to put out the fire --- not yours.

And when you do arrive at the scene, don't hesitate to lend a hand, as the spectators did at the Chickawaygo fire. The Tom Newton family is certainly grateful for the assistance afforded by passersby and others who came to help.

St. Ignace Backed as Shrine Site

Congressman Philip E. Ruppe (R-11th District) has proposed that the City of St. Ignace be selected as the site for a permanent memorial to the French missionary - explorer Father Jacques Marquette. In a letter to James C. Windham, chairman of the Father Marquette Tercentenary Commission, Ruppe noted the historical connections between Father Marquette and St. Ignace.

Congressman Ruppe pointed out that in 1671 Father Marquette established a mission at St. Ignace and served as a missionary there for two years. Father Marquette then joined Father Jollet in what was to become their famous exploration of the Mississippi River region. When Father Marquette died, his body was returned to St. Ignace for burial. A national historical landmark presently notes Father Marquette's relationship to the Northern Michigan city.

The Father Marquette Tercentenary Commission was established by Congress in September, 1965, in order to commemorate the 300th anniversary of Father Marquette's exploration of the Great Lakes - Mississippi River region. Ruppe was appointed to the Commission in 1967 by former Speaker John McCormack. One of the stated purposes uf the Commission is to consider the possibility uf creating a national monument to recognize Father Marquette's contributions to American history.

In his letter to Windham, Ruppe stated, "In considering all the possible sites for a permanent memorial, it is apparent that St. Ignace is the location most closely associated with Father Marquette's work. Because this year marks the 300th anniversary uf the founding of the mission of St. Ignace, it would seem an appropriate time to designate this site as the permanent memorial to the great missionary-explorer."

Sewage Problems Circa '93

Even in 1893 Charlevoix faced the problem of sewage disposal. Now, 78 years later, the dilemma still remains spiced with a taste of controversy.

The following article was found by Mrs. William Huckle of East Jordan in a Charlevoix Sentinel dated Aug. 23, 1893.

"Charlevoix must soon begin to consider this matter of sewerage. It is a matter that cannot be much longer put off. It is contrary to the laws of health that a town of this size should be destitute of any means to dispose of surface accumulations of filth. Bad results must follow, sooner or later.

"There are alleys in Charlevoix, especially that from Main street to the river, where secretions of filth and accumulation of garbage are unavoidable, and are a menace to the public health. A remedy should be provided.

"There are more than a dozen points in the village, to say nothing of the vaults throughout the town, which offend the nostrils and threaten disease.

"And disease will come, as surely as darkness follows daylight. Let us cease this talk about electric lights, and provide for sewerage. It will not only be a sanitary measure, but will be a valuable auxiliary to our water works, by providing conveniences and comforts which it is now impossible to enjoy.

"We are of the opinion that the council should pass a sewer ordinance, and do it at once. We boast of our natural beauty, of our lakes and rivers, of our scenery and pure air, yet our soil is a nest of filth, breeding disease and pestilence."

Editor
Charlevoix Courier

Dear Sir:

Following is a letter directed to your readers.....

As an active "fisherman" in the Lansing chapter uf FISH (an organization that offers help to those in need, following the commandment to "Love Thy Neighbor") I was most interested in the letter from the Charlevoix Ministerial Alliance which was printed in your Courier May 12th edition.

I urge you, members of the Charlevoix-Boyne City - East Jordan communities, to seriously consider participation in this Christian effort to "help your neighbor". Here is an opportunity to put "feet on your prayers" ..... to show your concern for your neighbor in his time of need ..... all in the name of Christian love. As our FISH chapter goes into its third year we have learned that not only do we help others ..... we have helped ourselves for the rewards are inherent in the give and take of serving human needs.

FISH is international .... beginning in England ..... spreading from Japan to Africa ... in the United States alone there are more than 400 chapters .... and over 25 in Michigan .... all. offering a helping hand .... simple acts of kindness ... to those in need.

Green Rice, Anyone?

By Bob Clock

You eat lots of green food, right?

There's green beans, peas, lettuce, spinach, beet, greens, pistachio ice cream, asparagus, cabbage, green onions and a whole lot of other green foods. Right?

Then why would anyone have any objection to green rice?

Let me explain.

The other day Judy was feeling pretty punk with the bug that's going around – headache, upset stomach, fever, dizziness, that ache-all-over feeling. You know what I mean.

So I volunteered to cook dinner for the tribe.

I found a dead chicken in the refrigerator that looked like it wanted to be cooked. Preferably stewed. So far so good. Then I peered into the pantry and discovered a can of mushrooms. Then I opened the refrigerator and a small, flat jar of pimento fell out of the egg tray.

Since I am on a well-deserved sabbatical leave from Weight Watchers International, all signs pointed toward a whopping big dinner of chicken-a-la-king for the Clocks.

So I cut up the chicken, doused it with condiments and put it in a pot on the back burner to simmer.

Now what goes well with chicken? It didn't take me long to hit on rice. You don't have to peel rice and that's one of its finest attributes. So I put a cup of rice in the top of the double boiler and put it on another burner.

Then I conjured up a mental picture of what my culinary masterpiece would look like on the table and I didn't like what I saw.

Chicken-a-la king is really rather blah looking, aside from the gay little strips of pimento which somehow appear out-of-place alongside the grey mushrooms and the equally nondescript lumps of chicken, all of which are only thinly disguised by the cream sauce.

Then there was the rice, which is equally bland appearing until it disappears under a ladle of chop suey.

What could I do to brighten up my culinary masterpiece?

I had better sense than to try to tamper with the chicken, but the rice was something else.

I went to the cupboard and found three little vials of food coloring — red, blue and green. There used to be a vial of yellow, but it has gone the way of cake frosting and Easter eggs.

I looked over the remaining colors and decided that green rice had infinitely more possibilities than red rice or blue rice. So I shook a few drops of green food coloring into my pot of rice, clamped on the cover and let it finish cooking.

Needless to say I felt very smug and creative when I announced that dinner was ready and the family trooped into the dining room. First I brought in the chicken-a-la king and was greeted by appropriate "oh's and ah's" from all quarters of the table.

Then I brought in a small bowl of bright green peas, which were equally well-received.

Then, with a flourish I produced a glass casserole heaped with a mountain of lime-green rice. Eyes widened all around the table but there wasn't a sound.

"What is THAT?" Judy finally croaked.

"THAT," I said, mimicking her emphasis, "is a specialty of the house. Green rice!"

"How could you!" cried, her croak turning to a gag. "It's bad enough having a queezy stomach, without having to sit down to a dinner of GREEN RICE."

"Don't shout," I told her. "The neighbors will think you're memorizing Dr. Suess. Besides, the girls love green rice, don't you girls?"

Jennifer made a funny face.

"I have to go to the bathroom," she announced, avoiding my question.

I looked at Katie.

"I'm not very hungry all of a sudden," she said. "I think I'll just have a slice of bread."

"Allison likes green rice," I said defensively, spooning a mound of my masterpiece onto her plate.

She looked at it suspiciously for a minute before calling the dog.

"You don't know what you're missing," I told them, trying to sound as though I didn't care.

I heaped some green rice on my plate and smothered it with chicken-a-la-king. It was delicious.

But by the end of the meal I hadn't even made a dent in my piece-de-resistance.

"Why don't you make some green rice pudding?" Judy suggested sarcastically.

"I would," I said, "but the dog looks hungry.

I filled Ginny's bowl with green rice and to my immense satisfaction she lapped up every last kernel.

"See?" I said to my ungrateful family. "Even the dog likes green rice!"

"In case you haven't heard," Judy snapped, "dogs are colorblind."

When you sit down to eat at our house, you get to chew on a lot more than food.

And this is a good thing, says Dr. Dena Cederquist who is a nutrition expert at Michigan State University. Of course, she's never eaten at our house. We never feed strangers at our house, unless they are cats.

Dr. Cederquist bemoans the loss of the family dinner-hour. Today, people eat on the run, she complains, and that's bad–not only for your digestion, but also for your mind, personality and character.

"The dinner table was a place where ideas were exchanged, questions debated and where children learned to be part of a group," Dr. Cederquist says.

It is a shame Dr. Cederquist is a woman. Otherwise, she might have married my wife and they certainly would have lived happily ever after. This would have left me a lonely bachelor, reading a newspaper as I ate my meals, with no kids fighting across the roast beef and no cats licking crumbs off my shoes. Under such miserable conditions I probably couldn't have) survived more than 150 years before I died of a terrible ache in my side from laughing so much.

My wife likes to teach lessons in living at the dinner table. For instance, during a recent dinner I happened to catch sight of her through the flowers and candles in the middle of the table. She looked peaked and drawn. There was no food on her plate.

"Why aren't you eating?" I asked her.

"Because no one will pass me any food," she gasped, writhing in the last stages of malnutrition.

All the food was on my side of the centerpiece where I could suck it up without even leaning forward. Attacking from the sides, both kids could also easily grab what they wanted. But my wife couldn't even see the food.

"Why don't you ask us to pass something?" I asked.

"I shouldn't have to ask," she answered.

It occurred to me that the food is always placed at my end of the table, every meals, every day.

"How long has it been since you've eaten?" I asked her.

"About a month," she said. "The last time was when the kids had guests and I got to sit at your end of the table."

"You set the table every meal. Why do you always put the food at my end? Why don't you put some at your end?" I asked her.

"I want to teach this family some manners," she said. "You shouldn't just sit down and gobble. You should always pass the food plates around and you should never have to be asked to pass something."

"Not even the butter?" I asked.

"I might have asked for the butter but I never had anything to spread it on," she said as she slowly slumped to the floor.

"What's wrong with Mother?" our daughter asked.

"She has passed out from not having anything passed," our son explained. "It's a good thing she didn't fall on my cat."

San Francisco Bay: Challenge and Delight

Almost from the moment of its discovery–Nov. 2, 1769–they have been surveying, sampling, filling, dredging, diking, draining, and developing it.

Now they are cleaning it up. A recent collision between two large tankers spewed thousands of gallons of oil into the bay, setting off a major campaign to clean up the soggy mess and save endangered waterfowl and other wildlife.

SPOILED GOOD RECORD

The accident marred an excellent safety record. The Coast Guard and skilled ship pilots annually guide 12,000 ships and 33,000,000 tons of cargo through the Golden Gate. More than 400 navigation aids–lights, buoys, fog signals, and radio beacons–direct the steady stream of vessels, many of them bound for Sacramento, a river city 80 miles inland.

San Francisco Bay actually forms a great basin that extends over a 422-square-mile area, the National Geographic Society says. It is nourished by many rivers and creeks, bounded by 300 miles of shoreline, and contains an estimated two trillion gallons of water at high tide.

No river on earth can match the bay in motion.

GIANT TIDE

The tidal current through the Golden Gate can reach a peak of 10 million cubic feet a second, half again in the flow of the mighty Amazon.

What San Franciscans call "the Bay" is in reality eight bays–San Pablu, Suisun, Grizzly, Honker, Richardson, San Rafael, San Leandro, and San Francisco Bay, proper–all joined by a score of channels dotted by islands, and cross-stitched by 10 bridges.

Nestled between mountains, bay area communities grew from water's edge into the foothills–and out into the bay. After 1849 enterprising businessmen, catering to customers bound for the Sacramento gold fields, began filling San Francisco's shoreline with pilings, redwood rafts, and refuse to create wharfage and store sites.

ANGERED CITIZENS

Silt and fill on the rim of the 60-mile-long bay since have reclaimed 258 square miles of marshlands and water. Aroused citizens demanded and got an agency that now controls future land-fill projects.

"The bay is like a living body," explained a concerned San Francisco ecologist. "Its appendages, with their mud flats and marshes are just as important to the bay as lungs and heart are to a human."

When they are not preoccupied with such problems as oil spills and land fills, bay area residents are fascinated by the weather. For instance at any given moment the city of San Francisco can present a patchwork pattern of bright sunshine, dense fog, and heavy overcast, all within a space of a few square miles.

"Back East," say San Franciscans, "people joke, 'If you don't like the weather, wait a minute.' Out here we say, 'If you don't like the weather, walk over a few blocks.'" snowmachines which were parked near the building.

Later they carried the Newton's furniture across Marion Center-rd. for storage in Sam Straw's barn to protect it from the weather.

Newton said the buildings was insured for only $55,000, far short of its replacement cost.

In addition to Newton and his wife, the family includes seven children, Thomas, 13; Beth Ann, 11, Robert, 9; Brenda, 7; Mary, 4; Patricia, 3, and Dale, three weeks.

The first structure to go was a garage under construction at the Albert Sharrow home, about one mile east of U.S. 31 South. The studs and rafters were up and ready for sheathing when the freak wind flattened the skeletal structure.

Then the twister jumped the highway and rolled over a 65-foot house trailer several times, reducing it and its contents to rubble.

The trailer had just been placed on the property by the delivery men and the purchaser, Edward Holm, was in Charlevoix at the LaBlance Agency taking out insurance when the storm hit.

Holm's fiancee, Miss Mary Jo Czerkis of Petoskey, was in the mobile home minutes before, but sought refuge nearby at the mobile home of her in-laws-to-be, the Harold Holms, when the storm threatened.

Holm and Miss Czerkis were married at St. Francis Church in Petoskey Saturday.

George LaBlanee, owner of the insurance agency, said Holm's insurance policy on the mobile home was valid.

Merta said the race would bring thousands of boaters and spectators to Charlevoix every summer. The racers reportedly have become disenchanted with Mackinac Island.

The $13,475 lost as the result of the executive order from the governor, a trailer coach deduction of $804 plus a special education adjustment of $109.70 resulted in the decrease in anticipated income from this source.

He also reported on the action of the Charlevoix County Tax Allocation board which, in its tentative rate, cut .55 mill from the millage allowed the schools or 7.55 compared to the 8.1 mills received last year. The final rate was scheduled to be set Tuesday.

Revised projections and other savings during the year will likely result in a balanced budget at the close of the current school year, he added.

The summer band program sponsored by the school was approved. The program will begin late in June and will be in charge of Gary Stutzman and Evelyn Peters.

In other action the board:

DESPITE the raw weather, a large crowd turned out Monday for Charlevoix's annual Memorial Day parade. Above, honor guard made up of ex-servicemen leads parade south on Bridge-st. Bob Wasoski, county veterans affairs officer, was parade marshal.

City Honors War Dead

Raw Weather Fails To Mar Celebration

In spite of raw, threatening weather, Charlevoixans turned out in force Monday for the annual Memorial Day parade and ceremonies at Brookside Cemetery honoring the nation's war dead.

Although only a few drops of rain fell spectators and marchers alike bundled up warm since the temperature stayed on the chill side of 50 degrees most of the morning.

Under the direction of parade marshal Bob Wasoski, the parade formed at the Congregational Church, traveled east to Bridge-st., then south to M-66 where it moved east again into Brookside Cemetery.

At Antrim-st., the marchers halted briefly for ceremonies honoring servicemen who have lost their lives at sea.

An honor guard of veterans fired a volley over Round Lake as Mrs. Mary Louise Novotny, president to the VFW Auxiliary, and Mrs. Mary Hallam, chaplain of the American Legion Auxiliary, placed wreathes on the water.

At the cemetery, the Rev. Fr. E. Francis, Denay, pastor of St. Marys Roman Catholic Church, offered the invocation, calling attention to the fact that PFC Richard Plumm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Plumm of Upright-st., was numbered among the casualties of the Vietnam War on May 22.

Speaker was State Rep. Richard Friske of Charlevoix.

He said that although Memorial Day means different things to different people, he himself views it as a time for the nation to reflect where it has been, where it is and where it is going.

Friske said that America today is "surrounded by apologists who would give away our birthright." However, he said there are still many good Americans who are willing to lay down their lives to protect American freedom.

The representative chided a "spineless minority" who burn the American flag, but said there is hope in the fact that many are still saluting it.

In defense of the Vietnam War, Friske said that "a threat to freedom anywhere in the world constitutes a threat to freedom at home."

In a paraphrase of Lincoln's Gettysburg address, Friske said: "Let us highly resolve that we will never knuckle under to the forces of the world who would enslave us."

"If we survive in the future, it is because of the fervent hope on people the world over for peace," he said.

"Weapons may change, guns may become obsolete, but may be never see the day when our ideals and moral beliefs become obsolete," he concluded.

The ceremony closed with a gun salute and taps, followed by a benediction by the Rev. Rutledge of the Charlevoix Assembly of God Church.

Master of ceremonies was William Cooper of Ironton.

SPEAKER at Memorial Day services at Brookside Cemetery was State Rep. Richard Friske, who said the occasion was a good time to reflect on where America has been, where it is now and where it is going.

Schools Fare Better In Final Allocation

The Charlevoix Allocation Board set the final allocation of the county's 15-mill levy at its final meeting May 25.

The County will receive 6 mills, schools 7.80, townships 1 and the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District 0.2.

The figures vary slightly from the preliminary allocation of May 17, when the board alloted 6.20 mills to the county, 7.55 to schools, .25 to the Intermediate District and 1 mill to townships.

County Clerk Clarence Rabach said the Charlevoix board was obligated to set the same millage as Emmet County for the Intermediate School District, which reduced Charlevoix's allocation from .25 to .20. The difference went to schools, along with .20 originally allocated to the county.

Fox represents schools, Stroud townships, Mrs. Potter the county, Hansen cities, Moerland the county board, Parsons the Intermediate District and Thomas, member-at-large.

New Players May Sign Up

Recreation Director Deano Davenport says that boys interested in playing in the Kiwanis Youth League (ages 8-10) and the Peanut League (ages 11-13) who weren't on a team last year should report to the city diamond on Carpenter-st. Monday, June 7.

Kiwanis Youth League assignments will be made at 6:30 p.m. and Peanut League assignments at 7 p.m.

Sam Supernaw Eyed For Council Vacancy

Intimates of Mayor Andrew Essenburg jr. report that the mayor will appoint accountant Samuel C. (Sam) Supernaw, 415 Prospect-st., as a successor to First Ward Alderman Jack Mol, at the June 7 council meeting.

Mol is expected to resign his position as alderman to accept Essenburgs appointment as Charlevoix police chief, which was made at the tag-end of the May 24 council meeting.

Both appointments are subject to approval of the council.

Essenburg's appointment of Mol as chief of police came as a surprise to Mol, his colleagues on the council and City Superintendent Thomas Hanna.

After the meeting, Mol asked that the appointment not be made public until he had an opportunity to make a decision. However, Tuesday morning, Mol told the mayor he would accept the appointment. He says he is taking steps to sell his business, Mol's Plumbing and Heating, 200 Antrim-st.

Supernaw, 28, says he will accept the position as First Ward alderman, if appointed.

"In fact, I almost ran for the council in the last election, until I heard that Roger Westenbroek (the incumbent First Ward alderman) was going to run again," Supernaw says.

A native of Charlevoix, Supernaw attended Charlevoix schools and graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1961. He received his B.A. from Michigan State University with a major in accounting in 1966.

He worked for Price-Waterhouse Co. (Certified Public Accountants) in Detroit and San Francisco from 1966 until 1969 when he returned to Charlevoix to live. Since 1969 he was worked for Hill, Devlin and Co. (CPA's) in Petoskey.

Supernaw and his wife, Mary Lou, have two sons, Jonathan, 6, and Sam jr., 4. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. William I. Supernaw of Ironton.

As chief, Mol will succeed former Chief of Police Joe Smith who died last September. In the interim, the office has been filled by Acting Chief Glenn Pemberton.

A native of Grand Rapids, Mol moved to Charlevoix with his parents when he was 10 years old and attended Charlevoix schools. He is a graduate of Charlevoix High School.

He also attended Lake Superior State College for two years as a pre-police administration student.

In 1946-47, he served 18 months with the U.S. Army, including 15 months as a medic in Korea.

After his discharge, he joined his father, John Mol, in the family business, of which he is now sole owner.

Since 1958 Mol has worked with both the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and the Charlevoix Police Department as a special deputy and special police officer.

He also has attended a law enforcement training school sponsored by the state and federal government for law officers in Region 10.

In 1956, Mol was elected to the City Council from the First Ward and was re-elected in 1968 and 1970. His present term expires next March.

Mol and his wife, Nomis, live at 407 E. Dixon-ave. They have four children: Michael, 16; Terry, 13; Shari, 10; and Donald, 7.

Although it was no secret that Mol has been interested in the chief's job, the appointment came as a surprise. Shortly after his election, Mayor Essenburg told Mol he was not being considered.

Originally, the council had indicated it would look out-of-town for a new chief. Most of the applicants, however, have said they want more money than the city is able to pay. Mol's salary is expected to be about $10,000 a year.

PFC Richard Plumm

2nd Charlevoix GI Loses Life In Vietnam War

The second Charlevoix GI to lose his life in Vietnam was killed Saturday, May 22, near Quang-Tri.

He was PFC Richard D. Plumm, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Plumm of E. Upright-st.

The Plumms were informed Thursday morning of their son's death by Rev. E. Francis Denay of St. Marys Church and Maj. Leroy A. Schmidt, an Army liaison officer who lives on the Boyne City-rd.

PFC Plumm, who was an artilleryman stationed with A Battery, 5 4 Artillery, 1st Brigade, 5th Infantry Division, stepped on a land mine while his unit was preparing to move to a new area.

The first Charlevoix GI to lose his life in the Vietnam was Cpl. Larry Elzinga, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Elzinga of E. Lincoln-st., who was killed Aug. 3, 1968, near Saigon.

PFC Plumm was born at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 28, 1950. The family moved to Charlevoix in 1956 and Richard attended Charlevoix schools, graduating in 1969.

He enlisted in the Army in June of 1970 and took his basic training at Ft. Knox, Ky. He was stationed at Ft. Hood, Texas, before being sent overseas in March.

He had been in Vietnam only six weeks when he was killed.

PFC Plumm is survived by his parents, and four brothers, Sp 4 James R. Plumm, stationed with the U.S. Army in Germany; David, a senior at Charlevoix High School; Carl, 15; and Robert F., 10; and his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Beatrice Beair.

Funeral arrangements are pending.

PFC Plumm was a member of St. Marys Church. During his high school days he was a member of the track team.

James Plumm, the victim's brother, was wounded in Vietnam before being reassigned to Germany.

'Talking Giraffe' Is New Diagnostic Tool

A talking giraffe was presented to the Petoskey Mental Health Clinic by the American Telephone Pioneers, Wolverine Chapter No. 10, at a luncheon meeting May 24 at the Weathervane Inn.

Psychologists working with children with mental hangups have discovered that some youngsters are more willing to talk with animals than they are with fellow human beings --particularly adults.

In order to get to the seat of a child's disability, mental health people have wired stuffed animals with electronic speakers and listening posts that allow a youngster to exchange small talk with his toys.

The gear is operated by an unseen mental health aide in an adjoining room who monitors the child's conversation with the animal and is able to answer questions, via a speaker in the animal's mouth.

Local Telephone Pioneers decided to make a gift of one of the animals to the Mental Health Clinic after Gerald Bates, the group's newly elected central council vice president, heard a report on the new diagnostic tool during the Pioneers' convention recently in Cleveland, Ohio.

Russell Wood, acting director, accepted the gift on behalf of the Mental Health Clinic.

SINCE SOME kids relate better to animals than adults, animals that talk and listen have recently been added to psychologists' diagnostic tools. This talking giraffe was presented last week by American Telephone Pioneers, Wolverine Chapter No. 10, to the Petoskey Mental Health clinic. Above Gerald Bates, Pioneer council vice president, tells colleagues how the giraffe can help kids with mental problems.

Farm Bureau Rips 'No-Fault' Insurance

One of the State's major insurers has taken a strong stand against pending No-fault legislation which would affect Michigan auto insurance regulations.

Spokesmen for Farm Bureau Insurance Group, a multiple-line firm headquartered in Lansing, have charged the No-fault concept is being misrepresented to consumers. N.L. Vermillion, executive vice president, says the public has been led to believe proposed liability changes will automatically lower insurance premiums and eliminate claim settlement delays.

"There is no proof to substantiate implied claims made by proponents that a No-fault insurance system will lower premium costs," Vermillion stated. "It is just as possible, perhaps more probable, that rates would have to be increased. Accidents would still have to be thoroughly reviewed and disputes would still have to be settled."

State and federal lawmakers are currently considering several No-fault proposals. Most versions would add non-fault medical costs and income loss provisions to present liability coverages. Insureds would seek settlement from their own company, up to maximum amounts, regardless of who caused the accident.

Vermillion suggested the No-fault principle is virtually untested in practical application and should be subject to further study before legislation is passed.

"The firm proposes a three-point investigation and information program including 1) formation of a consumer-legislative - insurance industry committee to study effectiveness of the No-fault program initiated recently in Massachusetts, 2) establishment of a "Test County" in Michigan for measuring No-fault's potential affect on insurance rates and settlements and 3) development of a public information program.

Farm Bureau is currently distributing background material regarding the No-fault issue throughout the State.

"The public has a right to know exactly what it can expect under the No-fault concept – and ultimately, the right to vote yes or no. At this point, no one, including the insurance industry, knows what the ramifications would be," Vermillion concluded.

Fred Cohrs Moderates Business-Industry Meet

Fred Cohrs, manager of Medusa Portland Cement Company's Charlevoix plant, was moderator of a day-long High School-Business Symposium held Thursday, May 20, at the Holiday Inn in Traverse City.

The symposium, one of a series conducted throughout the state by the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce, was designed to "help young people better understand the free enterprise system," according to Harry R. Hall, president of the state chamber.

"The meetings have proven to be an excellent forum to exchange information and develop dialogue between students, faculty and businessmen," he said.

More than 120 businessmen, educators and high school students from Alba, Benzie Central, Buckley, Elk Rapids, Frankfort, Glen Lake, Interlochen Arts Academy, Kalkaska, Leelanau Schools, Leland, Northport, St. Marys, Suttons Bay and Traverse City Senior High School took part, as well as students from Northwestern Michigan College.

Speakers included Leland Bassett, project associate for the chamber's management assistance program, who spoke on "Business and Social Change"; David Kelly, owner-manager of radio station WTIQ, Manistique, who spoke on "Business and Government"; and Bob Hilty, northwest division manager for Consumers Power Co., who spoke on "Business and Profit."

Carl Jorgensen, manager of public affairs for the state chamber, said students and business representatives were seated at the same tables throughout the symposium for a better exchange of ideas. After their presentations, the speakers answered questions from the audience.

Firms sponsoring the students were Brown Lumber Co., Empire National Bank, Holiday Inn, Kentucky Fried Chicken, Michigan Mutual Auto Insurance Co., National Bank and Trust Co., Park Place Motor Inn, Purvis Brothers, Inc., Sears Roebuck and Co., the Traverse City Record - Eagle and the Traverse City State Bank.

Lions Back Babe Ruthers

The Charlevoix Lions Club has agreed to sponsor one team in Petoskey's Babe Ruth League for boys 13 to 15 this season, according to coordinator Larry Ford.

However, since 30 players signed up, there is plenty of talent available for another team, Ford reports. So he is scouting around for another sponsor and coaches for the two teams.

Volunteers for either role should contact Ford at 547-4227. The first games are scheduled June 14. All games will be played either at Petoskey or Harbor Springs.

First Quarter Loss Greater Than '70

Medusa Portland Cement Co.'s first quarter report to shareholders shows a 32 percent increase in billings to customers over the same period in 1970, but the customary operating loss for the quarter was almost a million dollars greater than the loss for January, February and March, 1970.

Billings to customers, less discounts, for the first three months of 1971 came to $9,774,000, compared to $7,422,000 for the same period in 1970.

Income (loss) before taxes was $1,721,000, compared to $775,000 the previous year. Net income (loss) was $1,068,000 in 1971 compared to $486,000 in 1970.

The loss per share of common stock was 57 cents in 1971, 26 cents greater than the loss of 31 cents in 1970.

For the 12 months ending March 31, billings to customers, less discounts, came to $77,424,000 in 1971, compared to $64,485,000 last year.

Income before taxes on income was down from $5,443,000 to $3,388,000 and net income dropped from $3,886,000 to $2,854,000. Earnings per share of common stock dropped from $2.04 to $1.19.

In their statement to shareholders, chairman Ellery Sedgwick jr. and President Robert W. Fort said the customary operating loss in the first quarter was larger than last year for a number of reasons.

"Approximately one-half of the increase resulted from inclusion this year of the seasonal loss of companies acquired after last year's first quarter. Losses from cement operations were greater despite some improvement in volume and price; we experienced a disadvantageous pattern of shipments by product, plant or origin and market destination, but consider it a random and temporary condition," they reported.

They concluded their report on a note of optimism:

"During the past three or four months, forecasts of construction activity in 1971 have been revised upward by several construction forecasting agencies. We have on hand contracts and commitments for delivery this year of substantially more barrels than at this time last year. Evidence to date indicates that the price improvement we had budgeted will be achieved. As a result, we continue to look forward to an improvement in profits over last year."

CLEAN WATER
WATER POLLUTION CONTROL FACILITIES
CITY OF EAST JORDAN

DAVE BOHN of Cheboygan displays decorative bowl made of acrylic plastic, one of the entries in the Regional Industrial Education Fair held at Charlevoix High School recently. Sheets of plastic are heated and then shaped in a wooden mold.

East Jordan Starts Work on Lagoons

Work has started on East Jordan's new waste water treatment facility which carries a price tag of $500,000.

East Jordan has decided on a spray irrigation system, using stabilization lagoons, in contrast to Charlevoix's proposed tertiary treatment plant, which will discharge treated effluent into Lake Michigan.

Treatment in stabilization lagoons is a continuous process by which the organic compounds are broken up into carbon dioxide and nutrients.

Algae, a simply aquatic plant, absorbs the carbon dioxide and releases oxygen. The oxygen, in turn, spurs bacteria growth which reduces and deodorizes organic matter in the waste water.

Located at the East Jordan airport, the system will return nutrients to the land where they will be absorbed by soil and crops. Water returns to the surface water through subsurface soils. Since it is stripped of nutrients, it places no adverse load on surface waters, according to Williams and Works.

The water is suitable for domestic, agricultural, industrial and recreational use.

"The system utilized natural methods, refined by careful design and proper maintenance," the engineers claim.

Penn-Dixie Shows Loss

Penn-Dixie Cement Corp. reports net sales and revenues for the first quarter ended March 31, 1971, totalled $36,413,015, as compared to $38,484,619 for the same period in 1970.

The company posted a net loss of $556,342, or 19 cents per share, in the 1971 quarter, compared to a net loss of $571,812, or 20 cents per share, for the 1970 first quarter.

Jerome Castle, chairman, stated that "the first quarter loss is attributable to the seasonal nature of our business. We are hopeful that Penn-Dixie can demonstrate an improvement."

CHAMBER
Sunnyside-Up

A lot has happened over the past two weeks. The board of directors met and discussed upcoming events. Things are moving along just fine.

The Chamber's four season tabloid edition is being "rapped-up"......it looks as though we really had a nice turn out from the merchants. We will have them available here in the Chamber office in early June. Good job merchants.

Speaking of June......the Projects Committee met last Wednesday and it's JUNE 12. JUNE 12 is the day the Chamber will hold its first Annual Spring Ball. The committee will meet next week again; then I'll release all the information.

QUEENS COME FORWARD ...... It's that time again, we are asking all the "young lovelies" of Charlevoix who wish to participate in this year's queen contest to fill out an application as soon as possible. Mrs. C.H. Smith is going to help on the Queens Committee this year. For information contact the Chamber.

Also serving on the queen's committee will be Mrs. Larry Warner and Mrs. George Richardson.

It's drawing near the deadline for all Hobbycrafters to enter the third annual Hobbycraft show. The deadline is June 1.

I attended a meeting of the Waterfront Art Fair Committee at Mrs. Paul Olsen's home last week. The girls really have this year's fair under complete control.....it's going to be another fabulous event for Charlevoix.

Watch for the UNUSUAL....the merchants of Charlevoix have a pleasant surprise for Northern Michigan residents. You'll hear and see it around June 8.

3. The thinking man takes active steps to keep his community clean. The tools are at hand.
4. The United States Brewers Association is ready to help you. We're working at the local and national levels to create greater public awareness. To attack apathy. To help keep America Beautiful.

Consumers Power Co. has initiated a long-range program to maintain service to its electric customers during possible emergency situations with greater strength of reserves and greater reliability.

B.G. Campbell, vice president of marketing, said ~~that throughout this week,~~ company representatives in all 12 electric operating divisions are making personal calls to major electric customers.

"The end result of this plan," Campbell said, "is to provide an additional margin of electric reserves so that when the demand reaches a high peak, we will be able to maintain essential electric supply to all customers."

The plan is designed to work this way – In the event of severe emergency conditions, requiring the reduction of the use of electricity throughout Consumers Power's system, additional power will be requested from the neighboring utilities who are now interconnected with Consumers Power.

If those additional supplies are not available in sufficient quantities, the electrical voltage will be reduced throughout the system approximately five percent.

If the combination of these two steps is still insufficient, the company will then reduce its own power requirements.

Finally, if the emergency condition still exists, the company will ask its major industrial and commercial customers to voluntarily reduce electric loads which would not impair productivity or safety.

In the event that all of the above precautions fail to conserve a sufficient amount of electrical energy, then a public appeal would be made to all customers to voluntarily reduce their use of electricity and to keep it at a minimum for the duration of the emergency.

The company refers to this plan as its load management program. Basically, it is a plan which has been conceived well in advance in order to be ready at a moment's notice. If, in fact, electrical shortages result from major generating plant breakdowns, devastating storms, or other unforseen problems.

"It is very unlikely," Campbell concluded, "that Consumers Power Co. would have to put this plan into effect. The last thing we want to do is to ask our customers to voluntarily restrict their use of electric power. But if an emergency situation were to develop, we know we must have this plan ready to implement at a moment's notice."

To Ship Swans to Illinois

Department of Natural Resources wildlife specialists next week will live-trap 20-25 juvenile mute swans from Grand Traverse Bay for transfer to a public recreation area under development west of Peoria, Ill.

The swans originally were brought to northern Michigan by a Chicago Club family in the early days of the century and have spread out to other areas, notably East Jordan and Traverse City.

Assisting them in next week's project will be personnel from the Illinois Department of Conservation, whose officials requested the majestic birds for an introductory release in the area, a coal-mining reclamation site.

Illinois conservation leaders want young mute swans for their project because these juvenile birds will have an opportunity to become accustomed to their new "home" before they become adults in the next year or two.

Edward J. Mikula, waterfowl specialist for Michigan's DNR, reports that next week's capture of the 20-25 birds won't put a dent in the Grand Traverse region's population of mute swans which is estimated at about 500.

He points out that the birds bound for Illinois will be trapped from a flock of 140-160 juvenile mute swans which are now found in Grand Traverse Bay. Mikula adds that the region's population of mute swans is now at the threshold of a dramatic upswing, and he estimates that the birds' 1971 crop will number about 200 young.

Under next week's trapping operation, wildlife workers will take an equal number of male and female birds to help the swans' chances of becoming successfully established in the Illinois area. The birds' adjustment to their new home will be favored by the fact that the Illinois site will remain closed to public use and, consequently, disturbance sfor the next several years.

Who Will Be The Last To Die in Vietnam?

Although the poignancy of the Vietnam War lives with service families day in and day out, year in and year out, it scarcely touches the rest of the community until a hometown boy pays the supreme sacrifice.

A second Charlevoix GI has been killed in that worn-torn country, raising anew the question: Who will be the last American to lose his life in the Vietnam War?

On Aug. 3, 1968, Cpl. Larry Elzinga, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Elzinga of Lincoln-st., was numbered among the casualties.

On May 22, 1971, only six weeks after reaching Vietnam, PFC Richard Plumm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Plumm of Upright-st., stepped on a land mine and was killed.

Although a sizeable number of Americans, including GI's who have served in Vietnam, will still argue the validity of American involvement in Vietnam, a growing number of citizens are beginning entertain grave doubts as to the morality and the wisdom of continuing to fight a war in which the nation's stakes are so meager.

All of which makes the deaths of Cpl. Elzinga and PFC Plumm that much more tragic.

Certainly both young men died for their country. But does this country, or any country, have a right to demand such sacrifices from its young? Who will be the last American to lose his life in the Vietnam War?

Even Mol Surprised By Appointment as Chief

Last Monday's meeting was no exception.

Just before Essenburg banged down the gavel he announced the appointment of Alderman Jack Mol as chief of police, succeeding the late Joe Smith.

The appointment not only took the council and City Superintendent Thomas Hanna by surprise, but also came as news to Mol himself.

He wanted time to think it over, so the appointment will not go before the council until June 7.

However, Mol has said he will welcome the opportunity to serve the city as chief, even though it means relinquishing his elected seat on the council.

The appointment was particularly surprising since it was generally agreed by the council after Smith's death that the city should look out-of-town for a new chief--someone preferably from a larger community with the schooling and experience to cope with the problems, principally trafficking in narcotics, which Charlevoix encountered last summer.

Furthermore, Essenburg told Mol shortly after he was elected that he was looking elsewhere for a chief, even though Mol had expressed an interest in the position.

However, we feel that Mol--even though he has spent most of his life in other types of work --might be just the man for the job.

He has studied police administration for two years at Lake Superior State College.

He has served the county as a deputy sheriff and the city as a special police officer for the past 13 years.

He knows Charlevoix and Charlevoixans as well as anybody in town.

And furthermore, he is still young enough at 43 to be practically dead center of the generation gap. We believe that Mol, as chief, will be able to work with youngsters and senior citizens alike.

Although he will be missed at the council table, we feel he can better serve the city as chief of police.

Ex-Classmate Pays Tribute to PFC Plumm

By BETH BALDWIN

Once again Charlevoix has been made brutality aware of the war in Vietnam. For the second time a local family has been hit with tragedy and grief that is a direct result of our involvement in Southeast Asia.

For the family of Richard D. Plumm, our second and hopefully last Vietnam victim, the war has taken something that can never be replaced a son, a grandson, and brother. It's impossible to fathom the anguish they must feel.

As for the rest of us, we have lost a friend and a former classmate. Those who knew him, and even those who didn't, share in the grief of his family for one more young man has given his life in the service of his country.

This may be a good time to wonder how the thousands of other families that have suffered the loss of a son or husband because of the Vietnam war feel. And this may be the time to wonder if the war is worth the pain it has brought. Peace, does it even exist for those stationed in Vietnam? It doesn't for those back home left to wail, worry and wonder.

The family of Richard Plumm doesn't have to wonder any longer, and their wait has ended. All that is left for those who knew Richard Plumm is memories...memories of his first birthday, his first day in school, his two years on the track team for Charlevoix High School...the memory of his graduation day as he proudly walked up to receive his diploma as part of the 1969 Charlevoix High School graduating class.

The 100 plus graduates chose the motto "We have opened the door, have we the courage to go beyond?" Courage or not these students had to venture out into a new way of life. Richard Plumm decided to join the service and enlisted in the army last June at the age of 19. Less than a year later, on May 22, he stepped on an a mine and it was over.

Dear Mr. Clock:

I wish to take this opportunity to thank you and all the other people who signed my nominating petitions for one of the upcoming vacancies on the Charlevoix Board of Education. Your signatures were greatly appreciated. I decided, however, not to submit myself as a candidate for one of these vacancies due to my previous commitment to the Charlevoix Baseball Program. This letter is written in answer to the inquiries that I have received in regards to my reasons for withdrawing.

Two years ago, when the baseball program was first introduced, we had two teams of 9-12 year-olds, with about 25 boys involved. Last year we had five teams of 6-13 year-olds, with about 80 boys involved. This summer we intend to field seven to nine teams in four different age brackets: 5-7 year-olds; 8-12 year-olds; 13-15 year olds; and 16-18 year olds. The latter two age groups will be playing in the Babe Ruth and Senior Leagues in Petoskey this summer. Sponsors have to be found, coaches have to be induced to volunteer their services, umpires have to be obtained, and last, but not least, money has to be raised. Needless-to-say, the time demanded, as director of the program, has increased in proportion to the increase in the number of boys participating.

I can think of no higher honor that a man can have than to be chosen by his peers to represent them on something as important as a Board of Education. I have two children of my own, and like most of you, I have great interest in my children and great concern for the type of education they receive. I am honored to have been considered for a position on the School Board, however, at this point in time, I feel that I might better serve the community as director of the Charlevoix Baseball Program.

Sincerely,
L.J. Ford

Too Many Laws to Suit This Reader

Mr. Bob Clock,
The Charlevoix Courier.

Dear Mr. Clock:

At the moment, there is a great outcry for law and order in our country and it seems all citizens should subscribe to this movement. On reflection, one discerns that the clamor is for order, not law. We have plenty of law and many, very many, too many laws.

It may be stated as a premise that this is no longer a nation of law-abiding people, We all hold strongly to the laws with which we agree, but break others in the firm belief they shouldn't have been enacted and are rank discrimination against all good citizens. It must be admitted there is some justification for this view; too many laws have been enacted to favor small groups and some nit-pickers will claim the practice is still extant.

It is almost impossible to get bad laws off the books, but following is a suggestion that might be helpful: let there be a ruling that no lawmaking body may enact a new law without repealing two now in effect. This could create enough whipsawing among our legislators to slow down some of the ill-thought-out bills now in the mill. On second thought, the laws they eliminate would probably be good ones. Well, it was an idea.

May the Good Lord look down with compassion on the law-abiding citizen–or perhaps there are two. And may He bless my Irish Sweetstakes ticket.

For fewer and better laws,
Geddie.

Practical Joker

Although I haven't heard of a good practical joke being played in Charlevoix in many moons, there is still one loyal practitioner of the art at the other end of The Lake, namely Dave Condon, a sports columnist for the Chicago Tribune.

The Tribune's Sunday magazine last week devoted several pages to Condon and some of the delightful stunts he pulls on his co-workers, neighbors, friends and, of course, his enemies. The article was written by Clay Gowran, one of Condon's co-workers.

Listen to how the hefty (259-pound) sports scribe, given to big cigars and riotous living, brightened up a humdrum baseball game last season between the Chicago White Sox and the Oakland Athletics before 4,697 spectators at White Sox Park:

"Onto the playing field pranced the biggest, sorriest looking female since the days of Tugboat Annie, galumphing over the turf in size 12 sneakers and puffing away on a cigar. This dreadnought of distaffery headed straight for Oakland outfielder Joe Rudi and, before, the bewildered Rudi could figure out what was happening, Fatso had a beefy arm locked around his neck and planting a lip-sticky kiss on Joe's cheek, fortunately having removed the cigar first.

"Then as the park organist played "A Pretty Girl Is Like A Melody," Rudi's assailant hoofed it back to the third base line where "she" was introduced to the noisily delighted fans. The South Sice Madame La Zonga, the voice of the Sox explained when he finally managed to be heard, was sports columnist Dave Condon of the Tribune, who, the Sox buy said, enjoys practical jokes."

Gowran says that if the Tribune ever decides to offer an intramural award for practical joking, Condon will win hands down.

One of Condon's favorite targets in year's past was a Miss Mary Pentoney, a young secretary who had "an encouraging tendency" to believe everything she heord over the telephone.

One morning when Condon was shaving, he noticed how much his electric razor sounded like a small airplane – and another practical joke was born.

"He was shaving in the kitchen, near a telephone," Gowran writes. "On a handy counter he arranged a half dozen breakfast dishes into a tidy pile, topped off the stack with an aluminum pot and silverware and, keeping the razor going, picked up the phone. He put in a call to Herb Lyon (Mary's boss) who was certain not to be in his office at that hour, and Mary answered. Dave assumed his most executive-ish voice.

"This," he proclaimed, is Comdr. McDonald, head of Zenith Radio, I wish to inform Mr. Lyon, a gentleman for whom I have great admiration, of an amazing break-thru in the communications industry. After long years of research Zenith has perfected an airplane telephone, and I am calling you from a ship over the Rocky Mountains.'

"Could Miss Pentoney hear him, the commander wanted to know? Could she hear the engines? Oh, she certainly could, said Mary, all excited, making notes like crazy. Comdr. McDonald went on to explain that he wanted Lyon to have a scoop on the story which would be released in two days, and Mary was thanking him and saying she'd reach Herb immediately when, with a finger, Condon made the razor sputter.

"'One engine's gone out,' the commander yelled, and flicked the razor again. 'There goes another, and we're in a snowstorm. It looks like....God it looks.....'

"Condon pushed the dishes off the counter and, as the stuff hit the floor, hung up. That afternoon he got to the office about 4 and, on his woy to sports, looked in on a wan Mary and Herb. What a hell of a day it'd been, they told him wearily. They'd had the whole newsroom checking a mystery plane crash which had obviously done for Comdr. McDonald of Zenith Radio, even the Zenith was being uncooperative by insisting nothing of the sort had happened.

"'He was actually phoning me, right from the airplane at the instant it crashed said Mary, getting all excited again. 'I heard it, and it was terrible.'

"Condon proffered a platitude about how even the best newspaper guys occasionally luck out on a story, then returned to sports and got a glass of water. He dialed Mary once more and, as she answered, began gargling. After several wet-sounding moments, he finally said: "Miss Pentoney, Comdr. McDonald again – this time I'm phoning from a submarine."

Dave Condon certainly must make life interesting on the Tribune. But I wonder how they ever get a paper out?

Dream Shattered

By JIM FITZGERALD

I never would have believed it. I should be laughing but here I am crying.

All my life I have had only one modest ambition. I wanted to own my own private poolroom and bar.

Other men want to be president, or to fondle the town doll; or to own exclusive rights to sell GM records to GM. Some men yearn most to break 90 at golf, or shoot their way to safety through a herd of rampaging deer.

To each his own. I always wanted my own bar and poolroom.

When I was about 15, some of my relatives began insisting I was a poolroom bum. But a couple of years later, some other relatives disagreed, claiming I was a barroom bum. I used to be confused myself about which I wanted most to be. But then all the bars began installing pool tables and I realized happily that it was possible to be both.

Unfortunately, it was at about this same time that I got married and both noble activities, bar and pool, were severely curtailed. It is difficult to be either type of bum when you are married to a woman who won't let you empty the garbage after sundown for fear you might escape in the dark.

The only answer was to install my own bar and poolroom in our basement. It took me 16 years to save enough money. I did it by depositing $1 in an old shoe every time my wife caught me running toward the bright lights with the garbage.

So now the bar is built, a splendid thing where I can prop one foot higher and the top fits perfectly under my elbow. On the other side of the room the space is cleared and the lights are waiting. A magnificent pool table is ordered and will arrive any day.

So why am I crying when I should be laughing? I guess it's the principle of the thing...

Behind the bar my wife has added a few things I hadn't planned on. Such as a range and oven and refrigerator and sink. They're nice, of course, and I really didn't mind much until yesterday when she said:

"How do you like the blue Formica I ordered for the counter tops in the kitchen?"

KITCHEN! She is calling my bar a kitchen. I am sick.

And I am sicker when I look at my poolroom area and see a piano. I can hear her now: "Jim is down in the music room playing 8-ball."

She has probably hired a little old lady in an embroidered apron to tend bar and rack balls. And if I hang around too much, she'll probably tell everyone I'm a kitchen bum.

Onward and Upward?

City Sprawl Devouring Farmland

By GARY A. KLEINHERN
Michigan Farm Bureau

If we were to look at a 30-year-old land use map of Michigan, we would see vast oceans of green indicating agricultural land, and we would see but islands of grey representing our population centers.

Looking at a 1971 land use map the reverse is true. We would see vast areas of grey, but only islands of green. The pattern jars our senses as to what the result might be 30 years hence–will green land and open spaces be gone?

Take the green fertile agricultural land just in the southern half of our Lower Peninsula. Urban sprawl is moving like an octopus to smother this productive food land. Each time its tentacles push out to build yet another housing development, another grave for our food and fiber supply is sealed.

Two thirds of Michigan's dynamic agriculture is produced in 22 of our 83 counties, and no less than 20 of these 22 fertile counties bordered in southern Michigan could virtually disappear within 30 years, because our state lacks the necessary guidelines for intelligently controlled growth.

Thankfully, however, man is a rational being and because he is, sprinklings of hope offer confidence that man will reel back from the onslaught on his environment. This is the promise citizens look for in our law making bodies.

This crisis grows larger each day because state and local governments get the majority of their funds from property and consumer taxes, and this tax pressure is shoving farmers off the land.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, farmers pay over 20 percent of their net income for property taxes–four to five times greater than non-farmers. The fatal error is born in taxing farmland for its potential development value rather than for the purpose of raising food.

The "Green Acres" bill, House Bill 4100 and Senate Bill 130, can save agricultural land by taxing it for that purpose alone. However, it clearly points out that if agland were ever sold for another purpose, a special roll-back tax would be enforced to equalize any tax relief the land had received in the past, thereby curbing its fast disappearance.

As private citizens, you can help by supporting your governmental representatives to make the right decision and in keeping any fatalistic forecast of Michigan agriculture in the perspective of only a bad dream.

Traffic Jams Menace English Channel Ships

Areas where shipping lanes meet pose increasing dangers as ships become larger, faster, and more numerous. One "area of convergence" is off Nantucket, where the Italian liner Andrea Doria sank after a collision with the Swedish liner Stockholm in 1956.

But Nantucket's traffic pales beside the shipping that throngs the English Channel, the National Geographic Society says.

1,000 SHIPS A DAY

Up to 1,000 ships a day pass through the stretch of water between England and France; the daily average is 750. Half the world's collisions at sea are in the 350-mile-long Channel, where at least one accident occurs every month.

Two ships sank and 30 persons died earlier this year in two Channel crashes in as many days.

A pilot who has guided vessels through the waterway for 13 years says he never makes a trip without one or more close calls.

CHANNEL NARROWS

The Channel is about 112 miles wide at its western end, where it meets the Atlantic Ocean, and narrows to 21 miles as it passes through the Strait of Dover to meet the North Sea.

Sandbars and rocks further restrict the open water available to heavily laden ships, while strong tides, storms, and frequent fog add to the hazards.

After 53 collisions in 21 months, representatives of 11 countries met in London in 1965 and agreed upon traffic rules.

KEEP RIGHT

Ships sailing west through the Strait of Dover toward the Atlantic Ocean now follow the English coast, while vessels bound eastward toward the North Sea hug the French coast.

Accidents continue, however, and maritime authorities are debating whether the traffic pattern should be revised, and possibly reversed.

Though the Channel is a superhighway for ocean-going commerce today, it's historic significance has been military.

The only two successful invasions of England were launched across its choppy waters. Galleys landed Ceasar's legions near Dover in 55 and 54 B.C. to begin more than four centuries of Roman occupation.

The last invading army crossed from Normandy in 1066, led by William the Conqueror.

FLEET DEFEATED

Other attempts failed. Warships from the Cinque Ports-Hastings, Romney, Hythe, Dover, and Sandwich–defeated a French fleet in the Channel in 1217.

Drake gave Britain its greatest Channel victory in 1588 when he sailed from Portsmouth to destroy a 24,000-man invasion force Philip II of Spain had packed into the 125 ships of his Grand Armada.

Germany assembled an invasion force in French ports during World War II to strike at Britain, but abandoned the effort when the Luftwaffe failed to gain supremacy in the skies over the Channel. Later [illegible] came in the opposite [illegible] when [illegible] troops left Channel ports to land in Normandy on June 6, 1944.

Cadillac for 1971. It could well be your best car buy any way you look at it.

Performance. The proven 472-cubic-inch V-8 is amazingly responsive—on regular gasoline or no-lead and low-lead fuels.

Decision Awaited On Suit

Federal District Judge Albert Engel in Grand Rapids said last Wednesday (May 26) that he will need more time to reach a decision in the lawsuit brought by Shaw-Henderson, Inc., of Cheboygan against the city of Charlevoix and the federal government over the awarding of a contract for construction of the new waste water treatment plant to Clark Construction of Lansing.

Shaw-Henderson attorneys maintain that because of alleged irregularities in the Clark bid the contract should have been awarded to Shaw-Henderson, second low bidder.

Special City Attorney John Michael, who attended a hearing on the litigation last week in Grand Rapids, said Judge Engel asked more time to study the mountain of exhibits presented to him by both sides.

Michael and the U.S. Attorney General's office have asked Judge Engel to dismiss the case on grounds that the federal court has no jurisdiction in the matter.

The federal government became involved because of federal participation in the project.

6 Vying for 2 Seats In Monday's Election

Charlevoix School District voters will elect two members to the Board of Education – one for a four-year term and one for a two-year term – and decide three separate millage proposals, totaling 10¾ mills, when they go to the polls Monday, June 14.

The first proposal is for 6½ mills for three years, which will replace operational millage which is expiring this year. The second proposal is for 2¼ mills for one year which will allow the district to meet the rising cost of education and expand the Vocation Education program. The third proposal is for 2 mills for five years to go into a building and site sinking fund.

The third proposal involves two ballots, one establishing the sinking fund and another levying the millage.

Candidates for the four-year vacancy on the Board of Education are Donald Brown, Charles Elzinga and Edward Buday sr.

The winners will succeed Jack Rader and Mrs. Robert Hooper, who are not running for re-election.

DONALD BROWN

Donald Brown was born in Charlevoix Feb. 9, 1928, and was graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1946. After a three-year hitch in the Army, he studied industrial arts at Ferris State College for one year.

In 1950 he was recalled to active duty to serve during the Korean War and spent two more years in the Army.

After his discharge, he joined Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., working out of Detroit, Kalamazoo, Milwaukee, Grand Rapids and Michigan City, Ind.

In 1956, he returned to Charlevoix and worked for Morweld Steel at Ellsworth before joining Hess Furniture in 1964. He presently is sales manager for Hess.

Brown and his wife, Lo Anne, have three children; Marcia, 18; Terri, 15; and Andrea, 9. The family lives at 208 Clinton-st.

Brown believes the present School Board is doing an excellent job and he is interested in seeing present programs continued and expanded.

CHARLES ELZINGA

Charles Elzinga was born in Charlevoix Sept. 21, 1930, and attended Charlevoix High School. He entered the Army after his junior year and completed his high school education in the Army.

After four years in the service, including 38 months in Germany, Elzinga returned to Charlevoix in 1952 and joined American Mold Engineering Corp. He worked for American Mold until 1955, when he moved to the East Jordan Iron Works. In 1957, he returned to American Mold and remained there until 1954 when he became a fulltime agent for Farm Bureau Insurance Co.

He was married in 1952 to the former Bonnie Drost. They have three children: Chuck, 17; Carol, 16; and David, 9. The family lives at 1206 State-st.

Elzinga has long been active in local church and youth activities and presently is chairman of the board of directors for the Petoskey area Youth for Christ movement. The organization has two chapters in Charlevoix, one at the high school and one at the junior high school. He also served as treasurer of the Assembly of God Church for six years.

Elzinga says his main concern in seeking a seat on the Board of Education is seeing that Charlevoix's tax dollars for education are spent wisely and that they are used to buy the best possible education for Charlevoix young people.

He believes that from 40 to 60 percent of Charlevoix's school enrollment should be involved in some kind of vocational education.

He also believes that every avenue should be explored to bring all the federal and state money possible into Charlevoix's school program.

EDWARD BUDAY SR.

As the father of nine children, Edward Buday sr. feels he has as great a stake as anyone in the success of Charlevoix's school program.

He was born Nov. 24, 1932, in Benzie County and was graduated from Traverse City Central High School in 1951. He spent one year as a liberal arts student at Northwestern Michigan College in Traverse City and another year at the University of Detroit studying engineering before he was drafted into the Army for two years in 1953.

After his discharge in 1955, Buday attended the Radio Electronic Television School in Detroit for two years. He worked as a radio and TV repairman in Traverse City for three years before joining Puff's Appliance as service manager eight years ago.

He was married in 1955 to the former Joan Kroetsch. They have nine children: Edward jr., 14; Ann Marie, 13; Mary Jo, 11; Douglas, 10; Marie Therese, 9; David, 7; Daniel, 5; Maureen, 3; and Kathleen, 2.

"I'm for good education," Buday says, "but I don't always think that more money is the answer to our problems."

If elected, he says he will strive better communications between the schools and the community.

He says he is particularly impressed with some of Charlevoix's younger teachers and the work they are doing.

WILLIAM WILSON

William Wilson was born March 9, at St. Louis, Mich., and was graduated from St. Louis High School in 1957. He received a B.A. degree in English from Alma College in 1961 and his M.A. in literature from Central Michigan University in 1963.

He also has taught at CMU on a fellowship and has done post-graduate work at the University of Michigan and Wayne State University.

He joined Consumers Power Co. June 1, 1964, and has been public relations representative at the company's Big Rock Point Nuclear Power Plant since last summer.

Wilson also has worked in Consumers' student training program in Livonia, Jackson and Alma.

He and his wife, the former Carolyn Malpass of East Jordan, have three children: Emily, 6; Robert, 5; and Elizabeth, 2. They live at North Point.

Wilson says he is running for the School Board because he has taught and is familiar with school problems.

He also is impressed by what he has seen of the Charlevoix school system.

"It seems progressive and is keeping abreast of current education developments," he says.

Wilson says he favors the district's emphasis on cultural programs, but believes that more attention should be paid to vocational education.

LARRY WARNER

Larry Warner was born in Charlevoix April 26, 1943, and was graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1961. He studied traffic management at Humboldt Institute for a year before entering the Army for a two-year hitch in 1962. He worked in the Army finance office at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo.

After his discharge, Warner worked for American Mold Engineering Corp. for three years before moving to Dayton, Ohio, where he was part owner of a restaurant.

He returned to Charlevoix in 1970 and presently is in the Giantway trainee program at Petoskey.

Warner was married in 1962 to the former Lorraine Heise of Charlevoix. They have two children, Michelle, 7; and Kent, 4. A third addition to the family is expected in August. The family lives at 226 Antrim-st.

Sewage Plant Suit Dismissed

Shaw-Henderson Fails to Stop Job

Federal District Judge Albert J. Engel of Grand Rapids has dismissed the case of Shaw-Henderson Inc., of Cheboygan against the city of Charlevoix and Federal Water Quality Administration Director R.J. Schneider, clearing the way for construction of the city's proposed waste water treatment plant.

Shaw-Henderson had sought an injunction blocking construction on grounds that it should have been awarded the contract, rather than Clark Construction of Lansing, because of alleged irregularities in the Clark bid. Clark was low bidder, with Shaw-Henderson second.

Special City Attorney John Michael told the council Monday night that he had received word shortly before 5 p.m. of the judge's decision.

Judge Engel said that his court did have jurisdiction in the case insofar as the Federal Water Quality Administration is concerned, but that the federal office acted within its rights in granting a portion of the money for the project.

He said he does not have jurisdiction insofar as the city of Charlevoix is concerned "for the reason that the federal claim lacks substantiality."

Judge Engel exempted the federal government from further litigation in the matter and indicated that Shaw-Henderson would have to get a Charlevoix taxpayer to file suit for the company if it wishes to pursue the suit in Charlevoix Circuit Court.

Michael said it is unlikely that Shaw-Henderson will appeal Judge Engel's decision in federal court or attempt to start the suit anew in Circuit Court, since the judge ruled both on the jurisdiction and the merits of the case.

Bids on the sale of $700,000 in general obligation bonds for the waste water plant were to be opened at the City Hall at 8 p.m. Tuesday night. Clark hopes to have men and equipment on the site Wednesday morning.

In other business the council:

–Accepted the resignation of Jack Mol as First Ward alderman and approved his appointment as chief of police.

–Approved Mayor Andrew Essenburg's appointment of Sam Supernaw as Mol's successor as First Ward alderman.

–Heard a report by Larry Ford that city youngsters are badly in need of baseball diamonds for practice. The request was sent to committee. Ford expects to have from 125 to 150 boys playing baseball this summer.

–Told George Nipson of the Charlevoix Chemical Co. that it is hoping to reserve land in Charlevoix's northside industrial park for companies with large numbers of employes. Nipson wanted to buy some of the land to construct a warehouse for his business. However, the council said it is possible that Nipson may pick up land in the area optioned to Robert Dyksterhouse several years ago.

–Heard a request by Charlevoix Township

Hooded Men Accost Guard At Big Rock

Three hooded men accosted Big Rock Plant guard Peter Winnick in the parking lot of the strike-bound plant Monday night, took away his walkie-talkie radio, hit him, broke the windshield of his car with a rock and splattered green paint on the vehicle, State Police report.

Winnick, 64, of R-3, Charlevoix, said the men were in a tan station wagon which pulled up next to his car in the parking lot about 11 p.m. He couldn't identify them because they were wearing hoods.

He said they took his walkie-talkie, which was later found damaged.

Then one of the men hit him on the shoulder and the acts of vandalism were committed.

Tuesday morning, a large number of pickets appeared at the plant, but non-striking workers were allowed to enter after the arrival of sheriff's deputies and State Police.

The plant was struck by the Utility Workers of America May 12.

Building Trades Featured

Charlevoix School District residents are invited to an openhouse at the Building Trades House on Hampton-rd. Friday and Saturday, June 11 and 12, from 2 until 8 p.m.

Suppliers of building materials and other businesses which assisted in the project have made possible a special "Building Trades" section, which appears on pages 5 and 8 of this week's Courier. Graduates appear on pages 6 and 7, making the section a handy "clip-out-and-save" item.

Superintendent Robert L. Miller has congratulated Instructor John Mills and his Building Trades students for their exceptional workmanship.

"This fine house serves as an illustration of what our young people can achieve when they are given adequate opportunity," Miller said.

He also offered his thanks and appreciation to all individuals and other classes at Charlevoix High School who participated in the project.

"The cooperation and pride exhibited by the students of Charlevoix High School is indeed gratifying. I sincerely hope that in the future we can continue to expand the opportunities for young people in vocational-technical education at Charlevoix High School," he said.

Construction Starts On LexaLite Wing

LexaLite Corp. and the Charlevoix Development Corp. announce that a $50,000 building expansion program is underway at the LexaLite plant on U.S. 31 North.

Josh Barnes, LexaLite president, says the project will add 10,000 square feet of manufacturing space to the present plant, as well as a 200 square-foot Employe Service Center, incorporating a new lunchroom, restrooms and locker space.

Contractor on the job is Jim Behling Construction Co. of Boyne City, authorized Davco Metal Building representative for the area.

Completion of the project is scheduled for August.

Barnes says the plant presently employes 52 workers but that he anticipates an additional 12 employes will be hired before the end of the year.

He expects to hire an additional eight to 10 workers in 1972.

The new addition will be located north of the present plant toward Lake Michigan. Only a portion of the roof will be visible from the highway, Barnes said.

Like the original structure, the addition will be heated by electricity, supplemented by hot water heat from the cooling systems of machines used in the plant.

HONOR GUARDS escort the body of PFC Richard Plumm into St. Mary's church for a requium mass on Friday. PFC Plumm was killed in Vietnam May 22. Fr. Francis Denay remarked during the mass that the "young serviceman was caught in a battle of ideas and gave his life for justice."

Mrs. Mari Marshall New Lodge Manager

Mrs. James (Mari) Marshall has been appointed manager of The Lodge motel at the corner of Petoskey-rd. and E. Dixon-ave., effective June 15.

The appointment was announced by Julius Gilbert of Charlevoix, president of The Pines, Inc., owner and operator of The Lodge.

Mrs. Marshall will replace Brinn Seymour, acting manager of The Lodge for the past seven years. Seymour is going into business for himself. He has been associated with The Lodge for the past 13 years.

Mrs. Marshall moved to Charlevoix with her family from Waterford Township in Oakland County, three years ago.

She was secretary to attorney Norm Ance for two years before starting her own business, the Charlevoix Secretarial Service, last year. The business was conducted in connection with the Secretary of State's branch office at Oleson's Shopping Center which she also managed.

Mrs. Marshall gave up the Secretary of State post this spring after discovering there is scarcely enough money in operating a license plate office on a fee basis to pay the overhead.

A native of Ann Arbor, Mrs. Marshall graduated from Ann Arbor High School and has worked as a secretary and office administrator for the past 20 years, chiefly as a legal, medical and psychiatric secretary.

She has worked as supervisor of the secretarial staff of the Hawthorne Center, a children's psychiatric hospital at Northville, private secretary to legal arbitrator David A. Wolff at Ann Arbor and private secretary to the director of publications at Michigan State University, among other secretarial jobs.

Mrs. Marshall's husband, Jim Marshall, is an insurance representative and a consultant for the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District.

The Marshalls, who live at 209 Elm-st., have four children, Mrs. Richard Lewis, David, 17; Timmy, 14; and Roger, 10.

Although Mrs. Marshall has never operated a motel before, she has found her "break-in" period fascinating.

"I have always enjoyed meeting the public and working with people," she says.

MRS. MARI MARSHALL, former manager of the Secretary of State's branch office, will take over as manager of The Lodge Motel June 15. She succeeds Brian Seymour who is going into business for himself.

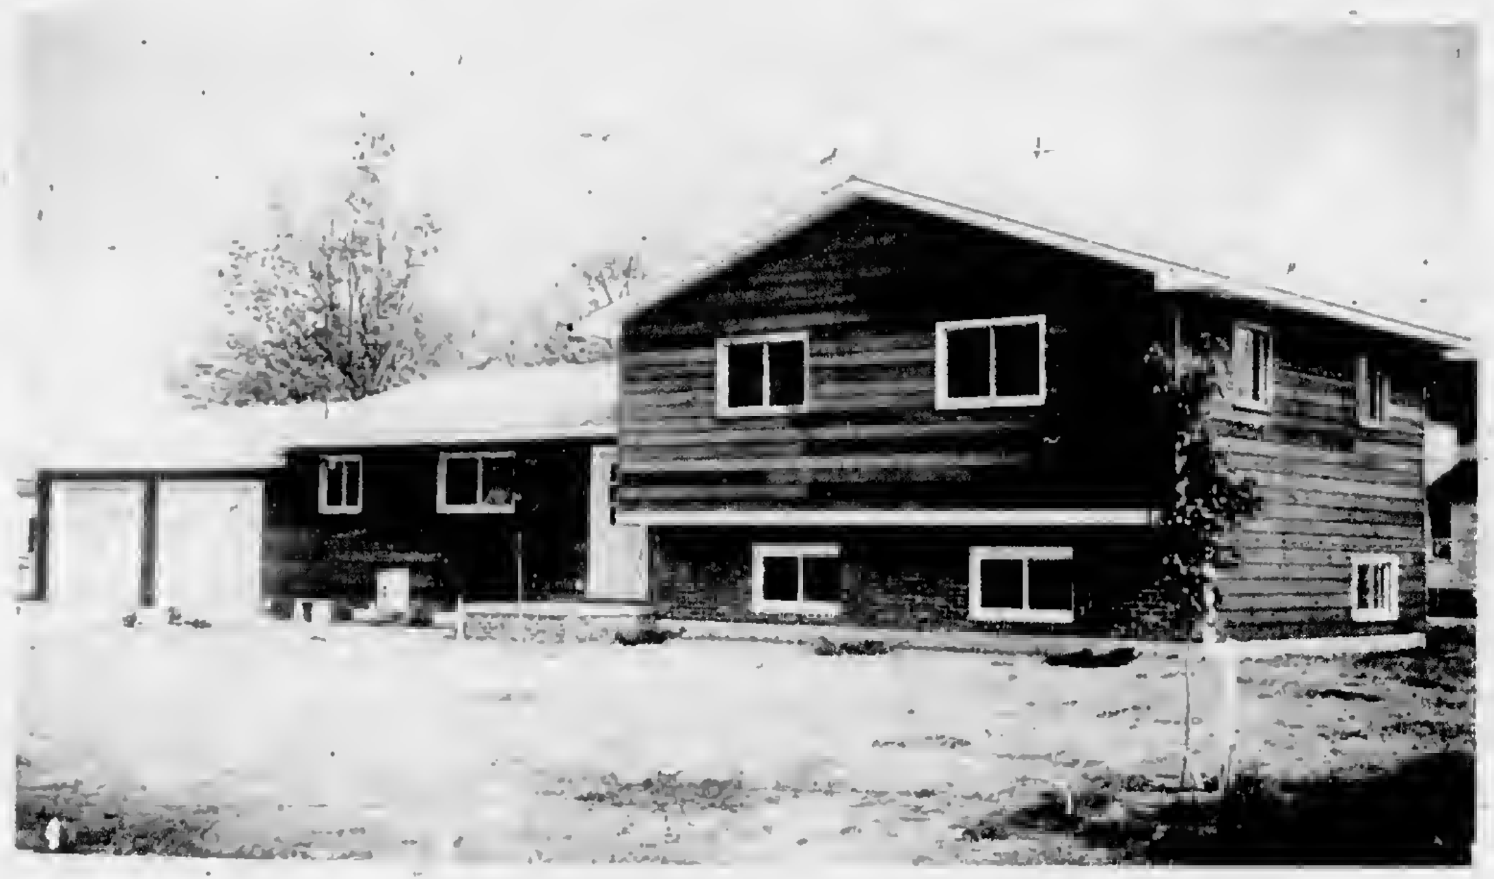
First Building Trades House Ready for Your Inspection



CHARLEVOIX High School's first Building Trades class has completed its first project — a three bedroom house on Hampton-rd. Open house will be held at the house from 2 until 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, June 11 and 12. Charlevoixans are cordially invited ato see the end result of student craftmanship.

Come In And Look Around

Robert Cook, vocational education director, says open house has been scheduled for Friday and Saturday, June 11 and 12 from 2 p.m. until 8 p.m.

The house is located on Hampton-rd., just east of May-st.

The house was built by CHS juniors and seniors during the school year under the direction of instructor John Mills.

The tri-level home has three bedrooms, one and one-half baths, a two-car attached garage, finished recreation room, another room that can be used as a work room or a fourth bedroom, a first-floor utility room, kitchen and living room.

Fully insulated, the building has sliding windows with insulated glass, copper plumbing, gas forced-air heat and gas hot water, Kohler plumbing fixtures, vinyl floors in the kitchen, lavatory, bathroom and utility room.

The exterior is of brick and redwood siding, with a six-foot wide patio door.

Mills says all utility lines have been buried and a hookup already has been made with Lake Charlevoix Cable TV.

Building Trades was incorporated into Charlevoix's vocational education program last fall in order to give students a greater variety of job entry skills upon graduation from high school.

Although the house hasn't been priced, Mills says it will sell for between $25,000 and $30,000. The money will be used to finance next years Building Trades project—another house across the road.

Bob Cook Hails Work Of Student Craftsmen

Project Required Talents of Many

By ROBERT COOK
Vocational Director
Charlevoix High School

In the past six years Charlevoix has made a significant effort to provide Vocational Education for the student body.

As Vocational Education has become a more important part of education, student needs for training have increased in many areas.

Before 1965 the only vocational training offered was some consumer education in advanced Home Economics. Cooperative Education was started in 1965 with only six students. In 1966 Vocational Office Education was added to the curriculum, and in 1967 vocational students were sent to Petoskey for the first time.

In Petoskey students were enrolled in Auto Mechanics, Electronics, Machine Trades, and Building Trades. During 1968 and 1969 no new areas of training were added. However, the number of students taking part increased in all areas of training. This year the vocational curriculum was again expanded by adding courses in Building Trades, Vocational Drafting, and more consumer and office courses.

Also, Ellsworth students were invited to participate for the first time. Eight Ellsworth students are enrolled in Vocational Drafting, Office Practices and Building Trades.

The total enrollment in vocational courses has grown from twenty-five in 1965 to 153 this year. This is a remarkable growth but more is needed. Student interests indicate we need local courses in Commercial Foods and Auto Mechanics next year. We have more students for these two areas of training than the Petoskey Vocational Program will be able to take.

The Charlevoix School District can well be commended for their support of Vocational Education over the past six years and with their continued support our vocational programs will be able to grow and meet the needs of Charlevoix students.

The home constructed by the Building Trades class, as its first project, is an excellent example of what good vocational programs can do. This is a quality home exhibiting excellence in both planning and workmanship. The instructor, Mr. John Mills, and the students are to be commended on this project. Also, this home has furnished practical units of work for other classes such as Vocational Drafting, Earth Science, Home Economics and Art.

We are delighted to say that we were able to help further such a tremendous opportunity for the students involved.

Students Selected Interior Decorations

Students in the Interior Decorating Class at Charlevoix High School contributed in many ways to the finishing of the Building Trades house on Hampton-rd., according to instructor Mrs. Clarence Odmark.

Their first task was the choice of tile, paint and flooring for the bathroom. They chose colors to give a warm feeling to a room facing north.

Choosing paneling was a new experience for many of the students, but their choice of wood for the family room, living room and utility room proved to be most attractive.

Lighting fixtures were next. The girls spent many hours poring over catalogues before the final decisions were made.

Their final problem was flooring for the kitchen, foyer and utility room and half-bath, according to Mrs. Odmark. They decided to tile these floors all alike in order to create a feeling of space and unity.

Juniors, Seniors Took Part

The Building Trades house on Hampton-rd. is the handiwork of 19 juniors and seniors from Charlevoix and Ellsworth.

They are the students of John Mills, a former shop teacher who returned to education after a stint with Vacationland Cabins at Bellaire.

The boys worked on the house in two classes, mornings and afternoons, with each session running from two to two and one-half hours.

During the early stages, the boys spent considerable time in the classroom, learning construction theory and techniques.

However, when construction started, most of the instruction came on-the-job.

Mills says that not all of the boys have worked on all phases of the project.

"It would be impossible for all of the boys to work on plumbing at the same time, for example," Mills said. "So I picked out those who showed the most talent for plumbing and turned the work over to them."

However, all of the boys have had a hand in the less specialized areas, such as drywell, paneling and painting, laying cement block and brick, and shingling.

The building was enclosed by mid-November and the classes worked on interior finishing over the winter. The garage went up this spring and both classes worked on finishing touches up until the last week of school.

LANKY David Swanson can almost reach the ceiling of the Building Trades house kitchen without a scaffold. Here he applies final coat of paint to the kitchen ceiling.

INSTRUCTOR JOHN Mills supervises finish work on kitchen counter top, as student Chuck Bascom bevels edges with file. Translucent doors behind Mills let plenty of light into the garage.

Draftsmen Drew Plans

Many students at Charlevoix High School were involved in the construction of the Building Trades house on Hampton-rd.

Jim Jinsky, instructor of the Vocational Drafting Class and the Vocational Architectural Drafting Class, says his students drew floor plans for the home as part of their expanded drafting program.

"Then each student drew elevations to show the variety of exteriors which could be selected," Jinsky said.

The drafting students spent the final weeks of school developing a full set of prints for next year's home.

Art Students Painted Sign

The Art Department at Charlevoix High School had a hand in publicizing the work of Charlevoix's first Building Trades Class, according to art teacher Bill Murray.

The large sign on May-st. advertising the project was the work of Charlevoix art students.

They added a footnote pointing out that the "fine sign" was the work of the Art Department.

Earth Science Students Did Landscaping

Landscaping of the Building Trades home on Hampton-rd. was one of the spring projects of Charlevoix's Earth-Science Class, taught by Bruce Morgan.

The project involved raking and dragging topsoil, planting trees and shrubs and seeding the lawn.

Each step was preceded by careful planning and classroom discussion, Morgan reports.

The planting of the trees and shrubs was conducted in the presence of a trained nurseryman.

Ford

$1919* Pinto 2 door
$66 less than VW 113

$2175* Maverick 2 door
$176 less than Nova 2 door

The little carefree car. Pinto is sized small, like the economy import, but it's bigger on value. And price is only the beginning. Pinto calls for only half as many oil changes as VW. One-sixth the chassis lubes. So easy to service that you can do most routine maintenance yourself. And Pinto is bigger on performance. It has a 75-hp engine that has averaged over 25 mpg in simulated city/suburban driving. Sports-car type rack-and-pinion steering. Wider stance and lower silhouette.

The Simple Machine. Maverick's price makes it simpler to own than Nova. But that's not the only reason we call it the Simple Machine. Maverick's simple to drive and park because of its shorter wheelbase and smaller turning circle. Simple to service because it's been designed that way. Maverick offers a 4-door sedan for a low price of $2235* ($145 less than Nova 4 door). Or choose the sporty Grabber model. A choice of an economical V-8 and three thrifty Sixes.

*Ford's suggested retail price for Pinto and Maverick. However, the models shown are equipped with accent group (Pinto $60, Maverick $52) and white sidewall tires ($29). Destination charges, dealer preparation charges (if any), state and local taxes are extra.

Comparison based on manufacturers' suggested retail prices for closest comparable body styles of lowest priced models, comparably equipped.

TOM MORLING, 18, a student at Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Me., passed through Charlevoix last week enroute to Berkeley, Calif., on his bicycle. He already had pedaled 850 miles and was still going strong.

Pedals From Maine In Only 2 Weeks

His name is Tom Morling and he is 18 years old.

He wears a pair of cut-off suntans, a T-shirt and a pair of scruffy sneakers.

He has a shock of unruly brown hair, a brand new beard and legs as stocky as oak trees.

And he is traveling from Brunswick, Me., to Berkeley, Calif., this summer on a bicycle — which explains the cut-off suntans, the T-shirt, the scruffy sneakers, the unruly hair, the new beard and the stocky legs.

Morling passed through Charlevoix about noon Thursday enroute from an overnight stop in Petoskey to the home of a friend in Traverse City, where he expects to take a two-week break in his travels.

Morling had covered the 850 miles between Brunswick and Charlevoix in only 14 days, departing on his cross-country junket May 21.

Morling's home is in Syracuse, N.Y., although he attends Bowdoin College in Brunswick, majoring in drama. He has just completed his freshman year.

Although he has never taken a long distance bike trip before, Morling thought it would be a good way to see the country.

His bike is a Peugeot, made by the same people who make the French automobile. It has a 10-speed transmission and skinny tires as big around as a garden hose.

"This is the first town where anyone has stopped to talk to me," he commented.

He says he usually travels between 85 and 100 miles a day, camping out at night.

"I've been traveling through an awful lot of woods, and it's no problem finding a place to stay," he said.

However Wednesday night, after pedaling from Sault Ste. Marie to Petoskey, he decided to stay overnight in a motel.

"Besides, I fell yesterday and cut my finger. I wanted to get it washed and bandaged," he explained.

Morling has pedaled every inch of the way, except for the International Bridge at The Soo and "Big Mac" at the Straits. Since bicycles are not permitted on either bridge, officials saw to it that he and his bike got a lift across.

The early stages of Morling's route took him through mountainous country in the East and he said there were many times he had to get off and push his bike uphill because he couldn't gear down low enough.

He also traveled through a big section of French Canada, but didn't encounter any language problem.

"I just didn't do much talking," he explained simply.

Morling says it is easier to bicycle in Europe, where distances are not so great between towns and where motorists more or less expect to share the road with bicyclists.

"Our roads are built for high speed traffic and no one expects to see a bicycle," he said.

He said some drivers panic when they see a bicycle ahead of them on the road and either sound their horn or screech their brakes, alarming the bicyclist and causing him to weave.

"I wish they would just pass me calmly without any fuss. I always know they are there, I can hear them, but I don't start worrying until they panic," he said.

Morling said the worst section of road he encountered was the 17-mile stretch of U.S. 31 between Petoskey and Charlevoix.

"You don't feel the bumps in an automobile because of the shock absorbers, but you sure do on a bicycle," he said.

Morling says he has to be particularly careful because of the fragile wheels and thin tires on his racing bike. Just one chuckhole is all it takes to blow a tire or bend a wheel.

BIBLE RAP held every Thursday evening at Breakthrough provides persons of varying ages a chance to compare their own individual ideologies in a casual setting with no set format or program. Although local ministers are often invited to attend, one of the participants may be asked to lead the discussion.

IT'S NOT ALL PLAY at Breakthrough. Here workers help with the necessary preparations for the planned walk for Christ that is scheduled for the end of the month.

Give Breakthrough a Chance

Coffeehouse Needs Financial Support

By BETH BALDWIN

People believe what they want to believe. This sad but true characteristic of the human being has unfortunately been proven again here in Charlevoix.

Too many residents of our fair but sometimes hypocritical town have chosen to believe that Breakthrough, our local Christian coffee house, is a haven for drug users and pushers, rather than what it proports to be, a place for the young people to gather and meet their friends, play pool or ping pong, have a coke, or just rap.

The backers of Breakthrough met with strong opposition when they asked for support from parents. Their excuses are unbelievable, ranging from "my child came home with cigarettes" to "too many undesirable people frequent 'that' place."

To the parents who invented such ridiculous reasons, remember that your child can get cigarettes almost any place, if he wants them. As for the type of people who go to Breakthrough, everyone is invited as long as they conform to the bylaws of the Breakthrough Organization. Breakthrough I might add, is a legal, nonprofit organization with its constitution filed with the state of Michigan.

The bylaws explicitly state that drugs, profanity and alcohol will not be tolerated or police action will be resorted too. Also all activities are subject to the local curfew and smoking is forbidden for all ages.

Residents, especially parents, of Charlevoix must be reminded that Breakthrough performs a service to the community by giving young people a place where they can be with their friends. Regardless of the rumors flying around, Breakthrough is a safe, legitimate and completely normal "hangout"--with supervision.

Breakthrough needs help. It cannot remain in existence without public support. As many are aware, the organizations jumped from $31.25 a week to $37.50 during the summer. In addition, the group must pay all utilities which can run as high as $100 in the winter months.

This is quite a strain on the Breakthrough budget which consists of very few donations and the proceeds from the concessions and games.

There is some pressure for Breakthrough to vacate its present location on Park-ave., and the group may be forced to comply if the money situation doesn't improve.

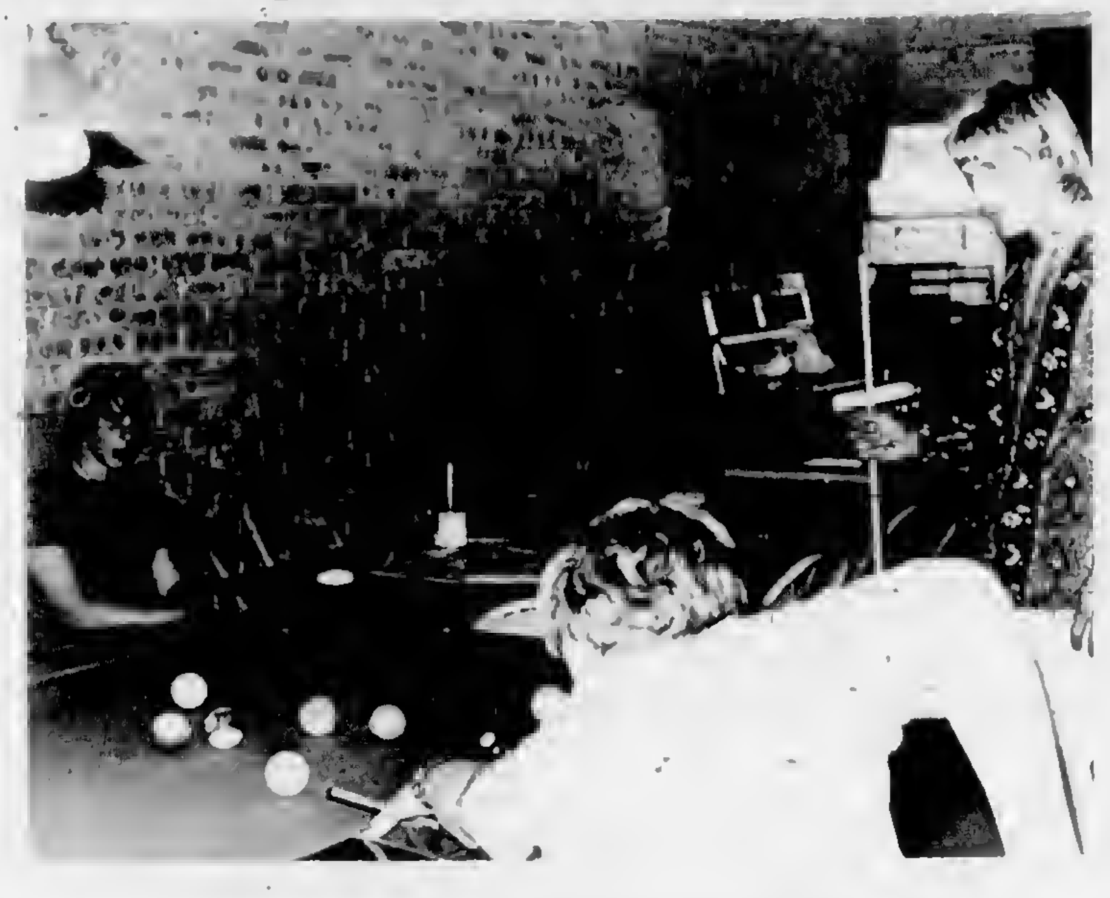
Isn't it worth contributing a few dollars for what Breakthrough offers the young of Charlevoix in return?

It is interesting to note that other such coffee houses have sprung up in a number of northern Michigan communities. Mancelona, Boyne City, Gaylord, Traverse City and Grayling have similar places.

Give Breakthrough a chance. Isn't it a pleasant change for kids to channel their energy into something constructive with benefit for everyone instead of just complaining that there isn't anyplace to go?

For those that still don't believe, stop in and see for yourself. A number of adults do drop in without disturbing the atmosphere. People must realize that an open invitation to those of the so-called "older generation" would definitely not be extended if something of an illegal nature was occuring on the premises.

As a matter of fact, I think that it would be great if individuals holding elected offices on the city council or school board, or even the police force would stop in just to rap. A better understanding of both generation's views could develop.



PLAYING POOL is a favorite pastime at Breakthrough, however it is only one of the recreational facilities available. Visitors may also play ping pong, listen to the juke box, watch television, play cards or amuse themselves with one of the games that have been donated.

Walk for Christ Slated

A "Walk for Christ", in which three large crosses will be carried, is slated for Sunday, June 27, according to Ray Bruce, president of Breakthrough, Inc.

Walkers will leave from the vicinity of the airport at 1 p.m. and proceed down State-st. to Clinton, ending in East Park.

The rest of the program includes Jesus bands, gospel singers, testimonials and talks by former drug users. Highlighting the day's activities are speakers from Detroit Teen Challenge.

All known Christian Coffee Houses in Michigan have been asked to send representatives. All persons, regardless of age or religion are invited to participate in the walk.

Breakthrough, an undenominational coffee shop, was begun late in August of 1970. Located on the corner of Bridge-st. and Park-ave., it is open most evenings until 10 p.m. with later hours on weekends.

A Bible Rap, often with a local minister in attendance, is held every Thursday night.

School Millage: The Decision Is Yours

Voters in the Charlevoix School District will go to the polls Monday to elect two new members to the Board of Education and decide on three separate millage proposals totaling ten and three-quarters mills.

As usual, the annual school election has ripped Charlevoix right up the middle.

And, again as usual, the main issue is not the candidates but the millage.

Citizens who feel that Charlevoix schools are doing a fine job are behind the millage 100 percent.

But there is also a sizeable and vocal bloc of voters who are against any extra voted millage for schools. They feel the teachers are overpaid, the schools are too posh and too many of the school programs frivolous.

There is also another group of voters who think the schools are doing a wonderful job--but they feel they have been taxed to the limit of their ability to pay. And that's that.

Let's take a look at the three millage proposals.

The first is for six and one-half mills for three years, which will merely replace millage which is expiring this year. This millage is absolutely necessary if Charlevoix is to maintain any kind of school program at all.

This increase does not represent any increase whatsoever over the school taxes you have been paying.

However, it is no secret that costs are going up. There is scarcely a commodity on the market that doesn't cost a few pennies more this year than it did last, and education is no exception.

So the School Board has added a second proposal--this one for two and one-quarter mills for one year--which will enable the district to meet the higher costs of doing business. It will also, hopefully, enable Charlevoix who add on to its embryo Vocational Education program which has just started to make significant strides, particularly in the Building Trades.

If the two and one-quarter mills passes, Charlevoix will probably add an auto mechanics program next year--training much in demand by both students and employers.

The third and last millage proposal is for two mills for five years to establish a building and site sinking fund for future growth. Voters will be presented two ballots, one establishing the fund and another levying the millage.

Although such a fund would enable our educators to begin making orderly plans for future development, it is not an absolute necessity. It would be nice to have such a fund and it probably would save us a bundle in interest the next time we go into a school building program, but it's passage or defeat will have no bearing on next year's school program in Charlevoix.

How much will the millage proposals cost you as a taxpayer? Probably not as much as you think.

If your home carries an assessed valuation of, say, $7,000, the first proposal for six and one-half mills will cost you $45.50. Remember, this replaces expiring millage and you paid the same amount last year.

The second proposal for two and one-quarter mills, -- the one that will help Charlevoix keep up with the higher expenses--will cost you an extra $15.75 cents based on your assessed valuation of $7,000.

The third proposal--the one for a building and site sinking fund--will cost you an additional $14 a year.

It is presumptuous for a newspaper or any news media to attempt to sway millage votes one way or the other. You know what our schools have been doing and you know how much you can afford to pay. The decision is yours.

However, the Courier would like to make a few observations on our new school leadership.

Superintendent Robert Miller has been on the job in Charlevoix only nine months, but he has managed to give the position a new zip and verve that one doesn't normally associate with academic titles.

A big man physically, Bob Miller pulls no punches. He has been honest and forthright in his dealings with the School Board and his candor is well appreciated.

As a lifelong educator, he has some pretty sound ideas about how a school should be run--and how it shouldn't be run--and he makes no bones about them. Most of his ideas certainly must be labeled as progressive; but he is a staunch conservative in that he believes schools exist for one purpose--to educate.

With the assistance of his business manager, Harold Kaufman, and Principals Vane Smith, Max Novak and Glenn Snider, Miller has been running a taut ship for the past nine months. The results are already apparent in improved administration - faculty relations and a new spirit on the part of the student body.

If the school millage passes, the Courier, for one, will look upon it as a vote of confidence in the job Bob Miller has done in his first year as superintendent.

First Class Does First-Class Job

Charlevoix's first Building Trades class has done a first-class job on its first project---a complete three-bedroom home on Hampton-rd.

The building has been completed in only one school year---which in itself is an accomplishment in view of the prolonged building projects carried on in other schools.

And the workmanship--from the laying of bricks and blocks to the fine cabinet work--is nothing short of professional.

The Courier offers its congratulations to the 19 juniors and seniors who worked on the home, to their instructor, John Mills, and to Vocational Education Director Robert Cook who was instrumental in launching the Building Trades program.

Certainly the young people who helped build the house learned practical skills which will stand them in good stead the rest of their lives, whether or not any of them actually go into any of the building trades.

Make it a point to attend the open house Friday or Saturday from 2 p.m. until 8 p.m. to see what your sons are capable of doing--when we give them half a chance.

Viewpoint

Mom Sees Good in Breakthrough

To the People Of The Community Of Charlevoix:

As a parent of one teenager and three younger children I would like to give my view points and perhaps opinion on an organized effort in our community called Breakthrough.

I understand that in the past a few things happened that have turned some against Breakthrough. But to condemn the establishment because of some people's mistake is that really reason to be down and out on everything involved?

It seems to me that when a person gets mixed up and does sin that is when we need a loving, forgiving spirit. Instead of a wagging tongue, especially before we have both sides of the story.

How many people really know what Breakthrough really consists of? Sure we set back and let others determine whether or not Breakthrough is good for our young people, community, etc., but what I mean is how many of us really and truly know for ourselves and have taken the time to check into Breakthrough and find out for ourselves what the aim and program consists of?

I meet people every day that have drawn conclusions as to their idea of Breakthrough only to find out that they attend long enough to really understand.

You don't come to the true conclusion that way. You don't take a person's word that a certain food is good to eat until you have tasted it. So it should be with Breakthrough.

The Scripture says "Taste and see that the Lord is Good." I'm not talking about pot, dope, or any other ungodly thing! These kids that work at Breakthrough have been delivered from such by the Power Of God.

Not all of the kids that attend have experienced salvation, true, but at least they are there to learn and find the truth and to study the Scripture. Again I remind you it's the "Truth that sets you free."

You can't preach at these young people! We can only point them to Christ. And pray for them. The Lord must give the increase, This is what is being done at Breakthrough. We can only be held responsible for what goes on inside the doors of Breakthrough. If a young person tells his parents one thing and does another, can Breakthrough be responsible for that? Let's not be so quick to draw conclusions against Breakthrough. I guess I to have been too quick in drawing my conclusions in the past, but "thank The Lord" things have proven me wrong. Given a chance these kids can prove themselves. By this I don't mean every Tom, Dick, And Harry, that walks the street. I mean the kids that are really involved in every activity of Breakthrough.

Bible Rap is a good thing for these kids. They are searching for the truth and slowly but surely I've seen the results in their lives. I wish you could see their honest prayers.

They have music (teenage-style of course) but didn't we have our style in our day, too? They have games such as pool, ping pong, etc. Gospel films are shown. On every Thursday evening they have a discussion on some topic from the Bible. And every opportunity is used to talk with the kids about Jesus.

A summer program scheduled for June 27 is now being planned. A speaker has been engaged from Teen Challenge in Detroit. So you see we need your help and your prayers as we endeavor to reach these kids before its too late.

Come and visit Breakthrough. The kids would love to have you and would welcome any help that could be given financially or otherwise.

Those of us that still believe in our youth: Let's get behind them and prove that our community does care!

Sincerely Yours for Youth,
Angel Bearss

Clockwise

Chime Time

By BOB CLOCK

There are so many nagging little mysteries in life I hate to bother you with another one, but I have a dilly and it's located right on my front porch.

It's the doorbell.

For nine months out of the year, roughly from mid-September until mid-June, our doorbell won't work. Friends, Romans, peddlars all push it in vain but the[illegible] a nary a tinkle.

The only time we know there is someone on the porch is when the dog barks uproariously from her sentry post on our staircase. And nine times out of ten I rush to the door only to find a stray cat wetting in the flower box or an errant squirrel doing high-jinks in the big maple tree out in front.

Sometimes our genuine visitors grow weary of pushing the bell button and rap on the door, which sends the dog into raptures of protest and arouses the whole neighborhood to the fact that the Clocks are having company.

However, from mid-June until snappy weather arrives in the fall, the Clocks' doorbell works like a charm. Just give it a little jab, and the chimes in the kitchen start ringing like the carillon at Westminster Abbey.

This year the doorbell went on active duty June 5, about 1:40 p.m. I arrived home from the office to find that Judy had latched the screen door to keep two-year-old Allison from running away from home to seek her fortune, as she is wont to do.

Without thinking, I poked the bell button and rattled the door. Seconds later the door flew open in my face.

"Guess what?" Judy shouted.

"Allison wants to enlist in the Brownies?" I suggested hopefully.

"The doorbell works!" Judy announced, ignoring my suggestion. She was obviously delighted that our annual miracle hadn't failed us in 1971.

So I punched the button again and I could hear the chimes in the kitchen ring out loud and clear. I tried it several more times with the same results. The dog began barking furiously, aware that her sentry duties were being usurped once again by a mechanical gadget.

Kutie and Jennifer, aroused by all the clamor, emerged from the playroom to see what all the excitement was about. When they found the bell was working, they had to try it several times themselves, sending the dog into new fits of agony.

Then Allison wanted to try it. She couldn't reach it herself, so I had to lift her up and show her how to push the button to set off the chimes in the kitchen. She was delighted by her new toy.

This little scene, needless to say, is enacted every spring on our front porch when the doorbell automatically goes back into service.

The big question, of course, is why the bell works during warm weather only? The same thing has happened every summer for the past six years.

I suppose I really should get busy, follow the wires and find out what happens to our doorbell every spring and fall. I strongly suspect that the phenomena has something to do with the humidity in the house. When the timbers swell in the spring, all the connections tighten up and the bell works like it ought to. In the fall, when the furnace comes on, the timbers dry out and the bell system goes kaput.

But I don't know for sure, and I probably will never find out.

Some Charlevoixans eagerly await the arrival of the first robin or the first purple martin as a sure sign that summer is on the way. Others keep a weather eye out for crocuses and daffodils as indications that warmer weather is coming.

But I think the Clocks are the only people in town who use their doorbell as a harbinger of spring.

A Confrontation

By JIM FITZGERALD

There were over 53,000 people at the ball park that Sunday, which meant waiting in a long line to buy a beer. I came away from the counter wondering if a race riot could be caused by a barmaid who had only Stroh's, no Budweiser.

It was the guy in front of me who wanted a Bud. He was a fat black man who smiled at my redheaded son and made friendly conversation as the line edged slowly forward. The trouble began when Fatty finally reached the barmaid and requested a Budweiser.

"Go to the next stand," she said curtly, "all we have is Stroh's." She was white.

Many of the concession stands at Tiger Stadium sell only Stroh's on draft. It is no coincidence that Stroh's sponsors the baseball broadcasts. And it is probably no coincidence that there is no large sign at these stands warning thirsty patrons that they shouldn't waste time standing in line if they want something besides Stroh's. An uninformed customer is good for Stroh's business. By the time he reaches the counter he has already missed 2 home runs and his thirst has grown fatter while his patience has thinned. He'll take whatever the barmaid is handing out, as long as it's cold and quick.

That's how black Fatty felt about the situation. He told the barmaid he'd buy whatever she was selling, rather than buck another long line. But he couldn't resist commenting on her impolite dismissal. "That's no way to talk to a man," he told her. "don't tell me to go somewhere else. Ask me if I want a Stroh's."

The barmaid wasn't going to take any of his lip. She lipped right back. With great nastiness; she informed Fatty that he couldn't tell her what to say, and what she had said was perfectly OK, she had no Budweiser, and so on...

Now Fatty was angry. He out-nasticd her. He accused her of talking down to him, because he was black. He said "you people better get off your high horse or we are going to knock you off." He looked ready to climb over the bar and start knocking right then.

So all of a sudden, there it was: a racial confrontation in all its ugliness. Dozens of people, black and white, were crowded around the 2 antagonists. Thousands of people, black and white, were just a few feet away. The sun was hot and the booze was flowing. I wished my son were someplace else--and I were there with him.

But there was no riot. Not this time. The barmaid's boss whispered in her ear and she quickly shut up. Someone told Fatty that overworked barmaids, with 53,000 customers, are often rude to everyone, regardless of race, creed or religion, and he shouldn't take it personally. He took his Stroh's and left. Whew!

It was true about the barmaid. I observed her twice more throughout the doubleheader. She was nasty to 2 youngsters--both white--who had innocently sweated out a long line only to reach the dragon at the end and learn that she wouldn't sell them pop: "Y'er in the wrong line, kid." (But there's no sign warning the kids.)

I told my son there was something important to be learned from what we'd seen. It is the importance of politeness. Everyone should smile more. They should always say "please," and "thank you." They should be kind to each other. Why not? It doesn't hurt. Actually, it makes you feel good.

There's a lot that's lousy in this world. And God knows good manners are no cure-all. "Thank you" said a million times isn't going to take the sting and unfairness out of bigotry. But politeness is certainly the Onward and Upward way to go.

Thanks for listening to the sermon. Please come again.

Most Boats Comply

State inspection crews report that 93 percent of the boats checked in Michigan waters last weekend are in compliance with Michigan's new Watercraft Pollution Control Law. The law states that sewage from marine toilets may no longer be discharged into state waters, treated or untreated. The act also requires marinas and docks with space for 15 or more watercraft to provide pump-out facilities.

Michigan Water Resources Commission staff members, Department of Natural Resources Conservation Officers and county sheriff marine deputies checked 440 vessels and 27 marinas on May 15 and 16, and issued approval decals to all but 31 boat owners. Violations are subject to fines of up to $500.

The act specifies that all watercraft with marine toilets must have either a holding tank, a self-contained recirculating toilet or an incinerator for pollution control purposes.

Inspections included four marinas and 75 craft downriver from Detroit, 13 marinas an 190 boats on Lake St. Clair, three marinas and 75 vessels in the Holland area and seven marinas and 100 boats in the Bay City vicinity.

"We are most encouraged with the high rate of compliance indicated during this first inspection," said William Turney, Water Resources Commission Assistant Chief Engineer.

Checkbook Art Dates Back More Than a Century

With Americans cashing some 22 billion checks a year, the demand for more variety keeps growing.

Now they are printed with peace symbols or military insignia, depending on the customer's viewpoint. Beach scenes, op art, and floral patterns compete with sunsets, views of historic buildings, and famous landmarks on the face of midtihued checks.

SOME GO TOO FAR

"The banks out West are sending us some riotous stuff these days," a New York teller observed. "Some are real mind-blowers."

Overly creative designs sometimes obscure signatures, as forgers were quick to note. The American Bankers Association recently reminded members that checks "are essentially operational documents."

Checkbook art is nothing new, and checks have been issued in unusual shapes and sizes through history, the National Geographic Society says.

The revival of decorated checks recalls bank checks of a century ago, engraved with detailed, fine-line drawings of gods and goddesses, steam locomotives, sailing ships, official seals, Latin mottoes, flowers, and crops.

'BREAD' CHECKS

Just after World War II, a number of firms started using checks made up to resemble their products. A bakery issued checks cut and printed to look like wrapped loaves of bread.

Another company distributed checks shaped like fish, and still another used circular checks designed to look like its phonograph records.

The odd sized checks were discontinued a few years later when banks switched to automated equipment that could not process them.

HIDES AND SHIRTS

Since no law stipulates the form a check must take, some occasionally continue to be written or painted on unusual surfaces.

In 1960 an Arizona rancher wrote a $500 check on a 6-by-3-foot cowhide. Ordered by a judge to pay $1,500 in a divorce action, a California man took the shirt off his back, scribbled his check on it--and it was promptly endorsed and cashed.

A sailor in San Diego sent home a check burned with a blow-torch on boiler plate. A month later his bank returned it, canceled with a blowtorch.

WELDED CHECKS

Another bank employed a guard's submachine gun to perforate the cancellation in a check written on steel by an arc welder.

Arizona police received a $1 check carefully etched on a pear cactus a few years ago from a Canadian tourist who wrote that he had "been stung" to get a parking ticket from them.

Checks have been cut into a block of marble, written on roof shingles, a ski, a car fender, in lipstick on a brassiere, on bottle labels, even whitewashed on the side of a cow. All were honored.

They've also been written on bananas, watermelon, an egg, and a dead fish--but the customers may have had second thoughts when their canceled checks came back a few weeks later.

Council

Supervisor Oscar Stroud to buy city water to supply the township's new water system The council said it couldn't promise to sell water unless it knows how much will be needed. Alderman Robert Gill said the city is permitted to sell only 25 percent of its total gallonage outside of the city. He said the figure is presently between 16 and 17 percent. As an alternative, Stroud said the township is making plans to sink wells in the area of Martin-rd. and Waller-rd.

–Told Stationstores, Inc., of Minneapolis, that it cannot recommend the construction of a gas station on the site of the former Lincoln School at Petoskey-rd. and Burns because the area is largely residential.

–Heard a written appeal by Mrs. Mary M. Geiken to clean up approaches to the city on the north and south. She also complained of abandoned cars in town.

–Took note of a recommendation by Mayor Essenburg that parking be allowed on both sides of Michigan-ave. during July and August. City Superintendent Thomas Hanna said such a move would not be permitted by the State Highway Department, which has jurisdiction over the street.

–Endorsed extension of the present Port Huron-Mackinac Island race to Charlevoix.

–Heard a report by Hanna that the city's hydro-electric plant at Bellaire needs considerable work. He said the dam is in bad repair and that sections of the lawn are caving in.

ROBERT WASOSKI

Robert Wasoski was born July 26, 1929, at South Bend, Ind., and attended schools in South Bend and Petoskey, graduating from the former Vocational Trade School in Petoskey in 1945.

In 1946 he joined the Air Force and served 14 years with the Military Air Transportation Service until a disabling auto accident in California in 1960 forced him to retire. He carried the rank of master sergeant.

In 1968, the family returned to northern Michigan and Wasoski became veterans affairs counselor for Charlevoix County, a position he now holds.

Wasoski and his wife, Lois, have five children: Lisa, 16; Denise, 13; Rita, 12; Tammy, 11; and Robert jr., 5.

Wasoski says he has "no ax to grind" in running for the School Board, but there are some minor changes he would like to see made. One is the seating arrangement of the School Board, which results in some members of the audience facing the backs of school board members.

"I think sometimes visitors feel alienated," he says.

He also thinks all members of the audience should be given an opportunity to address the board, if they wish to.

Wasoski says he believes it would be a good idea if the board received monthly reports, at alternate meetings, from a representative of the Student Council and a member of the faculty.

"I think this would help the relationship of the board with the students and the faculty," he says.

He points out that he is running for the School Board chiefly because of his long-standing interest in young people.

"I have always been involved with youth in one way or another and I think I have the ability to communicate with them," he says.

Scheid Realty Opens Branch in Petoskey

Scheid Northern Realty, Inc., has expanded its services to include a branch sales office in Petoskey, according to an announcement made by Irma L. Scheid, Realtor.

Jack Van Treese II of Petoskey has been named Area Sales Manager of the Charlevoix based firm which was started by Irma and Al Scheid in 1957. The main office is located at 1002 Bridge-st. Charlevoix.

Van Treese is a graduate of Western Michigan University with a degree in Business Administration and Accounting. He served two years in the armed forces, including one year in South Vietnam. In addition to being the owner-manager of H & R Block Tax Service of Petoskey, he has been engaged in real estate sales for the past two years. He is a member of the Petoskey Jaycees.

Mrs. Scheid says the firm is expanding its Property Management department to be headed by Don Kullik, who will also co-ordinate efforts of the Petoskey sales office at 411 Michigan-st., Petoskey, just across from St. Francis Xavier School.

Cadillac Motor Car Division

The leader...any way you look at it.

Cadillac for 1971. It could well be your best car buy, any way you look at it.

Performance. The proven 472-cubic-inch V-8 is amazingly responsive—on regular gasoline or no-lead and low-lead fuels.

Luxury. In the incredible quietness inside, in the beautiful standard appointments and in the many features you can order.

Choice. The first Cadillac luxury you enjoy. There are nine models from which to choose.

Value. A Cadillac traditionally returns a larger portion of original investment than any other car built in the land. Cadillac is the leader—any way you look at it. And now is the time to look at it—at your authorized Cadillac dealer's showroom.

Cadillac 1971

Cadillac is doing something about traffic safety, but some things only you can do. You might be surprised by the scope of our involvement in advancing the cause of safety.

Did you know, for instance, that Cadillac was the first to install safety glass in its cars? And introduced the triple braking system?

Today you can see evidence of the magnitude of our concern. The 1971 Cadillacs incorporate a host of recent safety developments. Including an energy absorbing steering column. Padded instrument panel. Seat belts for all passenger positions. Side-Guard steel beams in the doors.

And the work goes on. But all our efforts will not be enough, unless you do your share.

Here are five ways you can help. 1. Always use your seat and shoulder belts. 2. Make sure your car is in good running order. 3. Never drive when you're tired or under the influence of alcohol. 4. Support driver training and uniform traffic codes and enforcement. 5. Drive defensively. Please. Will you do your part?

THE NEWEST sport in town doesn't have a name, but it looks like lots of fun. Youngsters at the Charles Bergmann home on Lewis-st. have tied a nylon rope high in the branches of a tree next to the house. The other end of the rope is anchored to an auto bumper. The kids climb the tree, then slide down to the ground on a pulley.

7 From Charlevoix Attend Boys State

By Beth Geneit

More than 1,210 boys from communities throughout Michigan are gathering at East Lansing for the 34th Annual American Legion Wolverine Boys State Session. The students are based in the Brody Complex at Michigan State University for the eight day program, June 16 to June 23.

Seven boys from Charlevoix are attending the session, the largest group from here ever to attend Boys State.

The group includes Charles Borths, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Borths; William Carey, son of Mrs. Clare Carey and Mr. William Carey; Roger Crain, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Crain; Robert Cudd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Cudd; Ned Henley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Henley; Jeff Lachman, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Lachman, and Dan Tollas, son of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Tollas.

Clifton Sundberg, chairman of the selection committee announced that other organizations joined with the Legion in providing financial assistance, including the Lions Club, Kiwanis Club, Freedman Artcraft and Medusa Cement Co. Max Novak and son drove the boys to East Lansing in station wagons furnished by the School.

There is probably no other course in city, county and state government taught anywhere in Michigan which resembles the Boys' State Method.

City Gets Low Rate On Bonds

The City of Charlevoix sold $700,000 worth of general obligation bonds last week at an interest rate of 5.1336—far less than the city fathers had expected to pay in the present bond market.

Low bidder was Kenower MacArthur Co. which offered to buy the bids at an interest rate of 5.1336 percent.

The money will be used to finance a portion of the proposed waste water treatment plant on the Lake Michigan shore south of the city.

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the plant were held on the site Monday afternoon. Clark Construction of Lansing is general contractor.

The bond opening came only four days after Federal Judge Albert J. Engel of Grand Rapids ruled in favor of the city in litigation started by Shaw Henderson Construction Co. of Cheboygan which had attempted to block awarding of the contract to Clark.

Shaw-Henderson was second low bidder, but claimed that it should have received the contract because of alleged irregularities in the Clark bid.

Cited as defendants were the city of Charlevoix and the regional director of the federal Water Quality Office.

Judge Engel said his court lacked jurisdiction, insofar as the city is concerned.

At the bid opening at the city hall June 8, Paine Webber Jackson and Curtis was second low, with a bid of 5.3578 percent. Following were VanKampen Wauterlik & Brown at 5.3630 and First of Michigan at 5.5778.

Mayor Andrew Essenburg said the city was fortunate to have sold the bonds at such a low interest rate.

The savings, compared to the second low bid, will amount to $13,000.

Now You Can Attend Church In Your Car

Drive-in worship services will start at the Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix Sunday, June 20, at 9 a.m.

The unusual outdoor service has been set up for the convenience of campers and vacationers.

The pastor will speak from a platform in the parking lot and his sermon will be picked up on car radios within a 200-foot radius of a cable buried in the lot.

The systems will be tried out this Thursday evening at 8 p.m.

CHARLEVOIX'S new First Ward Alderman Sam Supernaw takes a turn at the shovel during groundbreaking ceremonies Monday afternoon for the city's Waste Water Treatment Plant as other city officials and representatives of Clark Construction Co. of Lansing look on. Mayor Andrew Essenburg was unable to attend because of the funeral of his father, Andrew Essenburg sr. of Ellsworth. Supernaw was appointed to the council to fill the unexpired term of Jack Mol, who has been appointed police chief.

School Board Will Sell 2 Busses to High Bidders

Numerous issues were discussed and some action taken on routine matters at the regular meeting of the Charlevoix board of education Monday night.

The board voted to offer for sale two nine-passenger 1971 Chevrolet station wagons, one with an air conditioner, to the highest bidder. Information regarding the vehicles may be obtained at the office of the school administrator.

It was also decided to dispose of School Bus No. 5, a 1955 60-passenger school bus which is no longer operable. The vehicle will be sold to the highest bidder. Information regarding this vehicle may also be obtained at the school office.

After adjourning to executive session to discuss appraisals of the Building Trades-constructed house on Hampton Rd., the board voted to offer it for sale to the highest bidder. However, $27,500 was set as the minimum bid acceptable. The Charlevoix County State Bank was named as the agent to accept bids for the dwelling. Again, information may be obtained at the business office of the school.

The resignation of Mrs. Elaine Belfy was read and accepted. In resigning she stated that she had majored in teaching the mentally handicapped on the secondary level and because she was assigned to the Primary Type A level she felt she owned it to herself and her family to resign. The secretary was directed to write her letter of regret at her decision.

The Earl W. Miller scholarship money was discussed at length. It was decided to draw up guidelines for the scholarship following the lines of vocational or technical education as compared to a four-year academic program because Mr. Miller had designated his interest in this field. President Jerrald Redeker named Supt. Robert L. Miller, High school principal Vane H. Smith, Robert Cook, Industrial Education instructor and Clement J. Wagner of the board to draw up the guidelines for study by the board. There is presently $1,491.45 in the fund.

The engaging of a consulting firm to do some long range planning for the school was tabled for the present.

Administrators were asked to obtain quotations for fencing in the athletic field.

The board heard the Glen Lake resolution which would hold legislators accountable for the lack of action regarding school finance. The board decided the resolution, as presented, had merit but felt it would be worded in a more diplomatic manner. It was decided to work on a similar resolution.

In other action, the board heard a report on monies paid for debt retirement. A payment of $45,965.30 was paid to the City National Bank of Detroit on the high school debt retirement issue; $88,970.20 to the National Bank of Detroit on the elementary school issue and $5,151.25 to the Northwestern State Bank of East Jordan on the Ironton school issue which has one year to go before retirement.

Yacht Club To Rendezvous At Northport

The Charlevoix Yacht Club is planning a rendezvous at Northport Saturday and Sunday, June 19 and 20, according to Fleet Captain Josh Barnes.

Sailing craft will leave the bridge at 10 a.m. Saturday and power craft at noon.

Power boaters are invited to participate in a practice "predicted log" event and are being supplied with two entry blanks, one to be left at the LaBlance Insurance Agency or with Josh Barnes before noon Friday, June 18. The boater keeps the second blank to recird course, distance, revolutions per minute, etc.

For information, contact Barnes at 547-6584.

Other Millage Proposals Fail

In Monday's school election which brought out the second largest vote in the history of the Charlevoix school district, voters approved a 6.5 millage renewal for three years while turning down two other millage issues and elected two new members to the board.

A total of 1224 voters went to the polls to give their approval to the renewal of a 6.5 millage levy for three years for operational purposes.

The unofficial tally shows the issue was approved by a vote of 695 to 499 with seven ballots spoiled.

In the second millage issue, voters vetoed the 2.25 millage issue for one year by a vote of 715 to 472 with 14 ballots spoiled.

A proposal to establish a two-mill sinking fund for five years and an 'authority to levy' issue were defeated by a vote of 869 to 322 with 10 ballots spoiled.

In the three-way race for the four year term being vacated by Mrs. Robert L. (Frances) Hooper, Charles Elzinga won with 515 votes over Don Brown who polled 348 and Edward Buday, Sr., who collected 312 votes. Twenty-six ballots were spoiled.

In a second race to succeed Jack E. Rader who is retiring after five years on the board, Larry E. Warner tallied 480 votes to capture the seat. William F. Wilson had 385 and Robert Wasoski 297 votes. Thirty-nine ballots were spoiled.

Both Elzinga Warner are natives of Charlevoix. Elzinga is a Farm Bureau Insurance agent and Warner is in Giantway's management trainee program at Petoskey.

Jerrald Redeker, president of the school board, and Superintendent Robert Miller were jubilant over the passing of the 6.5 mills, which insures at least a minimal school program next year.

Redeker said it is unlikely that the board will ask for any more millage for the coming year.

Charlevoix third graders tell it like it is about milk!

Stating that young kids have never really been asked how they feel about milk, third graders in Miss Jeanine Keeney's class, Charlevoix, Michigan, took matters into their own hands and sent us some of their ideas. They told us many things that a grown-up never would have thought of. In fact, told us some things we'll never forget.

Here are but a few:

"good to put in a water gun" • "the greatest thing alive" • "neato" • "good for you" • "just plain ok" • "your friend" • "good in chocolate orange milkshake" • "best for your teeth" • "real cool" • "I love milk" • "groovy" • "good to put out fires" • "fun to squirt out of a cow" • "good with ice cubes" • "full of energy" • "makes your hair curly" • "great" • "pep" • "not good for dogs" • "good for Snoopy" • "fantastic" • "good when you're mad" • "best thing in the world"

What do you think about milk?

Make two people happy with an unexpected call.

There's a little love out there . . . for you. Love you experience all too infrequently.
A birthday card. An occasional letter. The Christmas phone call. Why not break the pattern, with an unexpected call? You'll make two people happy . . . someone you love, and you.

Another nice thing. If you talk for one minute, you pay for one minute. Not three. And, as always, there's no quicker or more personal way to say "I love you"—or even "I like you an awful lot"—than by phone. So if you want to make two people happy . . . don't hesitate to call!

Ski & Shore Selling Antrim Dells Lots

"Ski and Shore Properties, Inc., northern Michigan realtors headquartered in Bellaire, has been named exclusive agent for building sites in Antrim Dells, new leisure home development on Grand Traverse Bay.

"We selected Ski and Shore because of their demonstrated ability to match available vacation home properties to the wishes and requirements of their thousands of satisfied clients," said Lloyd Kirby, president of Antrim Dells Land Development Company, Inc. "We are impressed with their record of bringing together in vacation home communities families who find much in common with their second-home neighbors."

"Ski and Shore welcomes the opportunity to offer some of the most breathtakingly beautiful and well-situated vacation home sites in the middlewest at Antrim Dells," said Richard E. Georgi, chairman of the board of Ski and Shore.

Antrim Dells consists of 1700 acres along the east shore of Grand Traverse Bay, overlooking Northport and Old Mission Point, Kirby said. Except for some half-acre fairway building sites bordering the golf course, parcels are estate-sized at 2-½, 5 and 10 acres, lying among unique terrain features called "drumlins." Drumlins, formed by glacial movements centuries ago, are a series of naturally terraced ridges sloping down to the Bay.

An 18-hole championship golf course and clubhouse are under construction, with the first nine holes scheduled to open for play this Fall. The development has a private sand beach with 500-foot frontage on Grand Traverse Bay. Public access to boating on Torch Lake is five minutes away, and six of Michigan's most popular ski resorts are within 25 miles.

Ski and Shore Properties is also exclusive agent for building sites at Schuss Mountain and Shanty Creek, resorts situated between Bellaire and Mancelona.

National Health Federation Organizing Local Chapter

By Bernice Wexstaff

The North Michigan Chapter of the National Health Federation (comprising an area from Cadillac to the Straits) held an organizational meeting at Top-Of-Michigan Rural Electric auditorium in Boyne City, Monday evening of June 7.

With 20 present, representing as many communities of the North Country, Rosalie (Mrs. Everett) Ottinger of Clipper View, Charlevoix, was chosen president to lead the new organization as she has been a member of the national group and was best informed as to their purposes.

Other officers elected were Ron Holben of Grand Rapids, (presently working with the state Health Department,) vice-president and Phylis, (Mrs. Willis) Miller of Charlevoix, secretary-treasurer.

Mrs. Ann Treadwell, whose home is in the state of Connecticut but spends summers in Leleneau, drove the hundred-odd miles to give encouragement and advice as a long-time member of the national association.

Another national member attending was Mr. Herman Breithaupt who summers in Walloon Lake where he is presently writing a book on good nutrition. Breithaupt is well qualified as a former student of Gaylord Hauser and a member of the American Academy of Chefs.

While the National Health Federation is only 17 years in existence it has already built up an enviable reputation as a watch-dog of the Nation's health through established lobbies at the Capitol in Washington, D.C. as well as numerous state capitols – including California, the state of its birth.

Aims and purposes of the NHF and the North Michigan Chapter is to assure unbiased and equal treatment for all licensed health practitioners that the public may have a choice of doctors and health practices. (The NHF is against such programs as Great Britain's public health program which virtually hamstrings the healing profession).

The NHF proposes by education, to create a demand for organic foods which should bring the prices of such foods within reason and competitive with processed foods. To date health foods sold in special markets are outside the reach of many in lower income brackets.

The NHF aims to pressure food processors to label all preservatives for the information of the public....To date the food industry leaders have bluntly told the Federal Food and Drug Administration that they reserve the right to add chemicals and other substances to foods without advising the government: They have nothing to say about the citizenry consuming what may be outright poisons, detrimental to good health-- Even though the substances may be in minute quantities such additives can build up in the human body much like mercury builds up in fish.

Hopefully the North Michigan Chapter of the National Health Federation will get the support of all health-minded individuals and groups in the area and the organization will be of great importance in curbing pollution whereever it is found –foods, waters, land and air.

Library Notes

FDR Focal Point Of WWII History

On our special shelf of distinguished and important titles, there is an unpressive list of books which offer absorbing reading during the spring months ahead.

"God Is an Englishman" is R.F. Delderfield's most ambitious and enthralling novel to date. Its hero is Adam Swann, scion of an army family, who has seen active service in the Crimea and India and who is determined to make his fortune and found his won dynasty in the ruthless world of Victorian commerce. The reader is led from the bloody battles of India to the slums of 19th century London, from the chaos of the great industrial cities in the age of economic revolution to the peaceful security of the English countryside. It is a large, rewarding book recommended for both men and women.

"Roosevelt, The Soldier of Freedom 1940-45" is the concluding volume of the first complete biography of FDR. James MacGregor Burns has worked on an enormous canvas. The great world at war is passed in review; but the focus is always on Roosevelt–his war leadership, the great vision he pursued and the fatal ambivalence that lay at the heart of his strategy for freedom. The narrative moves from the dark days of 1940 and the fight over aid to embattled Britain to the day in April 1945 when the President died. There is a fine section of photographs.

"The 900 Days, the Siege of Leningrad" is the much-talked-about book by Harrison E. Salisbury. It describes the tragedy of Leningrad which dwarfed even the Warsaw ghetto or Hiroshima. The siege was the longest a great city has undergone since Biblical times and was endured by more than three million people of whom about one-half died within a period of six months. Harrison Salisbury spent 25 years assembling the material for this epic story. The story of the 900 days is known only in part inside Russia and scarcely at all in the outside world. The author has told it for all time, in a narrative whose range and power are commensurate with the subject.

The year 1970 was the centenary of the death of the great Victorian novelist Charles Dickens. TV specials, newspaper and magazine articles and movie adaptations of his work have kindled renewed interest in the man himself and his writing.

To mark the centenary, "Dickens, 1970" is being published jointly in the U.S. and in England.

Tired of carry-outs?

Here's what you need—a Gas incinerator. It takes all the bother out of garbage and trash disposal. And it does it without smoke, odor, noise or polluting the air you breathe.

A Gas incinerator gobbles up all the combustible things you wouldn't dare put in a garbage disposal and can't burn outside. It makes short work of bones, boxes and boots—in fact anything that's combustible. And it does the job conveniently and completely.

So put an end to your carry-out service. Promise yourself you'll see your appliance dealer about having a Gas incinerator installed in your home. Or, visit your Michigan Consolidated Gas Company showroom for all the particulars. And remember, there's more than enough Gas for all your appliances.

Mini-Gardens Topic At Club Meeting

Members of the Garden Club met recently with Mrs. Carolyn Klooster. Mrs. Virginia Berg was co-hostess.

Several items of business were taken care of and the club is again asking everyone to plant petunias in their gardens, wayside beds, planters and boxes on Bridge-st. and other business places. The Petunia has been chosen by our club and the city as the city flower.

A most interesting lesson was given by Mrs. Marjory Dinwiddie on "Beautiful Miniature Gardens and Plants" with many examples of miniature arrangements made and explained by Mrs. Eleanor Freedman.

How is the increase in population affecting their gardening and landscaping? Most new homes are being erected on properties smaller than in the past and elbow room is becoming scarce but this need not mean cutbacks in landscaping.

Even in trailer courts, apartment houses, condominiums and pre-fab homes on tiny lots, the desire and the love in gardening still seems strong. Gardeners should balance the size of their garden against the time they will have to devote.

A mini-garden may consist merely of a flowering tree surrounded by ground covers set in the interesting place or a hedge of shrubs surrounded by flowering plants, often container-grown, so that they can be moved around to change the landscape and develope a new look. But mini-garden plants must be chosen carefully. Perhaps you will have just a small place near the entrance which would be a perfect spot for petunias, ageratums, geraniums, dwarf zinnias, impatients, all will give a long blooming season of color. If your spot is shaded, try begonias.

Mini-gardens take more thought than others and anything misplaced stands out like litter in a small room. So remembeer to choose your planting carefully.

Miniature arrangements are a fascinating hobby for children as well as adults.

The next meeting will be Tuesday afternoon June 8 with Mrs. Albert Edwards on Wickersham-rd. The lesson will be "The Romantic Rose," by Mrs. Mildred Paddock.

Circlin' the Bases

With Deano

The softball season got off to a bang with the ten teams in the popular slow pitch league involved in a Kick-off tournament. Great weather and exciting softball greeted the huge crowds that viewed the weekend contests.

Newcomer Topside moved along into the finals and await the winner of the Andy's-Medusa game. This game was played last night and the results were not available at press time. Topside defeated American Mold 9-1 behind Ralph Doan's three homers. Mold had gotten by the Argonne 5-1 earlier in the tournament. The Townhouse was the Topside's semi-final victim as they fell 11-1. Ten runs in the middle two innings sent the winners off and running. Terry Blissett had a long homer in the rally. Joe Battle homered in a losing cause.

Medusa moved into the semis with a convincing 8-5 win over Howard's of Boyne City. Larry Nunemaker had a homer for the winners. Andy's, meanwhile, disposed of Airport by a whopping 22-1 margin. Then had a tough struggle before batting Freedmans 7-5. Harv Cole proved to be the hitting hero in this one with a two run homer in the seventh inning.

In the loser's bracket Portside defeated the Argonne 6-2 with Norm Probert homering for the winners. Boyne's Howard's Oilers stayed alive in the consolation bracken with an easy 23-7 win over the Airport Bar.

The regular season is slated to start tonight in the slow pitch with The Argonne meeting the Airport at 7:15 and the Townhouse playing in the 8:30 contest.

Thre other leagues are slated to start next week with the fast pitch opener set for Tuesday evening.

Chickawago Lodge to Rise From the Ashes

Loss of RBS Site Would Cripple Area

The Air Force's Radar Bomb Scoring unit at Bay Shore may be forced to pull up stakes and move unless a compromise is reached by the Air Force and Consumers Power Co. over the amount of safety clearance required around the Big Rock Point Nuclear Power Plant.

Consumers has asked for a safety corridor of 12 and one-half miles on either side of the plant. The Air Force says that unless its planes are permitted to come closer to the RBS site at Bay Shore, the unit will have to move.

Unfortunately, the two facilities are located only about four miles apart on the Lake Michigan shore north of Charlevoix.

Consumers has long asked for more safety clearance around the plant, insofar as AF planes on practice bombing missions are concerned.

Needless to say, the company has increased the frequency and urgency of its requests ever since a B-52 crashed in Lake Michigan off Big Rock Point last January.

All of which poses a severe economic and sociological upheaval in the Charlevoix-Petoskey area, where most of the men at the RBS site make their homes.

Lt. Col. Fred Davison; commanding officer of the RBS site, says neither he nor any of his men wants to leave the Charlevoix area.

Since the unit moved to Bay Shore from Ironwood in 1963, many of the airmen at the base have put down deep roots — buying homes in the area and sending their children to area schools. They want to stay if it is at all possible.

Furthermore, the presence of the AF operation at Bay Shore has been an economic boost to the entire area.

Col. Davison says the unit has a complement of about 90 men, although all are not on duty at the site at one time, with temporary duty assignments in Vietnam and elsewhere in the world.

Of the 90, some 55 are married men who have moved their families into the area.

The payroll of the men at the site approaches $500,000 a year, most of which is spent locally to meet everyday living expenses.

Needless to say, if the RBS unit moves it will constitute a severe economic shock to both Charlevoix and Petoskey, where most of the men and their families live.

The Courier certainly can sympathize with Consumers Power Co. which wants to make its operation at Big Rock Point as safe as humanly possible. But it seems that a smaller corridor might provide an adequate margin of safety and still permit the Air Force to use its facilities at Bay Shore to score the performance of incoming bombers.

Lt. Col. Davison says the request for a 12 and one-half mile clearance on either side of the plant is "excessive." He believes a smaller corridor would provide the necessary margin of safety and still permit the Air Force to effectively carry out its mission at Bay Shore.

The final decision, of course, is up to the experts who know the capability of instrumentation at the Bay Shore site and actuaries at Consumers Power Co. who can plot the possibility of another air disaster in the vicinity of Big Rock Point.

We certainly hope that both parties can decide upon a corridor of sufficient width to insure the safety of the plant and at the same time permit the RBS unit to remain at Bay Shore.

Green Rice 'Specialty'

Mr. Bob Clock
Charlevoix Courier
Charlevoix, Michigan

Dear Bob:

I just read your story about "green rice" and I thought you would like to know that the "specialty of the house" of Stephenson's Apple Farm Restaurant is Green Rice. This is served with every meal in a small dish and is very tasty. Stephenson's is located between Kansas City and Independence, Mo., and is quite famous in this area.

I should point out though, the rice is not made green by adding food coloring! Rather, the recipe was lots of chopped parcley and green peppers. I enclose a application for Stephenson's cookbook in case you want to try this "green rice" sometime.

Sincerely,
LTC N. Kim Shanahan

Friske Reports

By REP. RICHARD FRISKE

The Department of Commerce has reported that nearly two million fishermen spent between 20 to 30 million dollars in Michigan last year as a result of "Coho fever."

And the prospect is even better for this year. Since the first planting five years ago, some 25 million coho and chinook salmon have been planted and the figure is going up.

The department says that one of the most modern hatcheries in the world, costing $7.5 million, is nearing completion. They estimate that it will be capable of producing over 350,000 pounds of gamefish a year: 3.3 million coho, 3.8 million chinook and 750,000 steelhead trout.

A good example of the effect this sport fishing is having on our Michigan economy is a report from Manistee, Michigan, which calls itself "Coho Capital of the Midwest."

Businessmen and women report business up 50 percent. Taxable retail sales in Manistee County have increased nearly 25 percent since 1967. The Manistee Chamber of Commerce says it has spent nearly a million dollars building for the fishing boom. According to the executive vice-president of the chamber, "the only problem now is developing the facilities to handle the crowds."

In addition, it is reported that the coho and chinook salmon have eaten more than 10 times their weight in alewives, the "trashfish" that once constituted 91 percent of the lake's fish population.

Deplores State of Cemetery

Gentlemen:

When I was a small boy I marched up to the cemetery. and I remember thinking what a beautiful place our cemetery was, grass cut and even around the stones was trimmed, all nice and green with no brown spots. The older folks took great pride in this final resting place.

I have lived away from Charlevoix for the past 30 years, but I come back each year to walk through and admire this cemetery.

But this year I looked at it in horror, grass not cut, weeds at least four inches high, it made me think of a ghost town where everyone had left.

I was not the only one that spoke of this condition. What has gone wrong in Charlevoix that they would let their cemetery go like this? I know that one man was off sick, but at the same time they laid off one man. Was this done on purpose for spite or to save money or was it poor management?

Yours truly,

I know I promised not to write any more about bicycles, but you have to let me brag a little.

A couple of weeks ago I interviewed a young fellow out on U.S. 31 South who was traveling from Brunswick, Me., to Berkeley, Calif., on his bicycle. The interview appeared in last week's Courier.

The fellow's name is Tom Morling, he is 18 years old and he hails from Syracuse, N.Y.

And he appeared to be having a high old time for himself — pedaling 80 to 100 miles a day, sleeping at night under the stars and seeing an awful lot of countryside from the seat of his 10-speed Peugeot bicycle.

Although the thought has occurred to me off and on over the years, I suddenly wondered all over again why adult Americans have, by and large, relegated the bicycle to the young? After all, why should kids have all the fun?

All of which is prelude to what happened last Wednesday morning. I had made arrangements to deposit my VW bus at Fletch's Garage in Petoskey for its 6,000-mile inspection, but I hadn't made plans for anyone to drive me back to the Courier office in Charlevoix.

I had a scheme, instead.

When Wednesday dawned clear and bright, I hoisted my bicycle into the back of the bus, slammed the trunk lid and set out for Petoskey with a song in my heart.

I was about to take my first long-distance bike ride in more than a dozen years.

I left the house at 7:45 a.m. and 20 minutes later my bus was in the hands of the VW mechanics in Petoskey. Then, to fortify myself for what was ahead, I climbed on my bike and wheeled around the corner to Hayner's Restaurant for a cup of coffee — hot and black.

At 8:14 I set out on U.S. 31 for Charlevoix, 17 miles southwest, as the bicycle rolls.

Actually, I had a dual purpose in making the trip by bicycle. Morling had told me that the section of road between Charlevoix and Petoskey was the worst he had traveled on his long journey. He had covered some 850 miles between Charlevoix and Brunswick, Me., and I could scarcely believe that a major highway in Charlevoix and Emmet counties was the worst he could find in all that distance, including wilderness roads in Quebec and Ontario.

If Morling is correct, there are some pretty fine roads in North America. Although U.S. 31 has some bad stretches of broken highway, particularly close to the shoulder where bicycles travel, I didn't think the road was all that bad.

Morling also said a good many motorists panic when they see a bicycle ahead and are given to sounding their horns and screeching their brakes. I found this complaint all too true.

A bicycle rider can see what is coming ahead and he can hear what is approaching from the rear. If there is going to be a tight squeeze when two vehicles pass, the cyclist can always move over onto the shoulder without a great deal of hullabaloo.

Back to my trip.

At 8:25 I passed the gate to the Penn-Dixie Cement Co. and couldn't believe I had travelled so far on only 11 minutes. At 8:35 I scooted past the Northland Drive-in Theater and at 8:42 I pulled into Green's Grocery Store at Bay Shore.

Proprietor Tim McArt had a cooler full of ice cold Coke waiting and I helped myself. On my way out, I ran into Lt. Col. Fred Davison en route to the Radar Bomb Scoring Site. He wondered what I was doing on my bicycle 'way out in Bay Shore.

I left the grocery store at 8:50, picked up speed along the straight-away in front of Burnett's property and then coasted for a mile at least, traveling under the C & O viaduct and down to the Lake Michigan shore.

At 9 o'clock sharp I passed the entrance to Ray Wood's cabins. Ten minutes later I was at Kennedy Park and then the long haul began — the gradual incline from Consumers' driveway to the railroad crossing, But I made it.

The rest of the trip was duck soup. At 9:25 I caught my first glimpse of Lake Charlevoix just south of the Boyne City-rd. and at 9:32 I pulled up in front of the Courier office on Bridge-st., for a total traveling time of one hour and 10 minutes.

I'm not very good at algebra, but according to my figures, I averaged better than 14 and one half miles per hour, which seems like a respectable speed for a 42-year-old editor on a one-speed bicycle.

Along the way I saw clumps of lilac in bloom that I had never noticed before. I also saw groundwater still standing in some woodlots, which is unheard of this time of year.

I listened to a number of unfamiliar birdcalls and frightened three black squirrels playing in the road.

And I was properly impressed at the number of recently discarded beer cans along the highway shoulders.

Despite the beer cans, it was a beautiful trip, along one of Michigan's most spectacular sections of roadway on an outrageously delightful June morning.

Why do we let our kids have all the fun?

If it Fitz

By Jim Fitzgerald

At this writing, my wife has left me and I am a bachelor father, just like on TV. I am sitting here in my Brut cologne, waiting for the pretty broads to start climbing through the windows.

"You'd better miss me for more reasons than my cooking," my wife said as she headed over the hill to granddaughter's house to say itchy-gitchy-goo.

"I don't expect to miss your cooking at all," I answered. "I watch TV. I know what happens to fathers who must raise their children alone. A blonde model, 40-28-30, knocks at the back door and asks if she can borrow a cup of my libido. When she notices that my two kids have their heads stuck in the same peanut butter jar, she insists that I hire her as a cook.

"The kids will urge me to marry this doll, of course. Motherless children always want their fathers to marry pretty girls. But I will refuse. I will explain to the kids that you will probably return some day after your granddaughter grows up. I will not speak ill of you, no matter how bitter I feel inside. I will tell them to not believe what the neighbors say about you. I will urge those little half-orphans to keep a light in their hearts for your return. I will tell them they should stop crying, even if Daddy can't," I said.

"I will be gone 2½ days," my wife said.

"I won't take your portrait off the dehumidifier. The children will recognize you when you return. I promise I won't let them forget you," I promised.

"Good lord," she said. "Goodbye."

She has been gone almost two days now. Neither of the kids has noticed the difference. They figure she's over at neighbor Shirley Moore's again, discussing the dresses they wore at the senior prom 25 years ago. The kids just keep eating the same old frozen pizza, and I am living on apples.

That sexy cook hasn't come knocking yet but I really don't care. Last night, in my lonely bed, I found a note under the pillow. It said: "I love you."

It really isn't so bad being married to a grandmother. If she'd only hurry home.

National Geographic Feature

Farmer Lawrence Friederich has more people living around him than anybody else in the United States.

A spot on a 14-acre grassy field on his black-dirt farm near the town of Mascoutah in St. Clair County, Illinois, is the Nation's new population center.

According to the Census Bureau, the population center is a theoretical place. If the entire country were considered flat and rigid without any weight of its own, and if everybody—203.2 million strong in the 1970 census—stayed put and held still, the population center is the point where the country would balance.

CENTER MOVES WEST

The nation's nose counters have been plotting the slow westward migration of the population center every ten years since the first census in 1970, the National Geographic Society says.

In that year the nation's population was centered about 23 miles east of Baltimore, near Chestertown, Maryland.

The population center is not to be confused with the geographic center of the 50 states, which the U.S. Geological Survey says is now in Butte County, South Dakota, about 14 miles east of where the state corners with Montana and Wyoming.

Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stans, following a long-standing custom, will dedicate on May 16 a permanent population center marker—an inscribed four-foot marble shaft on the front lawn of the Mascoutah City Hall on Main-st.

A plaque identifies the population center as latitude 38 degrees 27' 47" north and longitude 89 degrees 42' 22" west, adding "the exact location is 5.3 miles east southeast of this marker."

That puts it in Farmer Friederich's field. Another metal marker fastened to stone has been located there for any curious future archeologists. It is about 18 inches deep, just below reach of the plow for the day when the pasture is again planted with the soy beans and field corn for which the region is noted.

A GERMAN COMMUNITY

Mascoutah was founded by German immigrants in 1837, and accents coloring Midwestern speech are still heard the length of the quiet streets. Before the old red brick houses, saplings have grown into huge trees, providing the shade so rare when the first sodbusters arrived on the wide open prairie.

The town—population 5,045—was named for a small tribe of northern Indians. Mascoutah has been variously interpreted to mean prairie people, fire people, or beautiful people.

Farmers paid about $1.25 an acre for the topsoil-rich land in the early days. Some collected as well on a bounty for killing wolves.

Mrs. Gilbert Takes Issue With Alderman

To the Graduates of Charlevoix High School:

Last night I attended your graduation and I, too, along with the other speakers and Dr. Strolle wish you the best of luck!

Dr. Roland Strolle, Veep of Northern Michigan University advised you on "the mature use of power" and "the advantages of a representative form of government" which all sounds just dandy except I would like to ask Dr. Strolle......and you......and Councilman Roger Westenbroek a few sticky questions.

Nothing very important like how to end the war this year or reduce pollution! Just something simple that's going on right here in Charlevoix on the street where I live. If we can root out the problem here, then maybe we'll learn to solve some of the bigger problems in our state and our country.

Here's the issue.

Last spring traffic patterns were changed when the new elementary school was built on Division-st. – which runs into Michigan-ave. City Superintendent Tom Hanna asked the state for money to pave Division-st. The Department of State Highways said O.K. We'll give you the money BUT you'll have to reclassify Michigan Avenue as a local street unless you eliminate parking on both sides of the street. When you eliminate parking on one side of Michigan-ave., then it will function effectively as a major street and we'll reclassify Division-st. as a major street too.

Why does the city wish to classify Division-st. as a major street? Because the state will give the city paving MONEY!

Now the good citizens on Michigan-ave., (one of the loveliest residential streets in town) are represented on the city council by Roger Westenbroek, who works for Top of Michigan Rural Electric Co. in Boyne City,—and here are my questions;

How come Westenbroek was not aware that the council had already paid for a comprehensive plan to be drawn up by the firm William and Works which suggests completely by-passing Michigan-ave. as a major street?

How come he never asked the residents he represents how they would feel about the proposed change? (Is it because half the residents are summer visitors who live out of state and can't vote in the city elections?)

How come he doesn't know that there are over 40 children who live and play on the street during July and August?

How come he doesn't listen when he's told the corner of Burns and Michigan is a booby trap for speeding cars? (Last summer a boy ran his car into a telephone pole and a few weeks ago a Charlevoix boy drove his car right over the NO PARKING sign and landed on the front lawn of 514 Michigan-ave.!)

How come he didn't first take a drive along the street and see for himself that there is not sufficient parking during the summer for all the cars?

How come he doesn't check with the police as I have and found that even the school busses were ticketed for speeding since the NO PARKING signs went up?

How come he doesn't realize property value will go down when this quiet residential street is turned into another major thoroughfare?

How Come? Because myoptical Westenbroek wants that state money now!

He said so at this week's council meeting when Mayor Essenburg suggested that cars on Michigan-ave. be allowed to park on both sides of the street during the summer months–July and August-for the safety and convenience of the Charlevoix residents. Since Essenburg lives on the street and Westenbroek doesn't, the Mayor knows first hand that half the homes are overflowing with summer guests who bring children, dogs, and extra traffic to the street in addition to the Charlevoix people who also park their cars on Michigan-ave. and go down to the public beach for a swim!

Westenbroek's notion of "the mature use of power" in this case was to remind Essenburg that we're getting $2,600 from the State! Wow.

It was at this point, my dear graduates, that the new Mayor snapped, "That's just what it costs to bury one child!"

But Westenbroek still won't listen. And he won't back-track. As he said at an earlier meeting, "We've made our decision. Let's stick to it!"

A familiar, sad philosophy, my dear graduates! After 100 percent of the people who live on Michigan Ave. (it's only two blocks long) have attended council meetings, written letters and sent telegrams–became involved–the only answer they get from their representative Roger Westenbroek is "We've made our decision. Let's stick to it!"

So where do we stand now Dr. Strolle? We have appealed to our "representative form of government." The mayor, the police, agree with us. Yes, even the Department of State Highways in Lansing writes us, "It is the intent of the Department in carrying out their responsibilities under the provisions of Act 51, P.A. 1951, as amended, to work cooperatively with the local units of government to implement a system of streets compatible with the needs of the traveling public."

What advice do you give the future home-owners of Charlevoix?

As I see it, in lieu of violence of attempted bribery, there are only three choices open to our graduates.

1. You can cherish your VOTE and KNOW your candidate better than we did.
2. You can team up with all the other Westenbroeks of the world and thumb your noses at the little people.
3. Or you can just drop out and play frisbee!

How do you see it, Class of '71?

Heard a report by Supt. Miller on legislation now under consideration.

Approved a resolution regarding NDEA Title 1 participation.

Heard a report on the recent tax allocation by Supt. Miller who said that he felt that, under the circumstances, the school districts did well to receive 7.8 mills.

Heard a report on the possible cuts in the school program in the event the school millage was defeated. Rather than eliminate complete programs, it had been decided to pare down many programs. However, with the approval of 6.5 millage renewal, only a limited cutback will be necessary.

Mrs. Robert L. (Frances) Hooper who was attending her last board meeting after eight years as a board member concluded the meeting by charging Mrs. Robert Lieberman with working for Special Education; Clement J. Wagner with carrying on the work in behalf of Vocational Education and Burr Blanchard to carry on the battle to enclose the breezeways. She also advised that the school return to the Type A lunch program in the school. She concluded by saying the board had probably made some mistakes but it had more than balanced it out by making progress during the two terms she served.

Jack Rader who is also leaving the board after serving five years echoed her views and added "We have come a long way but we have a long way to go."

The board also heard reports on the recent fifth grade trip to Greenfield Village which was considered a great success and a report on the senior class trip to Cedar Point at Sandusky, Ohio, which was equally as successful.

Basketball Camp Planned By Davenport

Deano Davenport has announced plans for the second season of a summer basketball camp for Charlevoix area boys. The morning camp is for boys 10-15 years of age. Tentative plans call for the camp to start June 28.

Sessions will be held for two weeks with practices stressing basic fundamentals in dribbling, passing, and shooting. Individual skills in offense and defense will also be emphasized. Last year several games with near-by camps were held and plans this year will include the same.

Davenport, who is basketball coach at Ferris State College, announced the enrollments will be limited so that boys can receive individual attention. There will be a camp fee. Those interested in receiving more information should contact Deano Davenport or call 7-6433.

County Board, Contractor, Lawmen Will Take Part

Ceremony Starts at 2 O'Clock

Dedication of Charlevoix County's new one-million-dollar County Jail on Grant-st. between Garfield and Carpenter will be held Saturday, June 19, at 2 p.m.

The program will start with an invocation by the Rev. Hewitt V. Johnston, vicar of Christ Episcopal Church, followed by a flag raising by Boy Scouts of Charlevoix Troop 11.

William D. Taylor, chairman of the County Board of Commissioners, will lead the Pledge to the Flag, and act as master of ceremonies.

The Eighth Grade Band, under the baton of Gary Stutzman, will play for the occasion.

Distinguished guests will be introduced, including law enforcement officers from throughout the area, followed by remarks by Ben Ellis of Walloon Lake who was a member of the Board of Supervisors in 1921 when the old County Jail on Antrim-st. was built.

Other speakers will be Robert J. Russell of the Michigan Department of Corrections, Ronald G. Maceachran, district supervisor of the Probation and Parole Division of the Department of Corrections, Circuit Judges Charles L. Brown and James M. Fitzpatrick, District Judge W. Richard Smith, architect S.T. Gerganoff of Ypsilanti and Roger Gust, general contractor.

Following the benediction by the Rev. John Cail, pastor of the First Baptist Church, visitors will be invited to tour the jail with sheriff's deputies as guides.

SHERIFF Philo Sumner examines Motorola console which will be the nerve center of the new Charlevoix County Jail. From this one centrally located unit, the deputy on duty can open and close doors and talk to other deputies and prisoners throughout the building.

UNLIKE the present County Jail, the new facility has an outdoor exercise yard for prisoners on the east side of the building. The area is enclosed by a 12 foot-high fence.

Gust Co. Was Low Bidder

Ground - breaking ceremonies for the new 11,904-square-foot Charlevoix County Jail were held last June 20, with Gust Construction Co. of Cedar Rapids as prime contractor.

The firm, owned by Roger Gust, was awarded the contract in May of 1970 by the Charlevoix County Building Authority, in competition with eight other contractors.

Gust was low bidder at $489,900, although the actual cost of the building is below that figure, $472,490.30. Financing charges of approximately $600,000 increased the cost to about $1,000,000.

The County Board had known for some time that the present 50-year-old jail was below approved correctional standards, but it wasn't until the state Department of Corrections told the county that it would either have to build a new jail or send its prisoners elsewhere that work began in earnest on the new building.

One of the first steps was the creation of a Building Authority, composed of E.D. (Pat) Hawley of Charlevoix, Aldwyn Barden of Boyne City and Greg Boswell of East Jordan. The Authority sold bonds to finance construction, to be paid back by rentals and fees received by the county.

While the Building Authority was working out financial arrangements, architect S.T. Gerganoff of Ypsilanti was busy drawing up plans for the new building which would meet requirements of the Department of Corrections. Gerganoff, one of Michigan's foremost jail architects, also designed the Charlevoix County Building.

Bidders on the job, in addition to Gust, were Chain-O-Lakes Development Co., Bellaire; Barnes Construction, Grand Rapids; Henderson Brothers, Inc., Cheboygan; McReady and Sons, Inc., Gaylord; Montague-Keith Construction, Inc., Whitehall; Omega Construction Co., Grand Rapids; and Shaw-Henderson, Inc., Cheboygan.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY officers, members of the Board of Commissioners, the architect and general contractor pose outside jail prior to dedication. Front row, left to right, are Clarence F. Rabach, clerk; Grover C. Geneit, register of deeds and county abstractor; Clayton A. Smith, Dist. 3; Ralph C. Richardson, Dist. 5; Clyde Cunningham, Dist. 2; Albert Kassin, Dist. 10; Kenneth A. Staley, Dist. 14; S.T. Gerganoff of Ypsilanti, architect; and Roger Cust of Cedar Springs, general contractor. Back row: Sheriff Philo E. Sumner; Anah H. Potter, treasurer; Harvey C. Varnum, prosecuting attorney; Joan Y. Blanchard, director, Equalization Department; Harry Tompkins, Dist. 11; Delbert Ingalls, Dist. 1; Harry Griffin, Dist. 6; I. Lee Moerland, Dist. 15; Anthony Kullik, Dist. 7; Kit Carson, Dist. 13; Ira L. Davis, Dist. 4; Barney Milstein, Dist. 9; Robert Furlong, Dist. 12; and William D. Jail Can House 25 Prisioners

The new Charlevoix County Jail will accommodate a total of 25 prisoners.

It has one maximum security cell for incorrigibles, five individual cells and group cells for from four to six prisoners.

The jail also has a "drunk tank" where inebriated house guests can sleep off a night on the town.

The building provides for ample segregation of male and female prisoners, as well as the segregation of older prisoners and first-time offenders.

A feature of the jail is an electronic monitoring system which allows the deputy in charge to listen in on every corner of the jail day and night.

One man, actually, can run the entire jail from his centrally located duty station, pushing buttons to open and close doors and talk to prisoners and deputies in other parts of the building.

The jail has enclosed parking spaces for three vehicles, including one patrol car stall to be used exclusively by deputies bringing prisoners into the building.

When the deputy and his prisoner arrive at the jail, the deputy pulls up in front of the door and asks his colleague on the desk to open the door, which is done by remote control.

The patrol car then moves into the building and the door closes and locks, making escape impossible.

The deputy then asks to have the door to the booking room opened, and this, too, is performed by remote control by the deputy on duty.

In the booking room, the deputy places his weapon in a sliding drawer which opens into the control room and proceeds to book the prisoner. Having the weapon out-of-reach eliminates the possibility of the prisoner disarming the deputy.

After being booked, a prisoner is told to shower before he is issued a fresh uniform and locked up.

The cells all have terrazo floors for easy cleaning, with steel beds and tables solidly affixed to the floor. The beds are equipped with four-inch-thick foam rubber mattresses and tear-proof nylon covers.

The cell area has poured concrete walls with steel reinforcing and ¾-inch bars on the front. All of the doors are locked by built-in electric motors, making escape virtually impossible.

The jail is also virtually fireproof, the only possible flammable materials being the acoustical ceiling tile in the office area (which will withstand 45 minutes of intense heat) and the carpeting.

Meals will be prepared on the premises by the jail matron, Mrs. Philo Sumner, who also will have charge of the female prisoners.

A complete ventilation system changes the air in the building every four hours, with auxiliary fans to be used in emergencies. The building will be kept at an even 70 degrees winter and summer.

Unlike the old jail, the new building has an outside exercise yard measuring 64 by 32 feet, enclosed by a 12-foot high cyclone fence.

The new jail also has a reading room where prisoners on good behavior will be allowed to spend some time.

Sheriff Sumner is excited about the possibility of using the room for educational purposes.

"Even in the old jail, we have been able to teach some illiterates how to write their own names," he says.

In addition to the jail facilities, the new building includes an apartment for the sheriff and his family. The wing includes three bedrooms and a bath and a large combination kitchen-dining room-living room.

The new jail also has a room where deputies may change clothes and relax with a cup of coffee between calls.

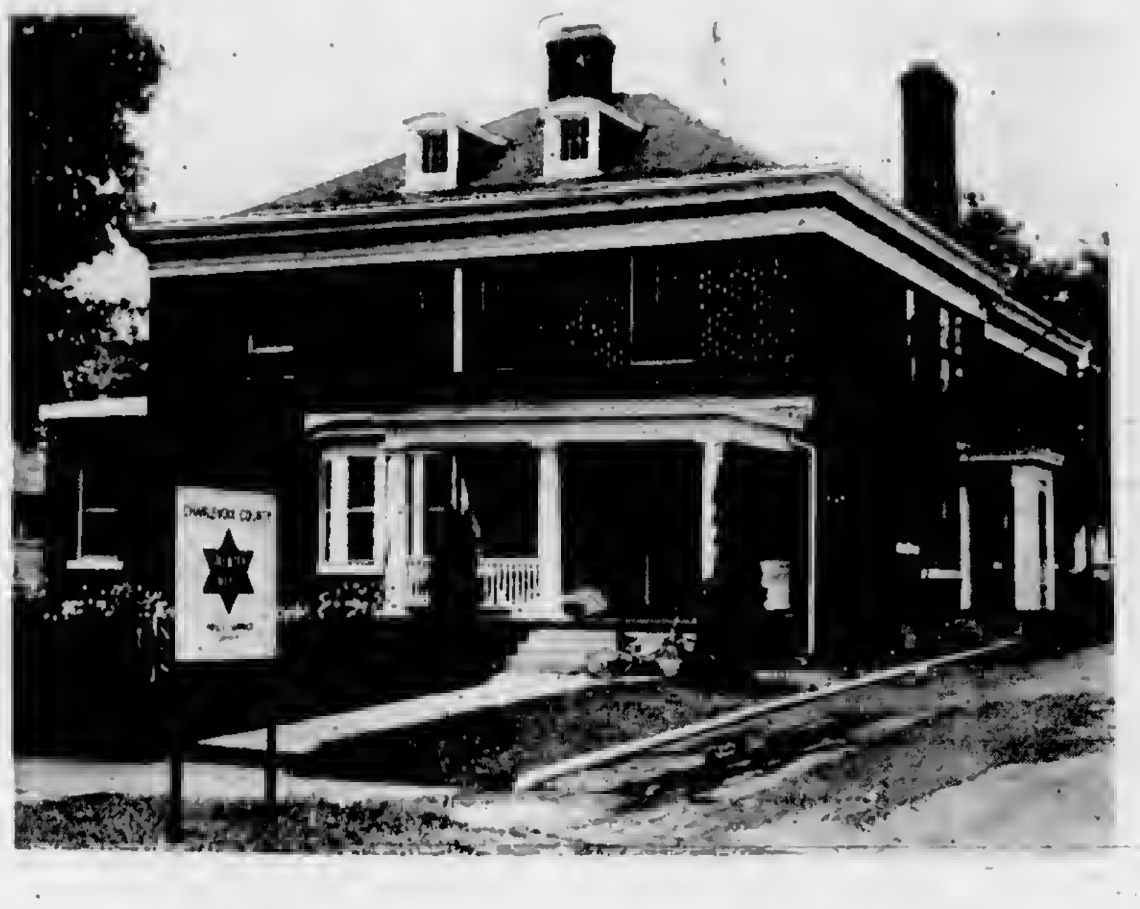
Old County Jail Was Built Half Century Ago



THE OLD Charlevoix County Jail on Antrim-st. behind the County Building has served the county for 50 years. Clark Clarence Rabach says the building probably will be converted into county offices. Below, cells in the new county jail are terrazo floors with steel beds and tables firmly affixed to the terazzo.

Facility Has Served Since July of 1921

By FRAN MARTIN

The 50-year-old structure that has served as the Charlevoix county Sheriff's Department and jail since 1921 will be abandoned as a penal institution by July 1, 1971, as the department moves to its new headquarters on Garfield Ave.

Except for different names and monies expended, the construction of the new jail followed the pattern set more than half a century ago when the board of supervisors were faced with the prospect of finding property and the funds to replace the out-moded jail and jailer's residence located in the courthouse.

It was Dec. 21, 1917, that a committee composed of Jay Adams, H.E. Hutton, T.J. Smith, Wm. H. Cook and Howard Shaeffer was appointed by E.C. Chew, chairman, to consult with the sheriff regarding his needs.

It was Jan. 7, 1919, before a special committee recommended the purchase of two lots west of the courthouse at a cost of $2,500 as a site for the proposed new jail. The recommendation of the committee then composed of Nassau Burns, W.J. Gallagher and E.C. Chew was approved.

At this time George Weaver was sheriff, Simon M. Rose, mayor of Charlevoix, and William B. Bashaw, chairman of the Board of Supervisors.

The following day, Jan. 8, 1919, the special committee requested a $20,000 for the purpose of obtaining plans and beginning work on the structure.

Robert F. Sloan, an engineer, was engaged to draw up plans which were presented to the board in June, 1919. The estimated cost of the building which included the jail and sheriff's residence was set at $30,000.

At that time the valuation of the county was $11,978,258.

On Oct. 24, 1919, the contract for the new jail (with the exception of the cells) was approved and the funds, not to exceed $28,000 were appropriated.

On June 21, 1920, the board authorized a special committee to make a study of the remodeling of the former jail and jailer's residence in the courthouse for use as offices.

On Oct. 22, 1920, the jail committee composed of H.L. Bedford, Servetus A. Correll, E.C. Chew, George W. Weaver and W.J. Gallagher advised the board that $23,196.56 had been spent on the new jail. The committee also recommended that John Curtis, the general contractor, be allowed the sum of $2,022.26 for extra labor and material on the jail building.

On the same day the board recommended that $16,00[illegible] be appropriated for the purchase of steel cells, electrical and other fixtures for the new jail.

E.B. Ward reported the contract for nine jail cells had been awarded to the [illegible] Jail Co. for $15,560.00.

On June 29, 1921 the special jail committee reported the completion of the jail at the following cost:

Contract for jail construction, $2[illegible] plumbing, $3,[illegible] electric, $[illegible] cells $15,560; jail screen $484 residence screens $[illegible] extra water main to jail $166.43 filling and grading lawn $172.50, [illegible] shades [illegible] for residence, [illegible] heating for [illegible] work in [illegible] L. Munger, $[illegible] cost [illegible].

Various modifications and improvements were made during the years to keep abreast of Michigan Department of Corrections specifications until the early 1960's when the building, according to Corrections Department standards, outgrew its usefulness as a jail and the final ultimatum dated Aug. 11, 1966, was served resulting in the new headquarters of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and sheriff's residence on Grant-st. near Garfield.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS and area law enforcement officers turned for the dedication of the new Charlevoix County Jail Saturday afternoon. The sheriff's office will move from its present quarters on Antrim-st. to the new location about July 1.

ROBERT J. RUSSELL, jail inspector for the Michigan Department of Corrections, was one of the speakers at the dedication of the new Charlevoix County Jail Saturday afternoon. At left is William Taylor, chairman of the County Board of Commissioners. At right are the Rev. John Cail, who offered the benediction, and the Rev. Hewitt V. Johnston, who gave the invocation.

Appeals Court Weighs Suit Against City

Shaw-Henderson, Inc., of Cheboygan, has renewed its legal efforts to block construction of Charlevoix's proposed waste water treatment plant south of the city by the Clark Construction Co. of Lansing.

City Attorney Robert Hoffman told the City Council Monday night that Shaw-Henderson has taken the case to the Court of Appeals in Cincinnati after Federal District Judge Albert Engel in Grand Rapids said he had no jurisdiction in the case, insofar as the city is concerned.

Hoffman said Shaw-Henderson, through its attorney Charles Boyle of Chicago, has asked for an "accelerated hearing" in the appeals court.

The city's co-counsel in Grand Rapids, Attorney Steven Dykema, has filed a petition with the same court objecting to the accelerated hearing.

Ground was broken for the facility last Monday and construction is underway.

Shaw-Henderson, second low bidder on the project, has objected to Clark's receiving the contract on grounds that there were irregularities in the Clark contract. The Cheboygan firm says Clark was allowed to "pirate" subcontractors, after one of its own sub-contractors, Axtell Hardy of Traverse City, withdrew.

In other business the council:

–Approved a request by Larry Ford to sponsor the Fisher Brothers circus on Carpenter-st. in Charlevoix July 6 and waived the $50 fee. Proceeds will go to the baseball program.

–Heard a complaint by Robert Sommerville that the house at 112 Palmer-st. is dilapidated and rat-infested. The structure is reportedly owned by Mrs. Norma Pike of Cross Village. The council withheld action until it receives an answer to a letter sent to Mrs. Pike June 18 by City Superintendent Thomas Hanna.

Dr. Grear presently is furnishing his offices and plans to open for business this Friday.

Swim Lessons Will Cost $2 This Summer

City Recreation Director Deano Davenport has announced that the Red Cross swimming school and the popular golf instructional clinic are currently taking enrollments at the city hall.

There will be a $2 enrollment fee for youngsters interested in learning swimming skills at the beginner, intermediate, advanced swimmer, and junior life saving level. As in the past the lessons will be given at the Depot Beach and will last about five weeks.

The deadline for enrolling at the city hall is June 30. Lessons are scheduled to start Tuesday, July 6.

The golf school is slated to start June 28. Those interested in learning the proper grip, stance, swing and other golf techniques should also sign up at the city hall. There will be a $2 fee for the three-week course.

GOP Board Will Meet

The Executive Board of the Charlevoix County Republican Committee will meet Thursday, June 23, at 8 p.m. at the County Building.

On the agenda are plans for the annual County GOP picnic, election planning and a discussion of the county chairman's responsibilities.

At a party meeting June 17, members voted to pay only one-third of their state assessment until county Republicans receive some recognition from the state for their contributions.

Members agreed that state GOP identification cards would be sufficient.

School Board Cuts Operating Budget

At its last meeting of the 1970-71 fiscal year, the Charlevoix Board of Education took a long look at next year's budget before making recommendations on how to cut it. The budget had been drawn up before voters rejected 2¼ mills in added money for school operation at the polls last week.

The board also:

–Learned that negotiations with the teaching staff are at an impasse and that a mediator has been requested.

–Voted to offer contracts to 12 probationary teachers.

–Hired two others.

–Set the date for the opening of school, and –Approved pay adjustments for non-certified personnel.

On July 12, two new members, Charles Elzinga and Larry Warner, will join the board, succeeding Mrs. Robert L. (Frances) Hooper and Jack E. Rader who were not candidates for re-election. Election of officers will also be held.

After a discussion of budget cuts talking over the problem with Al Shindorf, president of the Charlevoix Education Association, the board met in executive session before returning with the following recommendation they felt were necessary in view of the loss of revenue:

--Elimination of the elementary music position.

--Elimination of the elementary physical education and assignment of the teacher, Mrs. Geraldine Goss, to a fourth grade classroom.

–Termination of the contract with the Health Department for the school nurse and employment of a nurse on an hourly basis. This later action will become effective June 30.

Several programs that had been considered for elimination were retained, including remedial reading in the elementary school, remedial reading and counseling in the Middle School and the hiring of another sixth grade teacher to take over the class load with the retention of these programs, and retention of the high school English-Spanish position.

Other area were cutbacks were made were in the reduction of textbooks purchases, such as starting a new series of study and purchasing only books to supplement those on hand; elimination of classroom subscriptions, reduction of teaching supplies, travel and professional conferences, no replacement

Lake Trout Fry Return To Charlevoix Station

Lake trout have returned to the Great Lakes Fisheries Station on Palmer-st. in Charlevoix.

Supervisor Myrl Keller reports that 100,000 fingerling trout have arrived at the hatchery from Marquette for the summer and that another 50,000 are expected shortly.

The hatchery will rear the young fish until October or November when they will be planted in Michigan waters.

Keller says the trout are the first to be housed at the hatchery since 1963.

Since the Department of Natural Resources took over the hatchery four years ago, the facility has been used for the rearing of coho salmon and rainbow trout. All of the salmon and rainbows have been moved out to rearing ponds at Wolverine where they will remain until they are planted in the Great Lakes in the spring.

The new batch of lake trout average about four inches long. Sixty-three of them weigh one pound.

Keller says that visitors are welcome to stop in and have a look at the new residents weekdays from 8 a.m. until noon and 1 p.m. until 5 p.m.

The Charlevoix Station was established by Legislative Authority June 28, 1902, on land leased from the city. The following year, the first hatchery was erected on the site--a frame building measuring 18 by 46 feet with five small rooms and a bath.

The present hatchery was constructed in 1917 at a cost of $23,000. It measures 76 by 136 feet.

Although the original intent was to operate a hatchery on the premises, with spawn supplied by commercial fishermen, the building became strictly a rearing station in 1961, supplied by fry from other hatcheries.

Water for the raceways is drawn from an icy well and seldom exceeds 50 degrees.

Last Friday—when the outside temperature approached 80, water in the raceways reached only 47 degrees, "air conditioning" the entire building.

BUD KNIGHT, fish culturist at the Oden Hatchery, examines new shipment of fingerling lake trout which will be reared until next fall at the Department of Natural Resources hatchery in Charlevoix. The trout are the first lakers to be reared at the hatchery since the state took over the operation from the federal government four years ago.

Miss Kapp Is Wed In St. Marys' Rites

Nancy Christine Kapp and William Francis Bergin exchanged wedding vows at St. Mary's Church in a noon ceremony Saturday, June 19.

Parents of the bride are Mrs. Marvin Goss of Charlevoix and the late John B. Kapp. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bergin of Lansing.

Father Fitzgerald performed the double ring rites.

Escorted to the altar by her stepfather, Marvin Goss, the bride wore a Victorian styled gown of muslin with cotton lace inserts at the high neckline and sleeves with flounce at the bottom. She also choose a floral headband and floor length veil.

Matron of honor was Mrs. William Hamilton of Los Angeles, Calif. Bridesmaid was Mrs. John Kapp, sister-in-law of the bride; from E. Lansing. They wore Victorian gowns of ivory lace and navy voile fashioned with a high neck bodice which had a wide bib of ivory lace trimmed with navy velvet ribbon. The sheer Bishop sleeves were accented at the cuff with lace and ribbon.

A reception followed at the Weathervane Inn.

Following a wedding trip to Mackinac Island, the couple will make their home in Lansing until the fall when they will both teach in Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Bergin

Library Notes

Charlevoix Pamphlet Traces Early Years

The Library has recently published a small pamphlet dealing with the history of early Charlevoix from 1857 to 1870. This is the first time that pioneers and important events have been listed in chronological order. There is a listing of the early ships and churches, a city directory (1869) and a bibliography of early pioneers. The pamphlet may be checked out to patrons or it may be purchased at the Library for a nominal fee. The proceeds from the booklet will go into the general Library fund. A second pamphlet dealing with the history of Charlevoix from 1870 to 1880 is now being prepared.

We would like to express our appreciation to Ralph Hamilton for his generous contribution of 83 News Maps which were used as propaganda material on U.S.O. bulletin boards during World War II. The maps will be especially interesting to young people. One side of these enormous Newsmaps has colored pictures and current diagrams or sketches of important happenings. The other side is a developing map showing various theaters of war and where the action was. We are unable to display this unusual collection because of the size of the newsmaps, but anyone interested may check them out or enjoy looking at them in the Library.

Four titles recommended for good summer reading include: "Shady Grove" by Janice Holt Giles, a delightful story which takes place in Broke Neck, Ky. It is a social novel, but it manages to make us laugh at the same time it touches our hearts.

"Deepdown River" by Neill C. Wilson takes place during the Depression in the mountain-country of north-central Idaho. Jamie, the youngest of five children, tells the story.

"Fathers" by Herbert Gold has had fine reviews and has been enjoyed by all of our patrons who have read it. This foremost author concerns himself in this novel with the problem of how one American, transplanted from Europe, makes his success in the new land.

"A Compass Error" was written by a genuinely gifted novelist, Sybille Bedford. The heroine, Flavia Herbert, is on her own in the south of France during a golden summer in the 1930's. She believes she knows exactly what her future will be, but when she is caught up in the crucial turning of her life, her actions are as mysterious to herself as they are to others.

Shower Fetes Miss Henley

By Beth Genelt

Miss Penny Henley was feted at a bridal shower given by Mrs. Kenneth (Cindy) Matheny and Mrs. Robert Miller at the latter's home on W. Garfield recently.

Miss Henley's marriage to Edwin G. Gregory of Petoskey will be an event of June 26 at the Bethany Lutheran Church in Charlevoix.

Twenty young high school friends attended the shower, also Mrs. Bruce Henley and Mrs. Watson Gregory sr., of Petoskey, mothers of the bride and groom-to-be.

Mrs. Ralph Hamilton entertained at a shower for Miss Henley at her home on Friday, June 4 at which 25 members of the families of the bride and groom to-be were invited.

Hand-made 'prizes' as gifts were presented to each guest. The gifts were made by Mrs. Hamilton.

Woman Hurt in Crash

By Mrs. Thomas Maxwell

Mrs. Edwin (Betty) Medsker, 40, Bay Shore, was injured June 14, at 2:30 p.m. when her 1966 Plymouth was hit broadside by a motorcycle, driven by Mike Jakeway, 15, of Petoskey.

The accident occurred one block south of the Bay Shore First Presbyterian Church, as Mrs. Medsker was driving North to US-31 Highway.

She was taken to Little Traverse Hospital by ambulance and x-rays were taken she was treated for injury of left shoulder, hip and leg, and cuts and bruises of the face and head.

She was released to her home after treatment.

Her sons, Robert, 9, and Steve, 6, riding in the car with her, were not injured.

Driver of the motorcycle and his passenger, Faye Davis of Boy Shore, received cuts and bruises. The Medsker automobile was totaled.

Steve Smith Ranks 7th In U.S. in Decathlon

STEVE SMITH, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smith of Charlevoix, has been rated seventh in the nation in decathlon. He is a student at Western Michigan University.

Hopes to Compete Nationally

By RON GOODCHILD
Sports Writer
Western Herald

Steve Smith of Western Michigan holds the school record in the decathlon with a record point total of 6,509 points.

Smith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smith of Charlevoix.

The decathlon is an international event which consists of 10 different events. It is divided up with 5 events on the first day and 5 on the second. Steve's best marks are: 11.2 in the 100 meter dash, 20'2" in the long jump, 38' in the shot put, 5'10" in the high jump, 52 seconds flat in the 400 meters. His best marks on the second day of competition are: 15.9 in the 110 meter high hurdles, 122'6" in the discus, 176'4" in the javelin, 13'6" in the pole vault and 4:43 in the 1500 meter run.

Les than 100 people have been in more than two decathlons in a lifetime. It is an event that normally doesn't come around in the U.S. until an Olympic year. The decathlon is just starting to become a popular sport in the U.S. It is very popular in Europe, especially in Germany. It was originated in Greece to determine the best all-around man. All of Steve's training comes right from the German training camps.

This event was won by the United States in the '68 Olympics by Bill Toomey. He set an Olympic record with a 10 event total of 8,193 points. This can be accredited to the excellent track and field program of the United States.

As for Steve's plans, he hopes to compete in the nationals in Seattle, Washington. He is currently rated seventh in the nation and Track and Field News ranked him as one of the potential 7,000 point men in the U.S. He placed 7th at the Kentucky Relays this year. He was 3rd in the Ohio State Relays and in the All-Ohio meet recently at Kent State he was 2nd. He plans to keep running it for the next couple of years, as he says, "I run for fun."

More Books Needed To Help Indian Kids

Project Ch-I-Ch-O (which stands for Charlevoix Indian Children's Opportunities) is stepping up its effort to collect books and magazines for resale during the Waterfront Fair for Artists and Craftsmen in August.

Although the fair is scheduled only one day – Saturday, Aug. 14 – the books will be on sale on the lawn in front of the Charlevoix Library on Clinton-st. Aug. 12 to 14.

Sponsored by the Charlevoix Women's Club, Project Ch-I-Ch-O is attempting to raise money to keep needy Indian children in school.

The group is seeking donations of books of all kinds – both hardcovers and paperbacks – as well as back issues of magazines such as National Geographic, Harpers and the Atlantic Monthly.

Donations can either be left at the library or they will be picked up by contacting Mrs. Charles Duerr, 209 E. Dixon (telephone 547-2603).

Pioneers Brought RosesWest

Several items of business were taken care of and Earl Doernenburg of Resort Pike-rd., Petoskey, was winner of the outdoor cooker. Proceeds from ticket sales will be used for Garden Club projects. No club expressed its appreciation to everyone who has placed flower boxes and planters on Bridge-st.

An interesting lesson was given by Mildred Paddock on "The Romantic Rose."

Roses are closely associated with the paintings, literature, and music and even politics and is sometimes called the "Queen of Flowers." More than 200 species of wild roses have been named by botonists. Pioneer women moving westward in covered wagons carried a slip or root of their favorite rose bush to plant by their homes in the wilderness. The hardiness of these old roses is witnessed by the sight of a rose bush blooming by an old abandoned house.

Few flowers have received so much attention from Plant Breeders.

What goes into making a new rose? A great investment in time, thought, and human labor is involved.

One of the most noted amateur rose hybridizers was the late Charles Meilland of France whose "Peace Rose" is a favorite of thousands. It was introduced on the day the United Nations Charter was signed in 1945 in San Francisco.

There is considerable talk these days about a lack of fragrance in modern roses, The lament is that grandmother's roses were more fragrant in the old days. We have many fragrant new roses but red and pink seem to have more fragrance than varieties of yellow.

Requirements for success with roses are good drainage, good soil, and sunlight. They do not like a cold windswept location and roses need fertilizer. Banana Peels cut up and covered with a layer of soil are very good because of their potash content. If you do not care to use pesticides or sprays use a good mulch and plant chives, garlic, onions or marigolds with them to discourage pests and insects. A bath of a good laundry soap, not detergents, with ground onions, garlic or red pepper is a pest discourager.

All this may sound like a lot of work but roses give you much pride and enjoyment and also beautify your landscape.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. C.R. Ringler on Ferry-ave, the east side of the ferry Tuesday afternoon, July 18.

Hard-Hit Roads To Be Repaired

The state Highway Commission has authorized emergency resurfacing and repairs of 140 miles of state highways hard-hit by the particularly severe 1970-71 winter.

Included in the work is a 1.3 mile stretch of M-75 in Charlevoix County, extending southwesterly from U.S. 131. Estimated cost of the project is $50,000.

The commission also has authorized repairs along one-half mile of U.S. 31 in Petoskey from U.S. 131 to Bear Creek. Estimated cost is $30,000.

The emergency program, at an estimated cost of $6 million, is in addition to the annual resurfacing program announced by the Commission April 1. The annual, non-emergency program calls for resurfacing of 223 miles of state highways at estimated cost of $6.5 million.

Commission Chairman Charles H. Hewitt said the "severe winter has accelerated deterioration on many of our state highways. Resurfacing and minor reconstruction are needed on an emergency basis so they can be maintained in a serviceable condition for the motoring public."

SLOW PITCH

The slow pitch league swung into action with eight games during the week. Medusa scored five runs in both the fourth and sixth innings to smother Airport Bar 16-3. Larry Nunemaker had a big night at bat for the winners with three home runs. Roger Putman chipped in with a solo blast for the winners also.

Lee Cross hit a seventh inning home run with a mate on to lead Topside to a 13-12 win over upset-minded American Mold. Mold's Mike Crain's two homers and solos by Holm and Sharrow had pushed Mold in front until the fatal seventh.

Portside got into the win column with a heart-stopping 13-12 win over Howard's of Boyne. Tom Drenth homered twice and Wright, and Gibbs once each for the winners.

Andy's beat Townhouse 16-10 behind three hits each by Bill Supernaw and Denny Warner. Culver and Joe Battle's three round trippers paced the losers.

In a real rarity, the Argonne shut out the Townhouse 6-0. Stan Johnson scattered three hits for the first shutout in a long time in the circuit's short history. He also homered along with teammate Bob Holtzman.

The Topside displayed its long range weapons with Jim Kluge's two homers and one each by Lee Cross, Terry Blissett and Bob Crain to dispose of Portside Sports 11-1.

Medusa outscored Argonne 16-7, scoring in every inning. Putman, Kerr, and Buehlman each banged three hits for the winners. Stan Johnson homered twice in a losing cause.

Freedmans and Andys hooked up in a blinger before Andys edged out a 10-9 win. McColski homered for the margin of victory. Duane and Glenn Taylor along with Gayle Sheldon and Joe Beaudine hit for the circuit for the losers.

FAST PITCH LEAGUE

County State Bank opened the Fast Pitch Play with an impressive 7-1 win over Novaks. Scoring in every inning but one, the winners had an easy time as their pitcher, Tom Drenth, hurled a neat one-hitter. Only Larry Potter's first inning single stood between a no-hitter.

First State Bank (formerly American Mold) won a thrilling see-saw affair from Morweld Steel. A three-run seventh proved to be the difference in the 9-8 contest. Lee Cross homered for the winners. A Young Potter's Appliance team gave First State Bank a real scare before falling 6-4. Two veteran pitchers, Nate Boss and Ted Potter, hooked up in a battle, but the outcome was decided by fielding as the losers had a couple crucial miscues that proved fatal.

PEANUT LEAGUE

The Lions opened the pre-season tournament with a 10-3 win over the Cards. Fourteen walks proved to be the Cards downfall: John Michael had two hits for the winners while Mike Skippergosh had two for the losers. The Tigers hund a 10-0 defeat on the Cubs with Bob Danacher hurling a neat one-hitter.

The Braves moved into the winner's bracket, beating the Astros 10-1.

Mr. Shadko will be stationed in Japan with the United States Naval Investigative Secret Service Commission for the next three years.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Cook and four daughters left last Friday for Kalamazoo where both will take eight week courses during the summer at Western Michigan University.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Mol and family of Muskegon are visiting their parents, Mrs. Marguerite Mason and Mr. and Mrs. John Mol.

Carl Mitchell and Jack Bacot were admitted to Little Traverse Hospital recently.

Mrs. Clara Roberts of Dyer, Ind., is spending a two week visit with her niece, Mrs. Clarence Murray and Mr. Murray.

An Installation Banquet for the Charlevoix Lions Club was held Saturday evening at the Weathervane featuring a prime rib dinner. A large number of Lions and their wives attended the affair at which Bill Supernaw was installed as President of the Club for the coming year. The new President and other officers were installed by District Deputy Governor Donald Seifried of Central Lake.

The New County Jail: A Necessary Evil

Most of the speakers at the dedication of the new Charlevoix County Jail Saturday afternoon found it difficult to put their feelings into words.

It is equally difficult to editorialize on the meaning of such a facility for the people of Charlevoix County.

For a jail — or a prison of any kind — is simply an outward sign that society has failed at least some of its people.

We are sorry that jails must exist. We regret that in the year 1971 we must still resort to the incarceration of certain individuals for the good of society as a whole.

It is a downright shame that jails are necessary at all.

And it is as difficult to say something nice about jails as it is to say something nice about the bubonic plague.

But, unfortunately, jails are still a necessity, even after the giant strides that have been made into the understanding of social misbehavior.

Although we look forward to the day when jails, as such, will no longer be necessary, the people of Charlevoix County apparently are practical enough to realize that the imprisonment of certain individuals for certain reasons is still an adjunct of civilization in 1971.

As District Judge Wayne Richard Smith put it, the prisoners confined to the new structure on Garfield-st. probably will not enjoy their confinement any more than they did being incarcerated in the antiquated building on Antrim-st. that is the present jailhouse.

Jail is jail, regardless of the external trappings.

But the people of Charlevoix County can rest assured that the persons imprisoned at the new facility are being treated as humanely as possible.

The quarters are clean, well-ventilated, well-heated and up-to-snuff so far as state health standards are concerned.

As always, the prisoners will be fed balanced, appetizing meals and in addition there will be an opportunity for outdoor exercise and intellectual improvement.

Off-hand, we can think of a dozen different areas in which the cost of the new jail (about $1 million including financing) could have been spent with more direct benefit to the community.

But there is also little doubt that the old jail was inadequate.

Our only hope is that the new jail will never be filled to capacity and that society, the state Corrections Department and the judiciary will never require the construction of another such facility in Charlevoix County.

Low Bond Rate A Sign of Confidence

The people of Charlevoix can take pride in the fact that bonds for the new sewage disposal plant on the Lake Michigan shore south of Boulder Park were sold for considerably less than the prevailing bond rate.

The city's $700,000 bond issue to finance part of the construction cost was bought by Kenower MacArthur Co. at an interest rate of 5.1336 percent, which is considerably less than similar bond issues by larger communities with better credit ratings.

The Charlevoix School District experienced a similar break on interest when it sold bonds for construction of the new Elementary School.

We won't hazard a guess as to why Charlevoix always comes out on top in its financial dealings, but we suspect that the area's history of solvency — coupled with the fact that we are "Charlevoix the Beautiful" — has a lot to do with our "lucking out" at every turn.

We thank the firm of Kenower MacArthur for its confidence in Charlevoix, although we are certain that its confidence is well founded.

Let Solons Review Viet Data: Ruppe

By CONG. PHIL RUPPE

Perhaps the most newsworthy of the series of events which took place in Washington this past week was the publishing of the initial installments of a major Pentagon study detailing the evolution of American involvement in Vietnam.

Three installments were published of the lengthy, 7000 page, 47 volume report in the New York Times on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, before a federal district court issued an injunction against printing further segments.

The report was a detailed chronicle of the events leading to our involvement in the war as well as a thorough analysis of the decisions made relating to Southeast Asia during the period 1960-1968.

Some of the facts stated in the report will hurt: many people will be shocked by the revelations made. But, in the final analysis, we must have the courage to face up to our mistakes if we are going to avoid future errors, especially when they are of the magnitude of Vietnam.

For this reason, I have written the secretary of defense asking that the full study be released to the Congress for its study on an official basis.

Educational reform is a must. Voters throughout the state and nation are showing their disapproval of the educational system by defeating millage requests time and again. Charlevoix residents at least voted to renew a 6.5 operational millage. In Lansing, the whole millage proposal was turned down flat by the voters. Evidently, the people feel something must be done.

Here in Charlevoix the school administrators salaries are somewhat above the average for the townspeople. Certainly, one can retort with the fact that the administrators have college degrees. But what really is the issue is that voters are not about to approve pay increases for teachers, administrators or whatever when they themselves are struggling to make ends meet.

Another well voiced complaint is that teachers work only nine months out of the year for a total of 180 days plus and some even hold other jobs during the year, in the summer, or both. Granted, teachers must spend time correcting papers, making up tests and preparing lessons but how hard they work at these things is pretty much left up to the individual instructor.

Tenure. What are it's benefits? It provides a teacher with the security of knowing he has a job year after year. On the other hand it also makes it practically impossible to get rid of a teacher who is not performing at an adequate level.

Still another question is why one long-time school official received only a three percent increase while newcomers were awarded increases of up to 12 percent.

And from the other side of the fence, the teachers ask for more money on a regular basis. Charlevoix just cannot afford these pay increases. Teachers and administrators seem to expect the same high salary and fringe benefits that metropolitan areas can offer forgetting that Charlevoix's economy is not nearly on the same level, therefore we cannot compete salary-wise with the larger cities.

If an administrator or teacher wants the high salary, then he must be willing to go to the places that are willing and can afford to pay them, even if it means working in a less desirable neighborhood.

Not very long ago I read that school drug-abuse problems have decreased in some school systems because some genuine teachers cared enough to set up outside programs in such areas as pottery, photography, and folk or modern dancing. They did this without pay because they were truly interested in the students and big problems. Unfortunately, there aren't enough of these teachers with the old fashioned concept of teaching to go around. But, isn't it nice to know that there are some (and we even have a few in Charlevoix) that are willing to give up their time to help without demanding something in return.

This is not to say that this is the responsibility of all those who enter the teaching profession. But, because of their training and education, teachers are better equipped to handle undertakings of this sort.

The present educational system definitely needs revamping in both the monetary area and in the selection of classes offered. Schools must be studied and evaluated as to where and when the money should be spent to achieve maximum results. Courses have to be disected and put back together so they relate even more to our changing society and provide the student with the tools he needs to face that society.

Election Day

By BOB CLOCK

What is your favorite holiday?

There is certainly a lot to be said for Christmas, one of the happiest holidays on the Christian calendar. In addition to its deep religious significance, Christmas is the one bright spot in that long, chilly skein of hostile days we call winter.

Thanksgiving has many boosters, particularly among grandmas and gourmets who delight in the groaning board.

Young boys sort of lean toward the Fourth of July, with its parades, fireworks and watermelon.

Girls like Easter if it falls late enough so they don't have to bundle up in galoshes and windbreakers to join the Easter parade.

Some youngsters prefer Hallowe'en above all the other holidays. It is the only day of the year when adults, by common consent, ignore childish pranks that otherwise would deserve a severe tongue-lashing.

But of all the days of the year, my favorite is election day. And a year that has lots of election days is my kind of year.

My fondness for election days isn't something I have come by recently. I remember when I was a kid — long before I was of voting age — feeling sorry for anyone who had the misfortune to die just before an election. If the victim only could have hung on for a few more hours he would have gone to his grave secure in the knowledge that Roosevelt beat Landon or that Harry Truman wasn't such a dark horse after all.

In those days, election day at our house had all the overtones of a bonafide holiday. Kids were allowed to stay up late to listen to returns on the radio and my mother always served a midnight snack of blind robins, soda crackers and beer to whoever happened to drop in. (She served the same menu during prize fights, but that's another story.)

During my 21 years in the newspaper business, election day has always been a work day — sometimes lasting a full 24 hours or more — but it has never ceased to be a holiday of sorts, at least to my way of thinking.

There is a certain, indefinable excitement in the air from the minute the polls open in the morning until the last vote is counted and entered on the tally sheets that night.

And last Monday's school election in Charlevoix was no exception.

Would the millage issues pass? What would happen if they didn't? Was a large turnout a good omen or a bad one? Which candidates seemed to have the inside track for the two vacancies at the board?

On election day, you find expert forecasters willing to share their views wherever you turn — the lobby of the post office, the soda fountain at Schroeder's Drug Store or the park bench next to the Charlevoix Lumber Co.

Shopkeepers and clerks never hesitate to set you straight as to what is happening at the polling place and bankers, doctors, lawyers and other professional people are veritable fonts of inside information.

Then there's your own visit to the polls. If you're lucky, there will be a long line and you'll have a chance to chat with friends and neighbors you don't see every day. Of course, you talk about everything under the sun — including the election. You don't come right out and ask them how they're going to vote — but there is plenty of opportunity for guessing and speculating.

Finally comes the magic moment when all the votes are cast and the polls are closed. All that remains is the laborious task of counting votes and declaring winners — and losers, be they candidates or proposals.

Although elections are held throughout the free world, there is something peculiarly American about election day, since it is the very essence of democracy.

Unfortunately, the majority does not always elect the best men or favor the most beneficial proposals, but this is one of the pitfalls of democracy that we have learned to live with through bitter experience.

There is always an opportunity at the next election to correct the mistakes we made at the last one and throw the rascals out.

That is why election day is my favorite "holiday."

If it Fitz

Vroom! That's Grandpa

By JIM FITZGERALD

There's supposed to be a little boy inside every old man, screaming to get out. Lately, a lot of these dumb kids are getting out and buying motorcycles.

The result is grandfathers in crash helmets, completely enveloping both Harley and Davidson in middle-aged spread. When I see an old crock roaring down the road, I am reminded of a refugee fleeing a bombed city in whatever vehicle was available in the emergency. I keep expecting to see his wife trailing along behind, wheeling the family possessions in an old baby carriage.

I know a guy who sells Hondas and one night he took advantage of my bent elbow. He said he'd be over to my house that weekend to give me a ride on a 747 or whatever 2-wheeled monster he was pushing at the moment. I nodded in agreement because he was buying. The next morning, when I realized what I'd done, I jumped out of bed and left town for 3 weeks.

A 60-year-old friend recently told me how he had his Honda going 90 mph on the freeway the day before. His nose was still touching both his ears and his teeth were bent in.

"You own a 1971 Cadillac with air conditioning and a roof. Why would you want to ride a motorcycle?" I asked him. "If God had wanted man to ride motorcycles he would have given them leather fannies."

"It is exciting," my friend explained. "I like the wind in my face and I like the feeling of risk."

"You can get the same feeling by sticking your nose too close to an electric fan," I said.

I have a 50-year-old Honda-friend who likes to hit the road and the trails at 5 o'clock every morning. He hits them often because he enjoys skidding and slipping and bumping on the roughest terrain he can find. You can track him the same way you'd track Hansel and Gretel except his crumbs are skin.

"You could kill yourself," I told him. "Motorcycling is for young men with nothing to live for. You're old enough to smell the joys of retirement but you could blow the whole thing on that bike. It will be the first time I've been a pallbearer for a man dressed in a black leather jacket with 25 zippers."

"The trouble with you is you have no sense of adventure," my friend snorted, kicking sand in my face. We weren't at the beach but this guy has carried his own sand in an autographed Charles Atlas bag for 35 years.

He is right. My idea of adventure is to sit with my family and pretend to read the newspaper while I am actually watching Raquel Welch on TV. Happily, I can enjoy this type of risk despite the certain knowledge that Raquel would pick a motorcyclist over me every time. There is something to be said about being over the hill and I just said it.

There's a little boy inside me, too. But I only let him out to shoot pool. And if he ever suggests that the Honda shop will cash my Social Security check, I will drown him in Geritol.

Onward and Upward, 4-wheeled.

How About Celebrating July 4th in December

"When in the Course of human events" Americans celebrate the Fourth of July, they've never been at a loss for words.

But they may be talking about the wrong date.

Independence Day officially is observed July 4, or the following day if it falls on Sunday. It might almost be June 7, July 2, July 8, Aug. 2, Nov. 30, or Dec. 5.

These and other possible dates lay historical claims to the nation's birthday, the National Geographic Society says.

June 7, 1776, the voice of liberty was first formally heard by the elected representatives of the Continental Congress meeting in Philadelphia. Richard Henry Lee of Virginia put the case:

"Resolved, That these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States........"

On July 2, the Congress voted approval of the Declaration of Independence Thomas Jefferson had been asked to draw up, and John Adams glowingly wrote his wife in Massachusetts:

"The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable Epocha in the History of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty.

"It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parades, with shews, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations from one end of this continent to the other from this time forward forevermore."

On July 4 John Hancock, president of the Congress, signed the authorized version, copies were made and sent to the colonies.

On July 8, the Declaration was first read aloud to the citizenry, a crowd gathered before the State House in Philadelphia.

On July 9, General George Washington, with his troops in New York, wrote Congress:

"Agreeably to the request of Congress I caused the Declaration to be proclaimed before all the army under my immediate command.....the measure seemed to have their most hearty assent......"

Aug. 2, another copy of the Declaration of Independence — the one preserved in the National Archives — was finally signed by all but a few members, or all those present, of the Continental Congress.

By 1782, after the Redcoats' surrender at Yorktown, American envoy Benjamin Franklin in Paris filed a report with a familiar ring today. Franklin wrote that the British were "willing to concede almost anything to get home the 30,000 troops who were doing nothing in America at enormous expense. But there were endless complications and delays."

But on Nov. 30 that year, Franklin, John Jay, John Adams, and the King's man signed a preliminary peace treaty in Paris.

Five days later, on Dec. 5, 1782, King George III announced to Parliament that peace had been proclaimed with the American colonies, adding "I declare them free and independent states."

Lake Michigan Radiation Subject of Research

Six investor-owned electric utilities operating in the four-state area bordering Lake Michigan have announced extension of a joint research project to study the environment of the lake.

The second phase of the study is being conducted by Environmental Research Group, Inc. of Ann Arbor with Dr. Richard Copeland directing and Dr. John C. Ayers, of the University of Michigan, as consultant.

The announcement for Consumers Power Co. was made by Roy A. Wells jr., executive director environmental activities, who said the utilities continue to be vitally concerned about the quality of the lake water and the development of sound scientific decisions regarding its use. Both phases of the study are aimed at expanding on existing knowledge and the impact of various uses. The study is the first of its kind and magnitude conducted on Lake Michigan.

The first phase was begun in 1969 and was completed by the Great Lakes Research Division of the University of Michigan in November 1970. The current phase of the Lake Michigan project is designed to continue the study of the present radiological content of the lake and the existing aquatic life and sediment. Completion is scheduled for mid-1972.

The cooperating utilities involved in the project along with Consumers Power are: American Electric Power Service Corporation (for Indiana & Michigan Electric Company); Consumers Power Company of Michigan; Commonwealth Edison Company of Illinois; Northern Indiana Public Service Company; Wisconsin Electric Power Company; and Wisconsin Public Service Corporation (for Wisconsin Public Service, Wisconsin Power & Light Company and Madison Gas & Electric).

The first report, entitled "Lake Michigan Environmental Survey," includes a review of the inventory of radioactive materials, measurements of the present radioactivity levels and a provisional forecast of levels in the year 1975 for Lake Michigan.

Mrs. John C. Ayers and G. Hoyt Whipple, co-directors of the study, conducted the research under contract with the midwestern utility companies.

The study concluded that man-made radioactivity in Lake Michigan is predominantly from fallout of nuclear weapons testing, much of it in the water environment. But, it was estimated that two-thirds or more of the cesium-137 is in the sediment. Zinc-65 was detected in a few samples of fish, water, and other biological organisms, but at levels which are several orders of magnitude less than the values which might be harmful to man.

Investor-owned electric utility companies throughout the country are now engaged in, or have recently completed, more than 440 environmental studies on water quality issues. Many of the studies are on the effect of water temperature on fish and other aquatic life.

Consumers Power Company sponsored studies are these:

—Consumers Power Company along with two other utilities recently contracted with Willow Run Laboratories of the University of Michigan to conduct two separate aerial surveillance studies of thermal discharges utilizing infrared and multispectral scanning equipment developed by Willow Run Laboratories. These studies have involved areas near major generating stations along the southeastern shore of Lake Michigan, as well as distances far out into Lake Michigan, to study natural phenomena of that lake. In addition, Consumers Power Company has on its own been conducting infrared studies of the heated water discharges from all of its major plants. The results of these studies are compared with biological and other samples gathered from the lakes to determine interactions between physical, chemical and biological characteristics.

—Since 1967, numerous field studies have been conducted at all major generating stations to determine the physical behavior of thermal discharges. It has been demonstrated by repeated tests that "zones of passage" for fish, not influenced by the plants' discharges, have been maintained. It has further been determined that thermal plumes dissipate their excess heat to the atmosphere within relatively small areas because the discharged water floats as a thin layer on the cooler natural waters.

—1968 and 1970 biological and temperature surveys were conducted at Consumers Power's largest operating plant on Lake Michigan, the James H. Campbell plant, near Grand Rapids. The biological work has been done by T.W. Beak Consultants Limited of Toronto, Canada, with cooperation of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. Independent studies have also been conducted by the Bureau of Water Management of the Department of Natural Resources. The results of all of these studies have shown that no significant damage has occurred to the benthic fauna of the plume area at the Campbell site. Benthic fauna are especially good indicators of pollution effects and ecological change and are studied in detail to detect the slightest effects.

—Underway now, are even more comprehensive biological and temperature studies at the Lake Michigan site of the Palisades nuclear plant, 35 miles west of Kalamazoo, which will span a period of more than five years. The project includes a three-phase study adopted following reviews with various state agencies. Included is a preoperational survey, that is in its fourth year, to assess the state of the lake before operation of the nuclear plant. When the plant becomes fully operational in late 1971, the thermal plume will be mapped, and as the third phase, further ecological surveys will determine the thermal influence on the biota.

—A comprehensive thermal and biological survey was also conducted in 1970 at Consumers Power's largest steam-electric station, the J.C. Weadock plant, which is located on Saginaw Bay. It was shown that, even though thermal discharges have existed at the site since the first unit became operational in 1940, the effect of its operation on the aquatic ecology is insignificant. This study was also conducted by consulting biologists, T.W. Beak Limited, and is being reviewed in detail by other consulting ecologists.

Horse With 5 Feet Is Coming to Town

Larry Ford, the one-man promoter of the Charlevoix Baseball Program, has announced plans for a circus to raise funds for his fundless sluggers.

Fisher Brothers' traveling circus will come to Charlevoix for a one-night stand Tuesday, July 6, with shows scheduled for 6 and 8 p.m.

The circus will set up shop in the vacant lot owned by Jesse Penn across Carpenter-ave from the softball diamonds.

Raymond Duke of Ora, Ind., general representative for the circus, was in Charlevoix last week to whip up enthusiasm for the Big Top. Duke is a brother of former Charlevoix County Sheriff Glenn Rose.

Duke said the circus is traveling in northern Michigan with one-day stands in many area communities including Boyne City.

The circus is staged in a tent measuring 85-feet by 180-feet, with grandstands capable of accommodating between 800 and 1,000 customers.

The show includes pony acts, monkey acts, an elephant act, dog acts, a seal act, a tight-rope walker, a trapeze artist and hand-balancing stunts. Razz-a-ma-tazz circus music will be provided by a organ-drum combination.

There also is a sideshow, for what is a circus without a sideshow? The Fisher Brothers' sideshow features a horse with five feet and a cow with five legs, to satisfy the curiosity seekers.

Duke says the circus travels in 14 trucks from town to town and employes a troupe of between 25 and 30.

Because of the size of the circus, many of the performers double at two or more jobs. If you arrive early, you might find a clown driving a tent stake, a trapeze artist watering the elephant or a tight-rope artist setting up the grandstands.

In their publicity handouts, Fisher Brothers bills the circus as "just good family entertainment."

The circus is expressly designed for small-town residents, many of whom have never seen a big-league circus.

Fifty-percent of advance ticket sales will go to the baseball program.

Council

–Received a request by Clayton E. Scott to extend a water line to property he owns on Round Lake at the foot of Prospect-st. Decision was delayed pending receipt of cost date.

–Agreed to sell two Rathburn-Jones diesel engines at the power plant to the Hopco Co. of Grand Rapids for $5,000. Hopco's representative, Larry Haynes, says he has a customer for the engines in New York state.

–Accepted a C & O Railroad offer to purchase 150 feet of Lake Charlevoix frontage north of Depot Beach for $9,600. Hanna says there is a possibility that the federal government will pick up one-half of the cost.

–Learned that the city will receive about $10,700 in state recreation bond money for construction of two tennis courts across Central-ave. from the golf course clubhouse.

--Passed a resolution objecting a probable relocation of the Radar Bomb Scoring squadron presently located at Bay Shore. The possibility of a move has been raised because of the site's close proximity to Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point nuclear plant. At present, planes on scoring runs come no closer than 5½ miles from the plant.

At the conclusion of the meeting, a letter from former City Attorney John Michael reportedly was circulated among council members asking that he be retained as counsel in the Hamilton litigation, relative to ownership of the foot of Alice-st. The suit was decided in favor of the city in Circuit Court, but the Hamilton Boatyard has appealed the decision.

for a Middle School Social Studies position, reduction in telephone services and the quality of paper supplies, the postponement of some maintenance material and equipment replacement.

The board also voted to charge periodicals, library books and audio-visual costs to the Material Center funds budget rather than the general fund budget.

Other areas under consideration but on which no action was taken was reduction of extra-curricular activities which presently costs $16,019.26; reduction of library hours and personnel, restricting athletics to four sports, reduction of hours of secretarial services, elimination of extra trips for school buses, elimination of recreational activities, elimination of vocational education in Petoskey for local students and reductions in several lesser fields.

The board did decide to make no reduction in custodial services and to make some changes in the event a full-time maintenance person was employed. Supt. Robert L. Miller paid tribute to the custodial staff. The board showed its appreciation by making pay adjustments for non-certified personnel and providing insurance benefits.

Other decisions regarding adjustments in the budget will be made at future meetings.

The board is faced with the task of trimming approximately $100,000 from the proposed budget.

Harold Kaufman, business manager, reported to the board that negotiations are at an impasse and that mediation had been requested. The board has been advised that Robert M. Rombouts of Traverse City will serve as mediator and will meet with the board and the teachers negotiating team shortly.

Tuesday, Sept. 7, was set as the opening day of school for the 1971-72 school year.

In making adjustments for non-certified personnel which includes custodial, secretarial and transportation people, it was decided by the board to offer full-time employees a week's vacation after one year of employment and two weeks after three years on the staff and to allow a one-day per month accumulation of sick leave not to exceed a maximum of 60 days.

Two new teachers have been engaged for the coming school year. They are Lola R. Josephik of East Jordan, a 1971 graduate of Central Michigan University as a first grade teacher and Patricia A. Wilson, a 1965 graduate of Western Michigan University, as a crisis room teacher. She received her Master's degree in 1969 and has taught for one year in a resident school for the emotionally disturbed.

Tuition students were discussed at length. Vane H. Smith, high school principal, outlined problems in this area. It was decided to set a deadline for payment of tuition and to require a legal guardian for all tuition students. The administration was charged with presenting the recommendations they desire at a later meeting.

Approval was given a request to supply a bus to transport 4-H students and chaperones to 4-H Exploration Days at Michigan State University June 29 through July 1 at no expense to the school.

The board voted to offer contracts to the following teachers who earlier had been advised that they may not be asked to return because of lack of funds: Sandra Cinnamon and Elizabeth White, first grade; Deborah Jehle, third grade; Karen Hinds and Constance Pointer, fourth grade; Nelson Green, high school government; Antonia King, Physical Education in the Middle School; Mercedes Mathers, elementary and Middle School Art, William Murray, Middle School and High School art, Norman Probert, Physical education in the Middle and High schools; Carol Sonagere, Middle School English and Gary Stutzman, Middle School Music.

In eliminating elementary school music, it was decided that C.A. Odnark would spend some time with the older elementary grades in this program and Gary Stutzman with the Middle School students.

Prior to making some decisions regarding cutbacks in the budget the board studied the choices it had. Board members said repeatedly that they want to keep classroom instruction at the highest level possible and would make reductions in other areas. Al Shindorf, president of the Charlevoix Teachers Association, was asked for recommendations. He suggested that cutbacks be made that would affect the least number of people.

Jerrald Redeker said "We have played a waiting game as long as we can while negotiations go on. We must now make some decisions regarding the budget." It was after this that the board took action relating to the budget.

Scheduled for discussion at the July 12 meeting are bids and replacement and maintenance of equipment.

EARL AND JERRY MUMA have leased the Arco service station at the corner of Bridge-st. and Belvedere-ave. from the Erber Oil Co., with an option to buy. Earl Muma formerly managed the station for Erber. In addition to auto repairs and maintenance, the garage will carry a line of performance parts for racing models. Earl is a veteran of 15 years in the Air Force and presently is a member of a reserve squadron at Selfridge AFB. Jerry is a veteran of four years in the Navy.

Bus Line Will Serve Charlevoix

The first North Star bus is due at the bus station at Norton's Standard Service on State-st. at 3:40 p.m. Thursday.

The company will run buses from Ft. Wayne, Ind., to Sault Ste. Marie, including key points in northern, western and central Michigan.

Artists Love Charlevoix

They Show Works At August Fair

Artists can't think of a more attractive place to display their wares than Charlevoix's carefully manicured East Park, the scene of the city's annual Watercraft Fair for Artists and Craftsmen.

Started in 1958, the fair attracts literally hundreds of artists from throughout the Midwest the second Saturday in August.

And although the sponsors keep their fingers crossed up until the day of the fair, the weatherman has never failed to cooperate.

Fair day usually dawns bright and clear as the artists begin arriving at the park to set up their displays. Each has been given a predesignated display area, resulting in a smooth operation from start to finish.

Art patrons by the thousands flock to the fair from far and wide, most of them returning home with a painting, a wood carving or a piece of sculpture as a remembrance of their visit to Charlevoix.

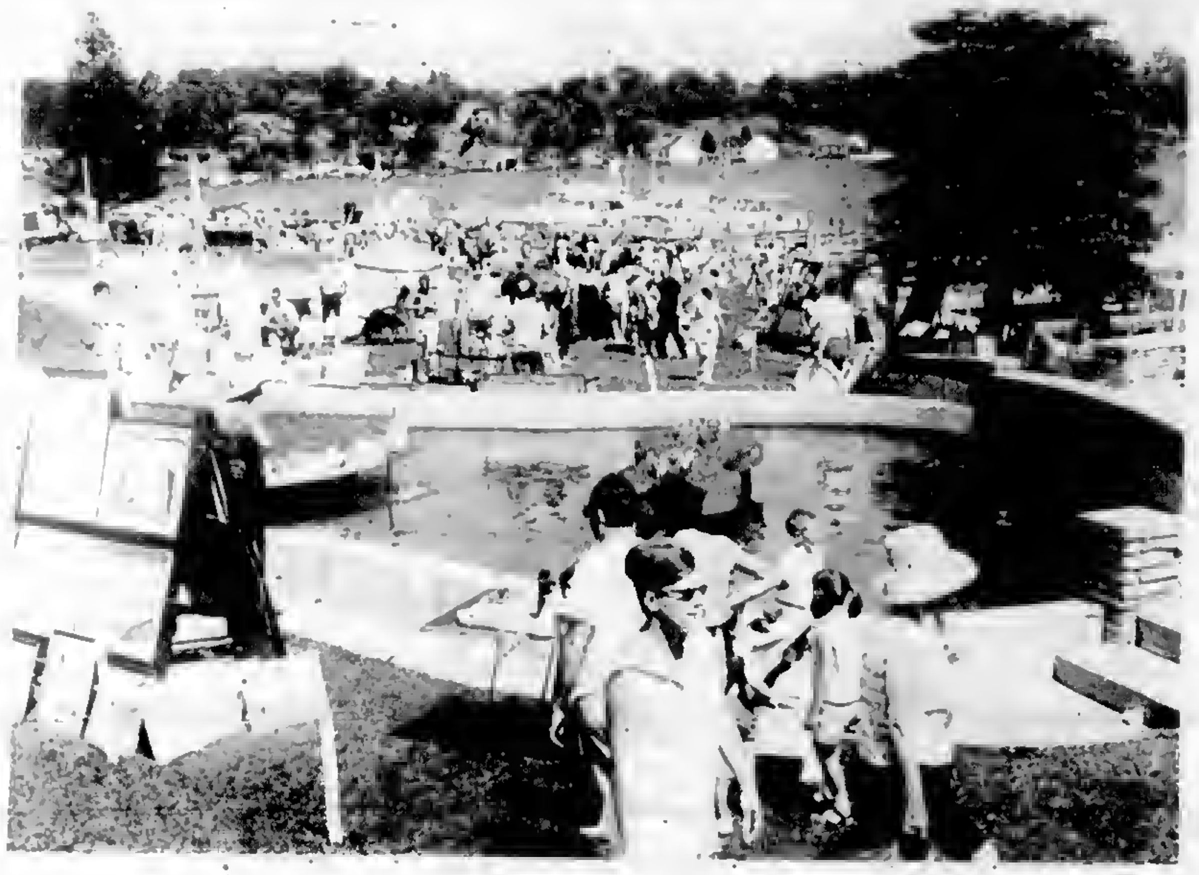
And it is difficult to imagine a more fitting area to display works of art – with the glittering waters of Round Lake and the Charlevoix Yacht Harbor as a backdrop.

In fact, many yachtsmen elect to visit Charlevoix the weekend of the fair, docking their boats only a few feet from the display area.

A feature of the fair every year is the showing of one of the works of art from the collection of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Cummings who maintain a summer home on Lake Charlevoix. The Cummings' have loaned priceless objects d'art to the fair committee for the day, both paintings and pieces of sculpture. The Cummings' exhibit can be found on the park bandstand.

Needless to say, many artists look forward to the fair for monetary reasons, as well as the personal satisfaction they receive from showing their works. Many a young artist has been able to advance his education, thanks to proceeds from the sale of art works at the Charlevoix fair.

The fair also fills a genuine need in northern Michigan where museums and art galleries are few and far between. Local youngsters and adults are given an opportunity to see original works of art first-hand and to chat with their creators.



ARTISTS from throughout the Midwest flock to Charlevoix the second Saturday of August every summer to take part in the Waterfront Fair for Artists and Craftsmen. They show their works in East Park on the sparkling waters of Round Lake.

Don't Miss Venetian Festival

Venetian Weekend has been the high point of the summer season in Charlevoix as long as many old timers can remember.

Scheduled for fourth weekend in July, the Venetian Festival was a natural for Charlevoix, located on a narrow bridge of land between Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix, with Round Lake smack in the middle. This year's festival is scheduled July 23-25.

The festival started out as a parade of lighted boats on Round Lake, but has grown to include one of the biggest and most colorful street parades in northern Michigan, musical programs in East Park and a variety of athletic and sporting events.

In 1971, for the first time, a carnival will be held at the High School grounds in connection with the festival.

But the boat parade, followed by magnificent shower of fireworks over Round Lake, remains the focal point of the celebration.

Dozens of craft take part in the parade, each bedecked with glittering lights. The boaters assemble in Lake Charlevoix Saturday evening, and when darkness falls the parade moves slowly through Upper Pine River Channel into Round Lake following the shoreline past East Park, where most of the spectators congregate.

When the parade ends, the fireworks start, and the summer sky is lighted with a psychedelic display of pyrotechnics which can be seen from miles around.

Throughout the weekend, Bridge-st. is lined with booths set up by local church, civic and fraternal organizations. They sell everything from homemade pie, candied apples and popcorn to complete barbecued chicken dinners.

Most Charlevoix shops are open throughout the festival, giving visitors an opportunity to browse and shop.

One of the highlights of the festival for youngsters is the annual "Doll and Pet Parade." Costumed youngsters, their dolls and pets pass a reviewing stand in East Park and prizes are awarded winners in the various categories.

Concerts are also scheduled in East Park by the City Band and other local musical groups.

How About A 35-Cent Boatride?

For 35 cents you can take your family and yourself for a boat ride.

The Ironton Ferry, operated by Charlevoix County, operates daily during most of the year, from the village of Ironton across the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix to the high, rolling peninsula which separates the South Arm from the rest of the lake.

Ironton is located seven miles southeast of Charlevoix on M-66.

Others find it a convenient and scenic route from Charlevoix to Whiting Park, Advance and Boyne City.

The trip takes about five minutes, so you seldom have to wait long for the ferry to arrive.

Woods, Waters, Hills Lure Visitors to Charlevoix Co.

Blessed with hills, an abundance of fresh water and magnificent stands of hardwoods and evergreens, Charlevoix County has been a vacation mecca for residents throughout the Midwest for more than 70 years.

In fact, the lumber barons were still at work when the first resort families moved into the area, reaching Charlevoix by water from Detroit and Chicago or overland by rail.

They often came in mid-June and stayed until the first nippy days of September.

EASY TO REACH

Today, most visitors arrive by automobile, zooming north from the metropolitan areas in less than half a day. U.S. 131 and U.S. 31 pass through the county and I-75 runs only a few miles east of the county line.

Charlevoix County is located 270 miles northwest of Detroit, 350 miles northeast of Chicago, 54 miles southwest of Mackinaw City and 181 miles north of Grand Rapids.

The western boundary of the county is washed by the waters of Lake Michigan, and the eastern boundary ends in the rugged highlands that have become famous for their challenging ski runs. The eastern townships also are the home of Michigan's elk herd, reintroduced recently after an absence of many years.

FRENCH ORIGIN

Historically, Charlevoix County was organized in 1869 and was named for the Jesuit Missionary, Pierre de Charlevoix, one of the first French explorers to visit and write about northern Michigan.

The eastern half of the county is dominated by Lake Charlevoix, a 13-mile-long body of water with the city of Charlevoix at its western extremity and Boyne City at the eastern end. The city of East Jordan lies at the end of the lake's picturesque South Arm, a narrow body of water with many beautiful summer homes along its shores.

Other lake Charlevoix communities include Ironton, a tiny hillside village which is one of the major ports of the area. From Ironton, ferry service is offered across the South Arm to the high, rolling peninsula that separates the South Arm from the rest of Lake Charlevoix.

HEMINGWAY COUNTRY

Another community on the lake is Hortons' Bay, a village made famous by the late Ernest Hemingway, whose family maintained a summer home on nearby Walloon Lake. The front porch of the general store in Horton Bay was the scene of one of Hemingway's first short stories, published in his high school newspaper.

Horton Bay was also the scene of Hemingway's famous short story "Up in Michigan" and it was at a church in Horton Bay that Hemingway claimed his first bride, Hadley Richardson.

Across Lake Charlevoix from Horton Bay is the village of Advance, where one of the county's prime trout streams, Porter Creek, empties into the lake. Porter Creek also has become known for its smelt and coho salmon runs.

ON THE WATER

The City of Charlevoix is located between Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix, which are connected by Pine River Channel and Round Lake.

Often likened to Lake Placid in New York state, Round Lake rests like an azure gem in the center of the city, the bustling center of Charlevoix's boating activities.

Years ago, the City Council made plans to acquire as much property as possible on the east side of Bridge-st. fronting Round Lake. Today, the city owns almost a full block of land in the downtown section — known as East Park — as well as other parcels housing the Chamber of Commerce office and the city dock facilities.

PANORAMIC VIEW

Because of the open areas, Round Lake is visible from most of the downtown section, giving visitors a panoramic view of fishing tugs, pleasure cruisers, marinas, forested shoreline and spacious year-'round homes that line the high bluffs on the north and south.

To the west, Round Lake opens into Lake Charlevoix via Upper Pine River Channel. The picturesque Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad bridge closes twice a day to allow north and south-bound trains to pass.

During July and August, swimming is perhaps the most popular outdoor sport in Charlevoix County. Dozens of fine swimming areas are located throughout the county, with three supervised beaches in the city of Charlevoix alone.

Two of them are located on Lake Charlevoix at the C & O depot — called Depot Beach — and at the foot of Stover-rd. A third beach is located on the Lake Michigan shore just south of the pierheads. The Lake Michigan beach is becoming popular with surfers, particularly in late August when high winds churn the big lake.

CAMPGROUNDS

In addition, there are many fine public and private camping areas in the county; including Young State Park on the Boyne City-rd. between Charlevoix and Boyne City, Whiting Park, operated by the county on the south shore of Lake Charlevoix near Advance, and Bells Bay state campground on the Lake Michigan shore four miles south of Charlevoix.

Young State Park offers modern sanitary and shower facilities, with convenient electrical outlets for campers. Visitors to Whiting Park and Bells Bay "rough it."

Charlevoix is the home of two of the Midwest's oldest and most elegant summer resorts — the Belvedere Club and the Chicago Club. Today, tourists from every walk of life today are able to find comfortable accommodations to suit their needs in the multitude of resort motels that have sprung up around the city.

SKI RESORTS

In recent years, Charlevoix has become a four-season playground, thanks to the burgeoning ski resort industry.

Within easy driving distance of the city are Boyne Mountain, Thunder Mountain and Walloon Hills, all located in the eastern part of the county; Boyne Highlands and Nub's Nob near Harbor Springs; and Schuss Mountain and Shanty Creek, in Antrim County to the south.

The ski resorts offer a wide variety of slopes, from bunny hills for the novice to challenging, expert runs for the experienced skier.

The City of Charlevoix maintains its own Mt. McSauba ski area just north of the city on the Lake Michigan shore. Unlike most of the big inland resorts, Mt. McSauba offers night skiing during most of the winter.

EXCELLENT FISHING

In the spring, Charlevoix County waters are known for their excellent catches of rainbow, speckled, steelhead and lake trout. Spring is also the time when mushroom hunters comb area woodlands for succulent black morels.

In the fall, Charlevoix County's forests become a psychedelic tableau of colors, attracting thousands of tourists. In October, when the colors are at their best, the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce sponsors a "color cruise" aboard the motor ship Beaver Islander, which travels to Boyne City and back. The 1971 cruise is Sunday, Oct. 10.

Summer, fall, winter and spring, there is something for everyone in beautiful Charlevoix County.

SAILBOATS are as popular as power craft in Charlevoix. These boats tied up at the Charlevoix Yacht Harbor, maintained by the city.

Boyne Is 4-Season Resort

Ski Resorts Add Other Activities

Boyne Country has licked the problem of the after ski season let down. Now, visitors from all over the country flock to the famous ski mecca of the north in the summer, spring and fall as well as winter.

As soon as spring is in sight and the last lift shuts down, workers at Boyne begin manicuring and grooming the greens and fairways at both Boyne Mountain, located in Boyne Falls just off U.S. -131, and Boyne Highland, outside of Harbor Springs.

All the preparations have paid off for as Robert Trent, designer of the Highlands course says, "It will rank as one of the 10 outstanding golf courses in the United States."

Boyne, famous for the emphasis placed on planned programs for children such as special ski classes, movies, sleigh rides, and skating, has expanded this technique for use in the other seasons. The summer of 1970 Boyne held its third National Golf Academy for youngsters at the Boyne Mountain Lodge.

The golf academy features a complete golf program of instruction in one and two week sessions from July 11 to July 25. Boys between the ages of 11 and 16 are assigned in groups of 10 to each golf instructor and progress from the Boyne driving range and nine hole practice courses to the new championship courses at Boyne Mountain and the Highlands.

Students attending the academy are housed in regular lodge rooms with private baths and are welcome to use all the facilities. Other activities include boating, swimming, water skiing, tennis and baseball.

Similar to the golf program is the air academy for both boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 16. This year the program was held July 11 through 25 at Boyne Mountain Lodge.

Boyne Country Flight Director, Mary Creason and a staff of professional flight instructors plus recreational counselors coordinate the activities.

The students will progress from 20 hours of ground school to four hours of dual flying each week. All flight time will be credited towards a private license.

Not to forget the sport which was responsible for the world-wide fame Everett Kircher's Boyne Country has achieved, skiing still ranks tops. Both recreational and expert skiers can find slopes to their satisfaction. March 13 saw over 50 top Mid-American recreational skiers compete in the regional final NASTAR competition. NASTAR is the National Standard Ski Race, a Ski magazine program in which a skier establishes a handicap and compares his ability against other skiers who enter.

ABC's Wide World of Sports" televised the March 20 Kircher Cup Races in which such famed skiers as Stein Eriksen, Billy Kidd, and Boyne Country ski school director Othmar Schneider participated.

Beautiful Beaver Beckons

'Emerald Isle' Only Two Hours Away

Beaver Island — America's fabled "Emerald Isle" — is located 32 miles northwest of Charlevoix in Lake Michigan.

Regular boat service between the island and Charlevoix is provided from mid-April until late December by the Beaver Island Boat Co. The motor ship Beaver Islander makes regular runs between Charlevoix and St. James, the only community on the island.

During the height of the tourist season, the ship makes two runs each day.

The island also may be reached by plane or seaworthy pleasure craft. A beautiful yacht harbor welcomes boaters near "downtown" St. James and the Beaver Island airport offers two runways, one of them 3,500 feet long.

Fourteen miles long and six miles wide, Beaver Island has escaped the frantic commercialism that is characteristic of many island resorts. However, there are plenty of motels, lodges, hotels and rental cottages for overnight guests and island restaurants serve delicious meals to hungry travelers.

There also are two general stores on the island, three bars and other assorted commercial establishments, including marine service.

Some visitors feel that a trip to the island is like turning back the clock a generation or more.

Once the Beaver Islander leaves the Charlevoix pierheads, the hectic pace of mainland life slackens and at the end of the two hour and 15-minute boatride, the visitor is sufficiently relaxed to enjoy the serenity of the island to the fullest.

One early Beaver Island visitor, a former Russian nobleman by the name of "Dr." Fyodor Protar, liked the island so well on his first visit that he returned to Chicago, sold his business and returned to the island to live. He never left.

The town of St. James is located on a fishhook of land at the north end of the island. The fishhook provides a beautiful natural harbor which is called Paradise Bay. Standing sentinel at the entrance to the harbor is a U.S. Coast Guard lighthouse and station.

Although the visitor can find many points of interest within easy walking distance of the yacht harbor, many tourists elect to take their cars, bicycles or motorcycles along to explore the island's 75 miles of roads, most of them narrow graveled byways that meander beneath gigantic hemlocks and birches or through fields of aromatic juniper. Vehicles of all types also may be rented on the island.

Like many islands, Beaver Island has a long and fascinating history.

The first residents apparently were "mound builders" whose origin and fate has puzzled archeologists for years. However their "mounds", apparently used for worship or burial, may still be seen on the south end of the island.

Later the island was inhabited by Chippewa and Ottawa Indians, many of whom still make their home in

Some Folks Arrive by Air

People arrive in Charlevoix via all types of transportation--on foot, by car or bus or even bike, and of course by boat.

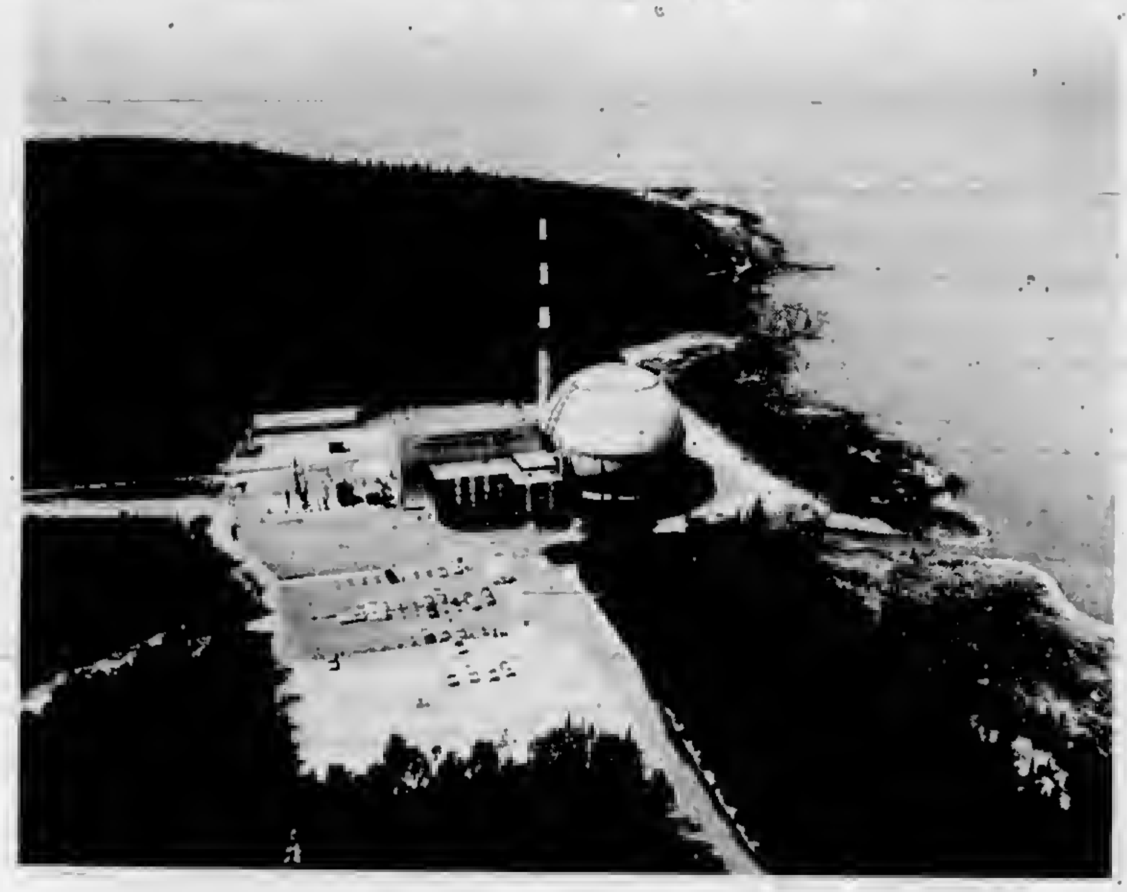
Some of Charlevoix's visitors even travel by plane and land at the city's modern airport located just south of the business district on US-31.

The airport boasts a terminal that was dedicated only five years ago during the first fly-in held on Sept. 25, 1966. Runways are lighted and remain so all night for late arrivals as does the radio beacon or "homer."

Flights are offered to both Beaver and Mackinac Islands at nominal fees. A flight to Beaver Island is eight dollars for each adult. Other services include charter flights, air ambulance, plane rental, and student instruction, according to Joe McPhillips, airport manager.

Open daily, the airport has three runways, including a hard surfaced-strip 3,500 feet in length that runs east and west. Also two diagonals that are 2,400 feet long each running northeast-southwest and northwest-southeast. The two diagonals are sod run-ways.

Five T-hangers are located at the airport site. Tie-down fee is one dollar per night for transient aircraft although weekly and monthly rates are available.



VISITORS are welcome year-'round at Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point Nuclear Plant, five miles north of Charlevoix on U.S.-31. The Environmental Center is open from 8 until 5 p.m. seven days a week during the summer. Winter hours are 8 until 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. Constructed in 1961, the plant uses heat from uranium fuel packs to make steam, which in turn operates a giant turbine to create electricity. Operations of the nuclear plant are demonstrated at the Environmental Center by means of cutaway displays and motion pictures.

'Emerald Isle' Only Two Hours Away

St. James.

In the late 1840's, a band of Mormons led by James Jesse Strang moved to the island from Voree, Wisc., in order to practice their religion without the censure of Gentile neighbors.

Strang, a rural New York lawyer, had himself crowned "King of the Earth," built a tabernacle that seated more than 2,000 worshipers and laid out the village of St. James, named after himself.

Although Strang was a member of the Michigan Legislature and served with distinction, he was a high-handed tyrant at home. He outlawed the use of tea, tobacco and liquor among his people, instructed the women to wear bloomers instead of long skirts and legalized plural marriages.

The Irish mainlanders were outraged at the edicts of the island dictator and in time even his own followers became disgruntled.

On June 16, 1856, "King" Strang was shot by two members of his own colony and was removed to Voree, Wisc., for medical treatment. It was there he died two weeks later.

With Strang out of the way, the Irish moved in, bodily evicting the Mormons from the farms and businesses and taking up residence. Many descendants of the first Irish influx still inhabit the island today and no small number retain a trace of the Irish brogue that their forebears brought with them to America.

During the Strang era and for many years after, the island was one of the busiest spots in northern Michigan. Located close to the shipping lanes, the island was a convenient place for steamers to take on fresh supplies of cordwood for fuel.

The island also is located in the heart of one of North America's finest fishing grounds — and for years the lake trout and whitefish from the Beavers was shipped throughout the Midwest.

Although fishing industry is not what it once was, a few commercial fishermen still operate out of St. James, bringing in excellent catches of whitefish.

The main industry today is tourism. Many vacationers have found on Beaver Island the peace and solitude that have all but vanished from other holiday resorts. Attractive summer cottages have sprung up on the Lake Michigan shore as well as on some of the island's seven inland lakes.

The 54-square mile island still teems with wildlife, including deer, grouse, rabbits, squirrels, ducks and geese.

Sport fishing around the Beaver Island group is generally excellent and panfish are plentiful in some of the inland lakes. Bass and pike fishing in the waters around Garden Island, which lies directly north of Beaver Island, attracts many fishermen by motor launch from St. James.

Pollen Count

Charlevoix has long been considered a mecca for hay fever sufferers.

Because of the area's low pollen count, many southern Michigan residents arrange to spend their vacations in the city in August and September when pollen counts soar elsewhere in the state.

CROWDS turn out at the Beaver Island dock to welcome passengers arriving from Charlevoix.

'Hey, Look!

The Bridge Is Going Up!

"Hey, look! The bridge is going up!"

These words are repeated dozens of times each day by visitors to Charlevoix when they see traffic stop on Bridge-st. and the heavy steel arms of the bascule bridge over Pine River Channel raise majestically skyward, Charlevoix's traditional salute to mariners.

Maintained by the State Highway Department, the bridge is manned 24 hours a day, 12 months a year by a team of regular bridge tenders and their relief operators.

When the bridge is in place, traffic flows smoothly on U.S. 31 through the heart of Charlevoix.

But when the Bridge goes up, even natives usually stop their normal pursuits for a look at what kind of vessel is navigating Pine River Channel. If the boat requires 12 feet of clearance or more (depending on water levels), the bridge must open to allow it to pass.

Of course, small vessels with collapsible antennas are expected to lower them so that traffic on U.S. 31 is not held up unnecessarily.

Because of auto traffic congestion during the summer months, the bridge opens only every half-hour, on the half-hour, for pleasure craft. The bridge opens for commercial craft whenever they arrive.

During the off-season, the bridge will open at any hour for all kinds of vessels.

Needless to say, when the deep-freeze sets in January and February, there is very little traffic on Pine River Channel, aside from the Coast Guard cutter Sundew which must leave port occasionally on an ice-breaking mission.

When a boater wants the bridge to open, he simply sounds two blasts, one long and one short, on his whistle. The bridge tender answers the craft with a similar signal from the bridge and sets in motion the gigantic mechanism which lifts the twin portals to let her pass.

The first step is the turning on of warning lights and bells at the highway approaches. Gates are dropped across the highway and the sidewalks and a road barrier rises as if by magic from the pavement.

When this is done, the tender manipulates levers which activate machinery under the street surface which move weights to raise the bridge.

On the average, it takes about three minutes to raise and lower the bridge to let a boat pass. However the time can vary, depending on the speed of the vessel or how many boats wish to pass through at one time.

On rare occasions the bridge has remained open 20 minutes or longer to allow 500-foot freighters time to navigate the narrow channel.

After a vessel passes, the same mechanism is set in operation by the bridge tender to lower the spans and life returns to normal on Bridge-st. — which, incidentally, was named after one of Charlevoix's most exciting downtown attractions.

CHARLEVOIX'S bascule bridge which carries U.S. 31 traffic over Pine River Channel is one of the busiest places in town once summer arrives.

City 'Home Port' for Guard

GG Station, Sundew Part of Community

COAST GUARD

THE COAST GUARD cutter Sundew is berthed at Charlevoix year-round. The ship doubles as a buoy tender and ice breaker.

With water on all sides, the Coast Guard is an integral part of life in Charlevoix. – from all-important search and rescue missions during the sailing season to ice-breaking duties when winter sets in.

Pleasure boaters, commercial fishermen and tho men who handle the gigantic lake freighters "feel better" knowing that the Coast Guard stands ready to assist in emergencies.

The 180-foot Coast Guard Cutter Sundew is stationed in Charlevoix and can be found moored at the city dock when she isn't attending to business elsewhere in northern Lakes Michigan or Huron.

The cutter is responsible for placing and maintaining buoys which mark the shipping lanes in the northern lakes. Most of the buoys are brought into port in late November for refurbishing and storage over the winter.

Early in the spring they are returned to their accustomed places.

During the winter, the Sundew is often called to escort tankers and other vessels having trouble negotiating the heavy ice.

In late winter and early spring, the Sundew normally spends several weeks in the Straits of Mackinac and the St. Marys River at Sault Ste. Marie keeping the shipping lanes free of ice for commercial vessles.

The cutter has a crew of 45 men and five officers. The skipper is Lt. Cmdr. Berl Williams.

The Charlevoix Coast Guard Station is located on Upper Pine River Channel and Lake Charlevoix, just opposite the C&O Railroad bridge.

The station has a complement of 23 men under the command of Chief Boatswains Mate Bobby Rose. Chief missions of the station are search and rescue operations and maintenance of aids to navigation.

During the spring, summer and fall, a contingent of men from the station lives at the Coast Guard station on Beaver Island, protecting the lives and property of sailors who encounter trouble on the big lake. Others are assigned to light houses in the northern lakes.

The station has three craft assigned to it, boats measuring 30, 40 and 44 feet.

The largest craft is used to take supplies and relieve personnel stationed on lighthouses at Gray's Reef, White Shoal and Lansing Shoal in northern Lake Michigan.

Charlevoix also has a Coast Guard Auxiliary to which many local people, both men and women, belong.

Lake Tempers Charlevoix's Climate

Although Charlevoix is located north of the 45th parallel, the city has an average year-round temperature of 45 degrees.

The city is considerably warmer than inland points during the winter because of the moderating influence of Lake Michigan.

By the same token, the lake keeps Charlevoixans cooler than their inland neighbors in summer.

Summer temperatures average 68.2 degrees, based on records of the past 25 years.

Indian Heritage Still Lives

Greensky Hill Site Of Tribal Meetings

Charlevoix's Indian heritage still lives at the Greensky Hill Indian Methodist Church, located on Old U.S. 31 about four miles northeast of the city.

Made of hand-hewn logs, the church is situated on a high bluff above Susan Lake at a site that has been an Indian tribal meeting ground for centuries.

The church was completed in 1860 and looks today much as it did more than a century ago.

Services are conducted at the church during the summer at 9:30 a.m. by the Rev. Elmer Faust, pastor of Charlevoix's First Methodist Church.

The mission was built by Peter Greensky, an Indian brave who received his Christian training at the Methodist settlement at Bay Mills in the Upper Peninsula.

In 1838, Greensky moved to the Lower Peninsula to take part in a Protestant movement then underway in the Grand Traverse Bay area.

Greensky later became disenchanted with the mission and decided to establish a church of his own where he and his followers could worship as they saw fit.

Twenty-seven families joined him on the trek north, traveling the length of Grand Bay to the site of the present city of Charlevoix. Nearby they came upon the ring of ancient Council trees planted by their ancesters and decided to build their church nearby.

The Council trees still stand today. They are characterized by a deep outward bend in the lower branches, a symbol of peace among Indian tribes in the area. The branches were forced into their unusual shape by tying them with leather thongs when the trees were saplings.

In the 1960's a second ring of Council trees was planted closer to the church by descendants of the original Indian tribes who lived in the area.

The first church was a rude shelter of boughs covered with cedar bark. In 1850, work was started on the present church.

Although the logs were cut from the surrounding woods, windows and hardware had to be transported from Traverse City in canoes and then carried overland two miles from the Lake Charlevoix shore to the hilltop where the church stands.

The building measures 26 by 32 feet and has eight windows. The logs are all notched at the ends for a snug fit and the chinks have been filled with a mixture of wood and mud.

The tiny church has had its ups and downs over the years,

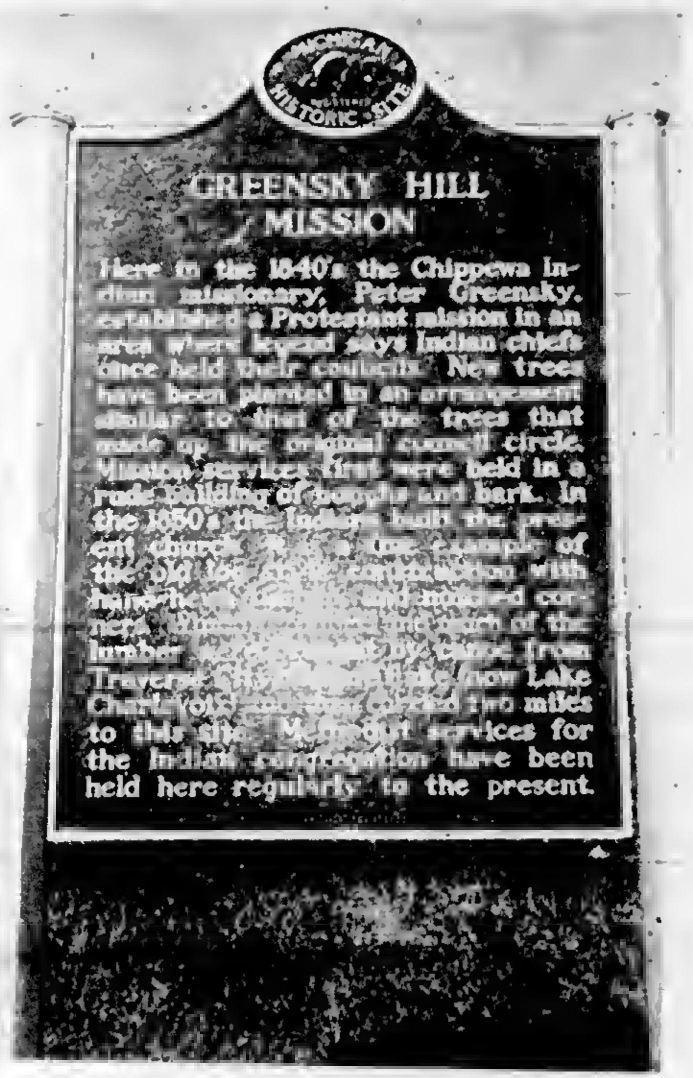
THE GREENSKY Hill Church appears today much as it did more than a century ago when it was built.



MICHIGAN HISTORIC SITE
GREENSKY HILL MISSION
Here in the 1840's the Chippewa Indian missionary, Peter Greensky, established a Protestant mission in an area where legend says Indian chiefs once held their councils. New trees have been planted in an arrangement similar to that of the trees that made up the original council circle. Mission services first were held in a rude building of boughs and bark. In the 1850's the Indians built the present church to this site. Methodist services for the Indian congregation have been held here regularly to the present.

THIS MARKER has been erected at Greensky Hill Indian Church commemorating the missionary work of Peter Greensky.

as have most churches. Several years ago the parcel of land containing the famous trees was sold to an adjoining farmer. However the church has been able to purchase back some of the lost property, despite of a membership of less than 25.

Members also have built a meeting house on the grounds where church socials and banquets are held.

In 1966, church members were able to replace the old wood-burning stove on the chapel with an oil space heater.

Near the church is the Greensky Hill Indian Cemetery, overlooking Susan Lake, named for the wife of Peter Greensky. The graves all face East, as was the Indian custom, and several are marked with the rude wooden fences of an earlier day.

Every summer the church hosts a camp meeting attended by Indians from miles around. The 1971 meeting is scheduled from July 28 to Aug. 1 at Greensky Hill. Visitors are welcome.

WHEN CHILL winds blow and the snow lies deep, the Mt. McSauba Ski Area, maintained by the city, is one of the most popular places in town.

Fr. Charlevoix First 'Tourist'

Tourists with a smattering of high school French under their belts are to be excused if they attempt to pronounce the name Charlevoix as the French would – Shar-luh-vwa.

In fact, they are closer to the original pronunciation of the word than the Anglicized version which makes the last syllable rhyme with "boy."

The city was named after one of the early explorers of the area, Fr. Pierre Francis Xavier de Charlevoix, a Jesuit priest who was born in France in 1682 during the reign of Louis XIV.

Fr. Charlevoix entered the Society of Jesus at the age of 16 and when he was 23 was sent to Quebec, Canada, by his superiors. He taught school in Quebec for 'four years before returning to France in 1709 for another four-year stint with theology books in Paris.

As one of the few Europeans who has been to the New World, Fr. Charlevoix was one of the first historians to make Canada known 'to his fellow countrymen.

While in France, he spent a year researching England's claims to the Nova Scotia peninsula and came to the conclusion that England had never exceeded its territorial rights.

It was through enforcement of these rights by the English that the French inhabitants of Acadia were evicted from their homes, the details of which were recounted years later by William Wadsworth Longfellow in his poem "Evangeline."

As a result of his research, Fr. Charlevoix was ordered by the king of France to undertake a double mission in the New World. He was to determine the exact extend of English possessions in North America and to find a northern route from settlements near the eastern seaboard to the Pacific Ocean.

Fr. Charlevoix returned to Canada and on May 1, 1721, set out from Montreal with two large canoes, eight attendants and a companion. The expedition traveled down the St. Lawrence River and crossed Lakes Ontario and Erie, arriving at Fort Ponchartrain at Detroit on June 8.

After a 10 day rest, the party left for Mackinac Island and Fort Michilimackinac, arriving on June 28.

Fr. Charlevoix reportedly was enchanted by the beauty of the area and was anxious to push west. But after consulting with Indians at Mackinaw, Green Bay, Wisc., and Beaver Island, he determined that the best route west would be via Lake Superior.

He decided that such a trip in a frail canoe would be extremely perilous, so instead he headed down the length of Lake Michigan, portaged to the Mississippi River, continued south to the Gulf of Mexico and returned to France.

Although it is doubtful that Fr. Charlevoix ever set foot in what is now known as Charlevoix - the - Beautiful, residents think it is fitting that the community was named after one of North America's first bonafide "tourists."

Many Visitors Enjoy Petoskey Stone Hunting

A favorite pasttime among many Charlevoix visitors, young and old alike, is hunting for Petoskey stones along the Lake Michigan shore.

Adopted as the state stone of Michigan, Petoskey stones actually are petrified colony corals which lived in a tropical sea which once covered northern Michigan.

The stones are characterized by a honeycomb pattern formed from deposits left by polyps which thrived in the tepid waters of that ancient ocean.

Some stones have been worn smooth through wave action and contact - with abrasive sand beaches. Others have indentations in the center of each of the pentagonal markings. Still others have a knobby appearance.

The stones are found in abundance in the Charlevoix area. The best time to look for them is during or just after a period of high winds while the shore stones are still wet.

Each successive blow sends a new batch of the elusive stones ashore, and wet stones are easier to identify than dry ones.

Sometimes a rather ordinary appearing stone will turn out to be a true Petoskey stone after it immersed in water or merely dampened with the fingertip.

Unlike most stones, Petoskey stones don't stand up well under rough handling.

If the stones are to be used for jewelry or other ornamentation, hand polishing is recommended over tumbling, since tumbling sometimes loosens the "eyes."

Small polished stones are used in earrings, tie-clips, brooches and other jewelry. Larger stones make attractive paper weights or door stops.

Some collectors display their favorite Petoskey stones as decorative pieces on mantels and what-nots.

JOHN GRACE of St. Clair Shores, winner of the 60th annual Michigan Amateur Golf Tournament at the Belvedere Golf Course Saturday, gets a victory smooch from his wife, Ann. The Graces have been married only three weeks and looked on their visit to Charlevoix as "sort of a honeymoon."

ON HONEYMOON

Texan John Grace Wins 60th State Golf Tourney

A 23-year-old Texas native on his honeymoon won the 60th annual Michigan Amateur Golf Championship at the Belvedere Golf Course Saturday afternoon.

The winner was John Grace of St. Clair Shores who beat Randy Erskine of Battle Creek 4 to 2.

The victory was particularly sweet for Grace who was runner up in the 1967 tournament, losing to University of Michigan Coach Bill Newcomb in the finals. In 1968, he made the quarter finals, losing to Pete Green in the 3rd round.

WINNER JOHN Grace hugs long-sought trophy that will bear his name.

Saturday's outcome remained in question until the 11th hole, when Grace moved up on Erskine and continued to out-play Erskine until he was declared winner on the 16th hole.

Erskine took several early leads on the first nine, but Grace always managed to even the tally on the next hole.

Grace's strong suit was his consistency, particularly in putting. Erskine often gained more yardage on his long shots, but tensed up when he neared the green.

Twice, once on the 8th hole and again on the 14th hole, Erskine was fouled by the pine. On both occasions, Erskine was shooting onto the green from bad terrain and asked to have the flag remain in the hole. And on both occasions, the ball hit the pin and bounded away.

A native of Ft. Worth, Texas, Grace attended the University of Houston, receiving a bachelor of business administration degree in finance.

He presently works as a real estate agent for R.G. Edgar and Associates in Grosse Pointe.

He admits to playing no, little amount of golf, including what he calls "customer golf."

One of Grace's most ardent supporters at the Belvedere Saturday was his wife, Ann, whom he married three weeks ago.

He said his trip to Charlevoix was "sort of a honeymoon."

Grace says the Belvedere Course "is made for my game. The fairways are long and straight and the greens are not big, which is ideal for my chipping and putting."

Louis Rockwell, president of the Golf Association of Michigan, and his co-chairman who ran the five-day tournament also had high praise for the Belvedere Golf Course and its maintenance crews.

Assisting Rockwell at the trophy presentation ceremony after the game were co-chairman L.J. (Bud) Beddell, Keith Bliss and Jim Standish – all of whom are familiar faces around the Belvedere at tournament time.

Loser Erskine took the defeat in stride.

"I'll see you next year," he grinned after accepting a handsome wall clock as the consolation prize.

Window Box Is New Feature In Courier

Every week a question will appear and readers are invited to call 547-6558 or drop a post card in the mail to the Courier P.O. Box 117 and to offer their opinion on issues of the day.

This week's question:

The Michigan legislature is considering a bill which would lower the age of legal adulthood to 18 for every aspect except drinking of alcoholic beverages. Do you think drinking should be included? Vote "yes" or "no". Your comments also will be appreciated.

Islanders Protest Runway

The Peaine Township Board on Beaver Island has filed a complaint with the Department of Natural Resources in Lansing, asking that the state retain title to property it owns in the Cable Bay area.

The board acted after Donald J. Nelson reportedly bulldozed a portion of state land in an effort to build an airport near the Cable Bay shore.

Rogers Carlisle, a resident of the island sent the Courier a map indicating that Nelson's runway extends more than 300 feet onto state property.

The township resolution reads in full:

"The Peaine Township Board respectfully requests that the State of Michigan retain all of the property they own in Gov. lot No. 3 T37N R10W in order that Peaine Twp. may maintain a bathing beach there for public use as it is the only sand beach bathing site open to the public in the south 40 percent of the Island. Respectfully yours,—F.P. Schnaudigel, supervisor; Gladys Schnaudigel, clerk; Rose Connaghan, treasurer; Betty Wilke, trustee; and Eileen Martin, trustee."

Lake Trout Take Breather After Record Catches

Thanks to last Thursday's east wind, lake trout virtually stopped biting over the weekend, but Myrl Keller, manager of the Great Lakes Fisheries Station on Palmer-st., expects the big lunkers to come back strong about mid-week.

Keller says the wind moved warm shore water out into Lake Michigan, replacing it with colder water from the lake depths.

Although the trout prefer cooler water, the shift also brought in schools of alewives which the trout apparently have been going after instead of the artificial lures of fishermen.

However, he says ups and downs are common during the season and that the big trout should be biting again within a couple of days.

Before the east wind, trout were being caught in record numbers off Charlevoix between North and South points.

"It was easy for a fellow to fill his limit of five trout in half a day's fishing," Keller reports.

He expects the same conditions to prevail later this week.

In spite of skimpy catches over the weekend, record numbers of fishermen took to the big lake, with as many as 50 boats visible from the Charlevoix pierheads at one time.

Keller says fishermen are having success trolling with thin spoons as lures.

He added that most of the fish being taken were planted in 1966, 1967, and 1968. Fish planted in the various years are identified by fins clipped at the hatchery. A different combination of fins is clipped before each planting.

Although some fishermen returned home with empty creels over the weekend, others had outstanding success, Keller says.

Gerald Goss reportedly caught a 14-pounder off the Charlevoix pump house on Saturday.

Keller says the fish range from four pounds up, with a good many in the seven and eight pound bracket.

He adds that the lakers will be moving into deeper water as the water temperature rises. He anticipates the best fishing this weekend will be at depths of from 50 to 80 feet.

The water temperature over the weekend at Fisherman's Island ranged from 54 degrees on the surface to 42 degrees at a depth of 40 feet.

Blistering Heat Wave Wilts City

Charlevoix, which sometimes goes through an entire summer without a bonafide heat wave, ran head-long into a humdinger on Monday.

By 10 a.m. the thermometer at the County Bank stood at 90 degrees and more-of-same was expected Tuesday and Wednesday, despite a forecast of scattered showers.

The Weather Service said the high temperatures were the result of a large warm air mass off the Gulf of Mexico, coupled with a high pressure system in the southeastern states.

But Charlevoixans are not suffering alone.

In Detroit Sunday the temperature climbed to 99 degrees, breaking a 38-year-old record, and Jackson, Battle Creek, Saginaw and Traverse City each recorded temperatures of 100 degrees.

The steamy weather should break Thursday with temperatures expected to be in the 70-degree range.

Kay Maurer Dies In 1-Car Accident

MR. AND MRS. DAVID HEINTZ

Sandra L. Maxfield, David Heintz Wed

As 200 guests looked on Sandra Louise Maxfield and David John Heintz exchanged wedding vows Saturday, June 19 in a double ring evening ceremony at the United Methodist church in Charlevoix, the Rev. Elmer J. Faust officiating.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. Adrian F. Werner of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Paul T. Heintz of Petoskey.

Escorted to an altar adorned with white gladiolas and carnations with red bows, by her brother, William Maxfield of Bay City, the bride wore a floor length gown of dacron organza fashioned in empire style with high mandarin collar and long full lantern sleeves. The entire bodice was of stardust applique venise lace with dropped shoulder. The softly gathered skirt had a single band of the same lace with small appliques scattered about the front of the gown. Her sheer train of organza had matching appliques and was attached at the back of the waist, falling gracefully into a chapel length.

Her headpiece was a bouffant veil of silk illusion attached to a crown of venise lace matching the gown.

Organist was Tom Mansen of Charlevoix who accompanied Mrs. Lee Moerland, soloist, also from Charlevoix.

Matron of honor was Mrs. John Ogle, the former Sharri Darby, of LaGrange, Ill. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Bernard DeVries (nee Toni Novotny), Nancy Rader, and Mrs. Scott Groves, sister of the bride. All are from Charlevoix. They wore identical floor length gowns of checked red and white gingham fashioned in low cut jumper style with deep ruffles at the hem. Blouses of dotted swiss were accented with short puff sleeves and red and white checks. Their flowers were a combination red miniature mums, white daisys, babies breath, and straw flowers.

Lynn Witmore of Marshall was best man. Groomsmen were Thomas Loodeen of Petoskey, Donald Heintz, and Vaughn Heintz, brothers of the groom.

Seating the guests were John Ogle of LaGrange, Ill. and Vaughn Heintz.

A reception followed at the church hall. Assisting were Mrs. Al Miller, Bay Shore; Mrs. Gary Parsel, Ironton; Mrs. Wm. Chase, Charlevoix; and Mrs. Rob Harrison, Idaho Falls, Idaho. Later a social hour was held at the home of the bride's mother.

Kresge Gift to Buy Grass River Tract

The Grass River Wildlife Project of Three Lakes Association of Bellaire, has announced approval of a grant of $30,000 from the Kresge Foundation.

Mrs. Walter R. O'Hair, chairman of the Project, announced that a letter from William H. Baldwin, President of The Kresge Foundation, has confirmed that the funds granted are to be used toward the purchase of a parcel of land totalling 62 acres on the West side of Grass River, known as the Dr. and Mrs. Alfred D. Austin property.

An option on this property, on behalf of the project, has been held for some six months by The Nature Conservancy of the District of Columbia, which is the only national privately-supported conservation organization whose total resources are devoted to the preservation of "lands of outstanding scenic or ecological value".

Three Lakes Association of Bellaire is concerned with the preservation of clean waters and of wet-lands for game conservation in lakes Bellaire, Clam, Torch, and connecting waters, all in Antrim County, which led naturally to its creation of the Grass River Wildlife Project Committee.

Grass River is the connecting water between Lake Bellaire and Clam Lake. So far, this wild area has not been seriously disturbed by human activities. The unspoiled setting, plus the unusual diversity of plant, bird and animal life makes Grass River a unique, natural area which urgently needs and deserves protection from development and other human disturbance, and preservation for the full use and enjoyment of fishermen, boaters, hunters and lovers of nature.

"Because this parcel of land is literally the keystone of the entire Grass River Wildlife Project, our success in obtaining the generous grant from The Kresge Foundation toward the purchase of the Austin property is especially gratifying to the Committee," said Mrs. O'Hair. "Now we can and will proceed confidently to plan and organize the raising of other funds for the acquisition of the additional land needed."

The Project Committee has been effectively supported from the start by many local organizations, including the Board of Commissioners of Antrim County.

Pvt. Roy Crain

Ray A. Crain Under New Army Policy

Army Pvt. Roy A. Crain, 19, whose wife, Colleen, lives at R-2, Charlevoix, recently completed the first phase of training under the modern volunteer Army field experiment at Ft. Ord, Calif.

The new concept, called Volar, combines basic and advanced individual training into a single 16-week program.

Decentralized instruction at the unit level and a reduction of formations and inspections gives the soldier more time to train and increased off-duty time.

Fewer restrictions on off-duty travel and improved living facilities are other benefits of the Volar concept.

Pvt. Crain's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer F. Crain, live at 311 W. Division-st., Boyne City

Pair to Mark Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Woodcock, former residents of Charlevoix now living in Boyne City, will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary July 6.

Woodcock and the former Ivy Jeffries were married at Kincardine, Ont., July 6, 1921, at the Kincardine Episcopal Church.

They spent most of their married life in Detroit where Woodcock worked as a carpenter.

The Woodcocks moved to Charlevoix in 1959 and recently relocated in Boyne City at 526 N. Lake-st.

They are members of Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix where a reception will be held in their honor Sunday, July 4, following the 11 a.m. service.

SLOWPITCH LEAGUE

The Topside continued to pace the 10 team slow pitch circuit with a perfect 5-0 record. They beat strong Freedmans 8-5, scoring four big runs in the second inning hi-lighted by Kluge's home run. The losers collected home runs by Gayle Sheldon and Gary Balch. Against the Townhouse it was the same story. Only this time Topside's Terry Blissett took the hitting spotlight blasting out three long homers. Bill Marme had one for one of the loser's runs in the 9-5 contest.

Medusa stayed undefeated by besting Portside Sports 16-13 in a slugfest. Larry Nunnemaker homered twice and Kerr once for the winners. Wright and Probert had roundtrippers for the losers.

The Argonne scored a big win, edging Andy's 7-6 with a run in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Portside got back into the win column beating Airport Bar 10-4. Five runs in the fourth did the trick.

The American Mold got a real scare as Airport Bar took them to nine innings before falling to Lawerence Bergman's long home run in the exciting 6-5 game.

Freedmans got cranked up to whip Howards 12-8 with Sheldon and Bowman clouting home runs for the winners.

FAST PITCH LEAGUE

First State Bank moved along with their third straight win to lead the circuit. It took clutch performances to do it however. Lee Cross homered in the fourth inning for the only run of the game. Nate Boss shut out Novaks to make the 1-0 margin stand. Larry Potter deserved better fate as he sprinkled three hits in a losing cause. Morweld got a gift run in the bottom of the eleventh inning as County State Bank and Morweld Steel battled on even terms until that point. Then three walks and a wild pitch produced the winning marker in the 4-3 contest. Maury Taylor picked up the win, allowing seven hits, while Tom Drenth allowed just three in losing. Mike Crain homered for County State Bank.

The Bank boys picked up their second win with a 12-4 win over Potter's Appliance. Mike Crain again led the hitting attack for the winners with a homerun, a double and single.

Novaks looked impressive in beating Morweld 9-4. Larry Potter allowed only 5 hits while his teammates backed him with a 12 hit attack.

PEANUT LEAGUE

In the Peanut League tournament, the Braves scored five times in the sixth inning to beat the Lions 10-5. Brian Warner was the winning hurler while Don Mort took the loss.

THIS AND THAT. . . . Two serious injuries marred the slow pitch action last week. Hank Archery injured his knee and Mike Webb broke his ankle. Both were sliding into bases...Could still use another umpire for the fastpitch league...Women's tournament finals are tomorrow night...Good crowds continue....

THE MICHIGAN Milking Shorthorn Breeders Association held its annual picnic Saturday at the farm of Lawrence Boss on Matchett-rd. As is the rule at farm picnics, the food was plentiful --- and delicious.

ATTENDING the Michigan Milking Shorthorn Breeders Association picnic Saturday at the Lawrence Boss farm were (from left) Prof. and Mrs. Clinton Meadows of Michigan State University, State Rep. Richard Friske, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Boss, State Rep. and Mrs. Stanley Powell of Ionia and Association President Jack McTaggart and Mrs. McTaggert of Sterling. Prof. Meadows was the speaker.

Corral Chatter

Camp Charlevoix started its 46th season on Saturday with boys arriving by plane, boat and car. Boys came from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, California, Connecticut, Florida, and it was a happy sight to see these boys and men renewing friendships that were started at the camp in previous years. Bill and Ruth Townsend, of Lynn, Ind., are back for the 16th year. Harry and Monica Bingham are back for their 35th year. Louis Warren, our cook from Puqua, Ohio, is back for his 12th year. Rose Hilton, Charlevoix, is back for her 11th year. Merrill Staheli from Cedar City, Utah, and his wife, Mary are back. Merrill is head cowboy.

Opening day dawned sunny and bright and it was great to see parents bringing boys into camp, and to have the boys jump from the cars to hail a friend from last summer.

On Saturday night, the annual Pillow Fights were held and these have become traditional here at camp. After much excitement and cheering until the rafters rang, the following were the results. NEW HOPE FOR BELLS BAY?

More Federal Money For Recreational Use

Department of Natural Resources officials received word this week that their updated recreation plan for Michigan has been approved by the U.S. Bureau of Outdoor Recreation to put this state back in line for use of federal Land and Water Conservation Funds through June, 1974.

Local conservationists are eyeing the new funds as a source of revenue to purchase the Bells Bay property to save it from residential development.

Final clearance of the master plan by the BOR immediately frees $8 million in Land and Water monies which were previously earmarked to cost-share more outdoor recreation facilities at state and local levels in Michigan. Those funds have been held in check pending review and acceptance of the plan by the BOR.

In a letter to Governor Milliken, acting BOR Director A. Heaton Underhill reported that "Michigan is to be commended for the depth and comprehensiveness of the urban recreation needs analysis contained in the plan."

He added that "this review of local deficiencies, together with the program outlined for their solution, should substantially improve the outdoor recreation in these areas of great need."

Underhill also commended the DNR for the "thoroughness with which the plan delineates the policies, goals, and objectives for solving Michigan's recreation problems."

DNR officials point out that the plan covers all levels and aspects of recreation needs in this state.

The $8 million now cleared for distribution will be parceled out 50-50 between state and local recreation projects. This is the same formula followed by the DNR in allocating the previous $9.8 million of Land and Water money funded to the state, dating back to 1965.

Those allotments have paid half the cost of more than $19 million worth of recreational improvements in Michigan. State and local funds have financed the other 50 percent of these costs for acquiring recreational lands and developing outdoor leisure-time facilities.

Under this match-up of federal, state, and local monies, more than 200 Land and Water projects have been put on Michigan's map, adding new outlets for campers, boaters, picnickers and other outdoor users.

Mrs. Gunn Opens Fire on Ragweed

Ever since the first resorters arrived in Charlevoix from the south more than 70 years ago, the city has enjoyed a reputation of sorts as a place where sufferers of hay fever could find some measure of relief from their seasonal malaise.

Most of the trouble is caused by a plant from the genus Ambrosia that produces a highly allergenic pollen. It is called ragweed.

Ragweed is a plant that likes lots of sunlight and is common in the sprawling farmlands of southern Michigan and other parts of the nation. It grows along fence lines next to open fields and even thrives in vacant lots in large cities.

In northern Michigan, which is still heavily timbered, ragweed doesn't fare nearly so well since it is discouraged by the deep shade of our woodlands.

But that doesn't mean we don't have ragweed. It grows abundantly within the city limits of Charlevoix and is common in the farming areas of Charlevoix County.

Mrs. Carl (Joanna) Gunn, a resident of Texas who maintains a summer home at Pine Point, has declared war on ragweed.

She comes to Charlevoix every summer for relief from her hay fever, but every year she discovers more and more ragweed in the area.

Mrs. Gunn loves Charlevoix as much as she does Texas, and would like to see northern Michigan remain a mecca for hay fever sufferers.

And she would like your support in eradicating ragweed before it becomes a serious problem.

Mrs. Gunn says that now is the time to get rid of ragweed where ever it appears and has supplied the Courier with samples of the plant to help in identifying the noxious weed.

She says merely cutting it down won't do much good, since the roots remain in the ground to grow another year. She recommends pulling it up by the roots while the ground is still moist and destroying the plant once and for all.

So check your property for ragweed. You can recognize it by its feathery, pointed fronds on each side of a central stem. It's not a bad looking plant, but the pollen can sure raise Cain if you suffer from hay fever.

However, one "gun" never won a war. Mrs. Gunn will appreciate all the support she can get in her assault on ragweed.

A Good Summer In Store for City

With the Fourth of July just around the corner, it looks as though Charlevoix is in for one of the best summers in years.

Although the height of the tourist season is still a few weeks away, the city is rapidly filling up with visitors from far and near.

Few old timers can recall when there were so many people in town so early in the season.

Of course, the weatherman has cooperated by serving up a month of June that the poets like to write about.

The lake trout have also done their part. Fishing for the big, succulent trophies has never been better, with some specimens ranging up to 12 pounds and larger.

Myrl Keller, who manages the Great Lakes Fisheries Station in Charlevoix, toured the Charlevoix harbor between North and South Points with a fish-finder last week and reports that the bottom of the bay is literally carpeted with lake trout at a depth of between 40 and 60 feet.

Furthermore, the downtown section has never looked better, with scarcely a vacant building in the city.

Some motels are hanging up their "no vacancy" signs in mid-week, gas stations are doing a land-office business and restaurants apparently are turning out appetizing meals in record numbers.

Changes Mandatory In School Financing

Although the Charlevoix School District is in the throes of belt-tightening after the defeat at the polls June 14 of 2¼ mills to meet increased operating costs, members of the Board of Education are grateful that Charlevoixans saw fit to keep all expiring millage in tact.

We are in far better shape than some neighboring school districts which must have another go-around at the polls this summer in order to stay in business at all.

Unfortunately, the problem of school financing is one which is far from settled, even in Charlevoix.

It is a sorry situation when we must put our teachers, administrators and school programs through the wringer of a millage election every year.

We know schools are necessary. The education of its young is a basic responsibility of every civilized society.

Yet every June the entire educational establishment in every community across the state must wait on tenterhooks for the annual June election to learn how much money it is going to have to do its job the coming year.

School financing at our advanced stage of civilization is as chaotic as it is absurd.

Needless to say, local property tax increases are not the answer. With more and more of our citizens living on fixed incomes, every tax increase poses an unfair burden on those citizens least able to bear it.

We trust the present legislature will come up with a broader base for school support — even at the expense of local autonomy, which, even though some school officials hesitate to admit it, has been more of a myth than a reality for the past generation.

Teacher Takes Issue With Beth

June 23, 1971

To the Editor:

Beth Baldwin's column in the June 23 edition skimmed the surface of the educational reform issue and then went off on a tangent that was critical of both teachers and administrators.

I think if the writer checks she will find very few school districts whose teachers work 180 days. That is the minimum number of days the state requires that children attend school.

Granted, even if teachers do have to work for only 190 days, that still isn't a "full year." But is the writer aware of certification requirements that insure that a teacher obtain additional college credits?

I'm only in your area for one week — the week between the school year ending and summer school beginning. Sure, I'd love to serve as a sponsor to an after school group, but I also earn credits at the extension center in my community, and those classes meet after school.

And granted that how much preparation a teacher spends outside of class is an individual matter, but I think if the writer were to do some digging she would find that far more teachers than she thinks do spend many hours planning enriching and stimulating activities.

In my district, Livonia, it is the older teachers who have migrated to the metropolitan area from outstate who are most in favor of tenure. They have seen, so they say, too many teachers dismissed at the whim of an autocratic superintendent or principal.

Your readers might be interested in knowing that it is not only the smaller districts which cannot afford pay increases at former levels. Livonia offered, and the teachers accepted, a two-year contract that calls for a three percent pay increase this coming year and a two percent increase in 1972-73.

Believe it or not, teachers are concerned about inadequate financing of public schools and we are willing to bend, but the public must realize that if local control of the public schools is to continue, than so must local financing.

Teachers are unwilling to go back to the days when the schoolmaster or schoolmarm was the community drudge (what the writer calls the old-fashioned concept of teaching.)

We are dedicated; we do want to and are willing to help in this business of educational reform so that students will have a better education.

Beth Baldwin might want to check, along these same lines, how many local teachers are offering their time, gratis, to work to see these reforms initiated. That might provide some revealing information for a future column.

Sincerely,

Flower Pots and Fudge Mark Summer in City

By BETH BALDWIN

Summer is here.

Practically overnight Charlevoix's population climbs and the chance of finding a parking place decreases. Almost unknown in the winter months, the traffic jam becomes a reality as the bridge goes up and down like a yo-yo.

At night, the shops remain open instead of taking in their shingles at 5 p.m. And the town stays awake well into the wee hours of the morning instead of falling into a deep slumber immediately at dusk.

Charlevoixans realize summer has hit when the theater remains open every night and strangers begin walking around with fudge and Petoskey stones in their hot hands. The flower pots come out and so do the parking meters. The dock master begins his vigil, the fish are put into the pond and the shuffle board courts are scraped of last winter's ice. Baseball has it's field day and band concerts become part of the summer schedule. Yes it's summer.

Golfers competing in the Michigan Amateur Tournament roll into town. Remains of dead alewives float onto the beaches. The cottages on the Belvedere and Chicago Clubs lose their abandoned look and the marinas begin making everything shipshape. The sprinklers spring out in East Park along with the do the frisbees and the green benches. Yes it's summer.

Not far from here, cars zoom by on the expressway with loads of kids, tents, swimming and fishing gear on their way north. They leave behind more freeways crowded wtih vehicles on the way to beaches were people are herded like cattle and swim in murky brown water. They head toward clean air, clean water and clean towns. They buy souvenirs and complain about prices, and reminisce about past jaunts.

Yes, it's summer.

How to beat the savings squeeze.

It's so hard to save a buck. By the time all the bills are paid, there's nothing left to squeeze out of your paycheck for savings.

But there is a way to build a nest egg without having to worry about it. When you join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work, an amount you designate will be set aside automatically from each paycheck and invested in U.S. Savings Bonds. By saving a little from each paycheck, you don't feel the pinch. And before long, you'll find you've a sizable nest egg stashed away.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds. For E Bonds, 5½% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra ½%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970 . . . with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

Ease your savings squeeze. Join the Payroll Savings Plan.

The Pentagon Papers

Publication of documents relative to the origins of the war in Vietnam has been a satisfying experience for most thinking Americans.

We have suspected for several years now that there has been a good deal of official skulduggery in the manipulation of the war, but we couldn't prove it.

From the onset the war didn't make sense. Why should the United States, the most powerful military nation in the world, subject itself willingly to same humiliating defeat in the god-forsaken little country of Vietnam that the French suffered in 1954?

After all, it is a peasant war and must be fought and won by peasants. Any victory won by outsiders is a shakey thing at best, one that must be maintained by brute force if it is to survive at all. The victor must have popular support, or his victories will amount to no more than delaying actions.

Four American presidents have been involved in the terrible catastrophe that is present-day Vietnam and none of them emerges Simon-pure.

President Eisenhower put us in the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, our membership in which made us responsible for maintaining governments of our choosing in foreign lands.

President Kennedy offered arms and technical expertise to the government of South Vietnam, so corrupt even then that it had little support among the rice paddy populace.

President Johnson committed American boys and their fabulous fighting machines to the fracas, apparently after badgering the enemy to committing acts of aggression against us in the Bay of Tonkin.

And President Nixon, although he was aware of what went before, has shown a puzzling reluctance to withdraw American forces en masse, although he certainly knows our presence in Vietnam is untenable.

To Nixon's credit, he has started a phased withdrawal of American troops and has attempted to turn the war over to the people to whom it belongs — the Vietnamese, although he has done so only after it became painfully apparent that the war is destroying our own country from within.

To Nixon's discredit is the fact that his administration has attempted to conceal the Pentagon papers that graphically describe America's growing involvement in the Vietnam nightmare.

However, if the President plays his cards right — and his courts permit a full disclosure of America's role in Vietnam to date — he will emerge from the quagmire virtually untarnished.

Needless to say, the next few days are critical to the Nixon Administration. If the President allows a clean breast to be made of the entire mess, and then proceeds on a stepped-up schedule to remove American forces from Vietnam, he will have the 1972 election in his hip pocket.

Certainly former President Johnson's duplicity in talking peace while preparing for war during the 1964 presidential election is a black mark on the Democratic Party that will not be forgotten in 1972.

The big question in my mind is how the American people can ever regain their former reputation as the good guys in the white hats after what has transpired in Vietnam.

In years past, Americans were always the fellows who wouldn't land a blow until after they had been clouted over the head. We were brought up on such slogans as "Don't shoot until you see the whites of their eyes" and "Walk softly but carry a big stick."

Now we have been bared for all the world to see as a gang of ruthless military cutthroats, which, of course, isn't the case at all on the main streets of America. Regardless of the record, Americans still prefer peace to war and we recognize the right of all men to live in the manner that suits them best.

Out of Vietnam, we hope there arises a new affirmation of traditional American values — from the Pentagon on down.

Noise Merchants

I cannot tell a lie. The most god-awful noise I ever heard is created on purpose by the Grand Funk Railroad. That's the rock group managed by Terry Knight, the only millionaire who has ever been inside my humble home.

Terry sends me all the Grand Funk albums. I probably shouldn't knock them. Terry recently bought new uniforms for the school band in his old hometown. Some day he may want to do something similarly nice for the faithful, ink-stained old editor of his hometown newspaper. I could use a pair of pants without those lousy ink stains, for instance. To heck with tradition. So it's dumb for me to say the Grand Funk sounds like the switchman fell asleep and there was a head-on crash with 15 miles of track ripped up and no survivors.

But I can't help it.

And it's not that I'm strictly an old fogey, wed forever to Glen Miller and Tuxedo Junction. I've been a Beatle fan from the first and I've been excited by several of those weirdly named groups, such as Blood, Sweat and Tears. With Neil Diamond around, who cares if Frank Sinatra hangs it up for good?

But the Grand Funkers do nothing for me except make my ears cringe.

I offer this opinion not as a jealous rap at Terry. I'm proud of his success. When the Wall Street Journal, on the front page, called Terry a millionaire, I was happy for him. In fact, I immediately sent him a letter of congratulations (enclosing a photo of my ink-stained pants).

Actually, it appears that no one like Grand Funk - except the kids who overflow their concerts and buy their records by the millions. Disc jockeys never play Grand Funk. They're never on TV. Music critics agree unanimously that their music is "hideous" and "atrocious." Even Terry admits his three Funkers are not overloaded with talent.

Which naturally brings up the fascinating question: If they're so lousy, why are they so popular? The New York Times critic had a smart-aleck answer: "Mussolini was popular too."

But the real answer is much more interesting. The Funkers are rich because they are twice as loud and because Terry Knight is twice as shrewd.

Most groups use 2,000 watt amplifiers. Grand Funk uses 4,000 watts. They are so loud and frenzied you can't understand most of the words. But you sure as heck can't ignore them, any more than you could ignore World War Three going on inside your skull.

Knight says he sells Grand Funk "like toothpaste." He knows it pays to advertise. More important, he "orchestrates" his three Funkers right down to the last lingering yowl. All that jumping and yipping and moaning and grimacing doesn't just happen naturally. Terry knows that's what the kids want and he makes certain they get it. Grand Funk rehearsals must be like practicing to have a tooth pulled.

His ex-fans hung Mussolini. Certainly, such a thing could never happen to Grand Funk. But if it did, Terry could always sell tickets and position his amplifiers strategically so as to pick up the last noises made by his boys.

It would probably sound like just another Grand Funk concert.

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS
from The Bible

See what love the Father has given us.—(1 John 3:1).

Some people need to know that they are important, that they are worthwhile. We have the capacity to help these people to find themselves—to become aware of their importance in God's good world. Your prayers, your faith in them, the love you pour out on them will help them to hear the voice of God in them saying, "You are my beloved child."

Streamlined Mini-Pig To Aid Heart Research

Pigs, loyal friends of man since the Stone Age, now are giving their all in medical research.

The pig has a heart and circulatory system similar to man's, but conventional breeds are too large for laboratories, the National Geographic Society says.

To solve the problem, researchers developed a mini-pig. It weighs only 40 pounds at the age of five months. Another medical team devised a method of rapidly introducing advanced coronary heart disease in the mini-pigs.

The popular image of a hog wallowing in the mud, grunting at the trough, and snoring in the sun does it less than justice.

Besides contributing to medical research, pigs are superbly efficient meat factories. They store 35 percent of the energy from their food. In less than four months, a sow can produce a litter of eight or more piglets. The young are ready for market in just six months.

The versatile animals also have snuffled truffles, flushed game, helped win the West, paid off countless mortgages, and even entertained royalty.

When Louis XI was down in the dumps, nothing could cheer him up faster than a troupe of gaily garbed little French pigs dancing to bagpipe music. And that was nearly five centuries before Walt Disney.

The miniature and all other domestic species are descended from wild pigs that roamed from Europe to eastern Asia in prehistoric times. By the time of the New Stone Age, men had domesticated swine.

Long after the cave man gnawed his first pork chop, pigs still were performing a variety of jobs. In ancient Egypt, pigs were used to tread seed into the ground and thresh grain.

Inhabitants of the New Forest in medieval England were forbidden to keep hunting dogs. But poachers trained pigs to point and retrieve snipe, partridges, rabbits, and other game. In southern France, trained hogs with sensitive noses still sniff out the delicious underground fungi called truffles.

Queen Isabella, who enjoyed hunting wild boars, supposedly encouraged Columbus to take hogs on his second voyage to the New World. Liberated in Cuba and by others later on the North American mainland, the pigs flourished.

Those early "woods hogs" were admirably suited to go westward with pioneers. The energetic, self-reliant razorbacks foraged for roots, acorns, beech mast, insects, and other forest foods. A contemporary account described them:

"They will go a distance from a fence, take a run, and leap through the rails three or four feet from the ground, turning themselves sidewise. These hogs suffer hardships no other animal could endure."

The woods hog found the promised land in the Midwestern corn belt. A rich corn diet and careful breeding converted the wiry pig into the enormously fat "lard hog." With increased demand for lean hams and bacon, the lard hog was, in turn, streamlined.

Whatever the size, pigs mean ready money for American farmers. Many a homestead has been saved from foreclosure by "hogging down the mortgage."

Consumers Rejects Binding Arbitration

R.C. Bretting, vice president for personnel, says Consumers Power Co. rejects as irresponsible a proposal by the Utility Workers Union of America that the deadlocked labor agreement negotiations be submitted to binding arbitration..

Consumers' plants throughout Michigan, including the Big Rock Point nuclear power plant on U.S. 31 North, have been on strike since May 12.

"Consumers Power Co.'s management feels that submission to binding arbitration of labor agreement negotiations would be an abdication of its responsibility to manage," Bretting said. "Indeed, it would signal the collapse of the collective bargaining process. Once having taken this step, it would be virtually impossible to return again to a true collective bargaining atmosphere.'"

Bretting went on: "In this nation, arbitration of labor negotiations is rarely advocated; and then only when a work stoppage imperils the national economy. Clearly, this is not the case in Michigan..

"Management is responsible for the operations of the company and should not turn problems over to third parties who will be paid to render a temporary service - arbitration - and who will have no responsibility whatever for the binding recommendations they make.

"The company feels there is no proper comparison between arbitration of individual grievances under an existing labor agreement and arbitration of the vastly larger matters of total amounts of wages, and kinds of pension plans and other extremely long-range commitments. Nor would anyone ignore the fact that in an arbitration situation the company's best offer, which is already on the table, becomes the rock-bottom base from which an arbitrator would work and on which he would build."

DEVELOPMENT of homesites in the Bells Bay area is underway, by the Keating Corp. This road has been cut through the forest just south of the Bells Bay campground. Conservationists have attempted to secure the land without success as a state or national park.

A BULLDOZER has been moved into Bells Bay by the Keating Corp. to help clear the land for roads and homesites. The corporation has subdivided the land for resort development.

Board Approves Waivers

The Charlevoix City Council met as a board of appeals following the regular council meeting to approve four waivers on zoning restrictions.

William Kusina was given permission to extend the garage on Antrim-st. through to Mason-st., without a 25-foot back yard restriction.

Richard Sternaman, 102 Robinson-st., was given permission to build a garage five-feet from his side lot line with the approval of his neighbors. Any other location would have involved the cutting down of a large tree.

Side lot restrictions were waived for remodeling of the A & W drive-in restaurant on Bridge-st. on request of Bruce Withers.

And Denver Jackson was given permission to move a house trailer onto industrially-zoned land on Ferry-rd. across from the Schleman property for a period of two years.

Appeals Court To Hear Suit Against City

The U.S. Court of Appeals, 6th Circuit, in Cincinnati has agreed to hear oral arguments during the October session in the lawsuit brought against the City of Charlevoix by Shaw-Henderson Inc. of Cheboygan over the awarding of a contract for construction of the city's waste water treatment plant.

However, the court appears to have some reservations about the case, since "state issues substantially predominate."

The City Council Monday night was read a letter from U.S. Circuit Judge Paul C. Weick by Alderman Robert Gill, forwarded to the city by attorney Steven Dykema of Grand Rapids.

Shaw-Henderson (now Tom Shaw, Inc.) is attempting to overturn a decision of the council awarding the general construction contract to Clark Construction of Lansing, low bidder, rather than Shaw-Henderson, second low bidder, because of alleged irregularities in the Clark bid.

The Cheboygan firm maintains that Clark Construction did not name a piping contractor on the bid form and was permitted to "pirate" Shaw-Henderson's subcontractor for the work after the bids were opened.

Also named as a defendant in the suit was R.J. Schneider, regional construction grant program director of the federal government's Environmental Protection Agency, Water Quality Office, since the city has been awarded federal funds for a portion of the work.

Last month, Federal District Judge Albert Engel in Grand Rapids exempted Schneider and the federal government from further action by Shaw-Henderson, although he said his court lacked jurisdiction in litigation involving the firm and the City of Charlevoix.

However, the Cheboygan firm elected to appeal the case.

In his letter, U.S. Circuit Judge Weick wrote:

"Appellant must establish in this appeal that the District Court abused its discretion in entering the order which it did.

"An examination of the papers submitted, which did not include any exhibits, fails to convince me that there was any abuse of discretion on the part of the District Court, but this issue will necessarily be determined by the panel which will hear the appeal on its merits. It appears that state issues substantially predominate this case, namely whether Michigan law was violated in the letting of the contract, and whether the city could waive informalities in the bidding. As to these issues appellant has a full, complete and adequate remedy in the Michigan courts.

"There is also the question as to the effect of appellant's failure to move for an injunction pending appeal, with the result that the city has issued bonds to pay for its share of the cost of the improvement and the state also has incurred liability for its share. The city is proceeding with the construction of the project.

"The appeal will, however, be advanced for oral argument during the October, 1971, session."

In the meantime, Clark

JOHN W. CAMPBELL

Landscape Architect In Town

John W. Campbell, formerly of Howell, plans to open an architectural landscaping office in Charlevoix.

Campbell, who has just received a degree in landscape architecture from Michigan State University, and his wife, Mary Lee, have moved into the Harper Camp home at 305 E. Dixon-ave. Camp is Mrs. Campbell's father.

In addition to his work in landscaping, Campbell will be employed by the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District this fall as special education teacher at the Conway School.

Mrs. Campbell, who has an M.A. degree in speech pathology, also will be employed by the C-E District, in Charlevoix and St. James.

Campbell received his B.A. degree in education from MSU in 1964 and taught in Military Dependant Schools in Germany and France for three years. He also was a teacher in the Kent County Intermediate School District for three years before returning to school to earn his B.S. in landscape architecture.

As a landscape architect, Campbell will specialize in site planning, design and development.

UNIQUE drive-in church services are held every Sunday at 9 a.m. in the parking lot of the Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix, student pastor Dale Matthews officiating. Church goers pick up the sermon from the outdoor pulpit on their car radios. About 40 cars were parked in the lot for the service last Sunday.

Resort Owners Ring Up Great Holiday Weekend

Thousands of tourists poured into Charlevoix over the Fourth of July weekend, kicking off what promises to be one of the busiest summers in years.

The weatherman did his utmost to cooperate, serving up sunny, breezy days — ideal for swimming, boating and sight-seeing.

Occasionally fog moved in from Lake Michigan, but it did little to hamper holiday spirits.

Most motels in town hung up their "no vacancy" signs Friday night and lodging reportedly was scarce from Traverse City to the Straits of Mackinac.

One motel on the north side even rented out a trailer for a couple of nights.

A spot check of motels Monday night indicated that most of them still were accommodating hordes of tourists, but that they all had vacancies for the week.

Restaurants did a thriving business, with lines forming at some establishments at mealtimes.

One restauranteur reported that business generally was "very good."

Russell McGee, manager of Young State Park on the Boyne City-rd., said all 300 of his camping spaces were filled to capacity over the weekend, although there were some vacancies Monday night.

"When you consider that there are from four to five people on each campsite, we had quite a crowd," McGee said.

Virtually every campsite at Bells Bay also was occupied over the weekend.

Private campground operators also did well.

At the Open Gate on Nowland Lake, all of the main sections were filled with more than 100 campers, although some sites were still available.

Boat launching ramps also did a land office business. At times during the weekend, the ramp parking lot at Ferry Beach was almost filled to capacity.

The launching ramp at Nine Mile Point also was busy all weekend as boatloads of fishermen pushed off in search of lake trout.

Trophy Sails Home After 45 Years

It took 45 years to set the record straight, but G.E. Hollingsworth of Jackson, Mich., figured he had held the 1925 Charlevoix Regatta Motor Boat Handicap trophy long enough.

Particularly when it rightfully belonged to Julius Gilbert, proprietor of the Lodge Motel.

Gilbert received the tiny, five and one-half inch high trophy in the mail from Hollingsworth last year, with the following explanation:

"Way back in 1925, a motor boat race was held from the Inn Pier to the sugar beet factory on Pine Lake.

"The late Ray Hamilton established the handicaps. When he determined the speed of my boat, the Holly Hoo, Ray was not advised that the bilge was loaded with water, drain shut off. Then Trix Olmstead and I hung her, dried her out, grafited her bottom, put in "00" crank case oil and took off her windshield before the race. The Holly Hoo (was a) 26-foot Chris Craft with a OX-5 Curtis, 100 h.p.

"Your boat: a 26-foot Hacker (with) more power was the fastest boat and should have won with ease.

"When one reaches the 75-year age, one thinks much better. So now I send you the little silver trophy that was given to me in 1925 as the winner."

"It, as always, should have been yours and ask that you accept it and put in your archives."

"Most sincerely, Holly, G.E. Hollingsworth."

Needless to say, the trophy now occupies a favored spot in Gilbert's collection of Charlevoix memorabilia.

WAYWARD TROPHY

Cyclist Hurt In Accident

Lloyd Himebauch, 20, of Charlevoix suffered a broken arm and other injuries about 7:15 Monday night when the motorcycle he was driving collided with an automobile driven by Floyd Genia sr., 53, at the corner of Grant-st. and Carpenter-ave.

Himebauch received emergency treatment at Charlevoix Hospital and later was removed to Little Traverse Hospital.

Himebauch reportedly was traveling west on Carpenter when the east-bound Genia car attempted to make a left turn onto Grant-st. in front of him.

Genia was cited for failure to yield the right-of-way.

Charlevoix officers policed the accident.

1912 Bike Trip to Petoskey A Lesson in Endurance

By BERNICE WEXSTAFF

All the paeans of praise for cross-country pedaling achievements over the concrete-blacktop surfaces of today's roadways leaves the old time cyclists less than enthusiastic; Art Wexstaff says the modern pedaler would probably fled up on a run to Greensky Hill over the roads of 1912. He should know. He remembers those early sand and gravel obstacle courses.

Art recalls the hot summer day he and his neighborhood buddy, Harold Cartier, pedaled from Charlevoix to Petoskey and return. Proud of their achievement they boasted to their friends. Unfortunately nobody believed they were telling the truth as in those days such a feat was considered downright impossible.

The challenge to their veracity was too much for the boys to accept with equanimity so they decided to do it again. This time Harold's younger brother, Claire (now Dr. Claire Cartier DDS of Grand Rapids, tagged along.

The three boys huffed and puffed up the steeep hills on the old "31" roadway through, Burgess and Bay Shore to Petoskey where they parked their bikes by the river's edge below what is now Jordan's Second-Hand Store (the Mitchell street bridge had not yet been built). From the river's edge the boys ran across the top of the Bear River Dam to the city's business district on the bay where they purchased post-cards to verify their visit before starting homeward.

Homeward bound Claire forged ahead for no known reason except possibly to beat Art and Harold to the punch. He didn't know until later that his companions had run into serious trouble when the sprocket-chain on Harold's bike broke.

In panic Art and Harold sought out the nearest farmhouse where the owner was less than cordial and his dog growled menacingly at the young strangers who had invaded his domain. But as the boys explained their predicament the farmer grudgingly handed them a piece of baling wire looking all the time with disfavor on two boys roaming the countryside getting into trouble.

The lads were on their own and they knew it. Who could come to their rescue in the year 1912; There weren't a dozen automobiles in Petoskey and Charlevoix combined and if there had been it was an all-day trip for the early horseless carriages.

In desperation the young lads wired the two bikes together and from then on they took turns pedaling the lead bike while one rode and steared the disabled bike. It was a slow and tedious experiment--an endeavor to dishearten older more seasoned travelers but young hearts are made of sterner stuff and by midnight the boys were back at home base, exhausted for the moment but with postcard-proof of their achievement.

Perhaps that boyhood experience on the 1912 Petoskey-Charlevoix road pointed Harold to an engineering career. It is true he spent his working days building bridges and such from his vice-presidential desk at one of the country's leading construction companies in New York.

Art's talents ran to mechanical gadgets. He found ample opportunities for an outlet of his abilities by way of maintaining mechanical cleaning and pressing equipment in some 35 years involvement in the dry cleaning business in Charlevoix.

THIS WEEK'S QUESTION

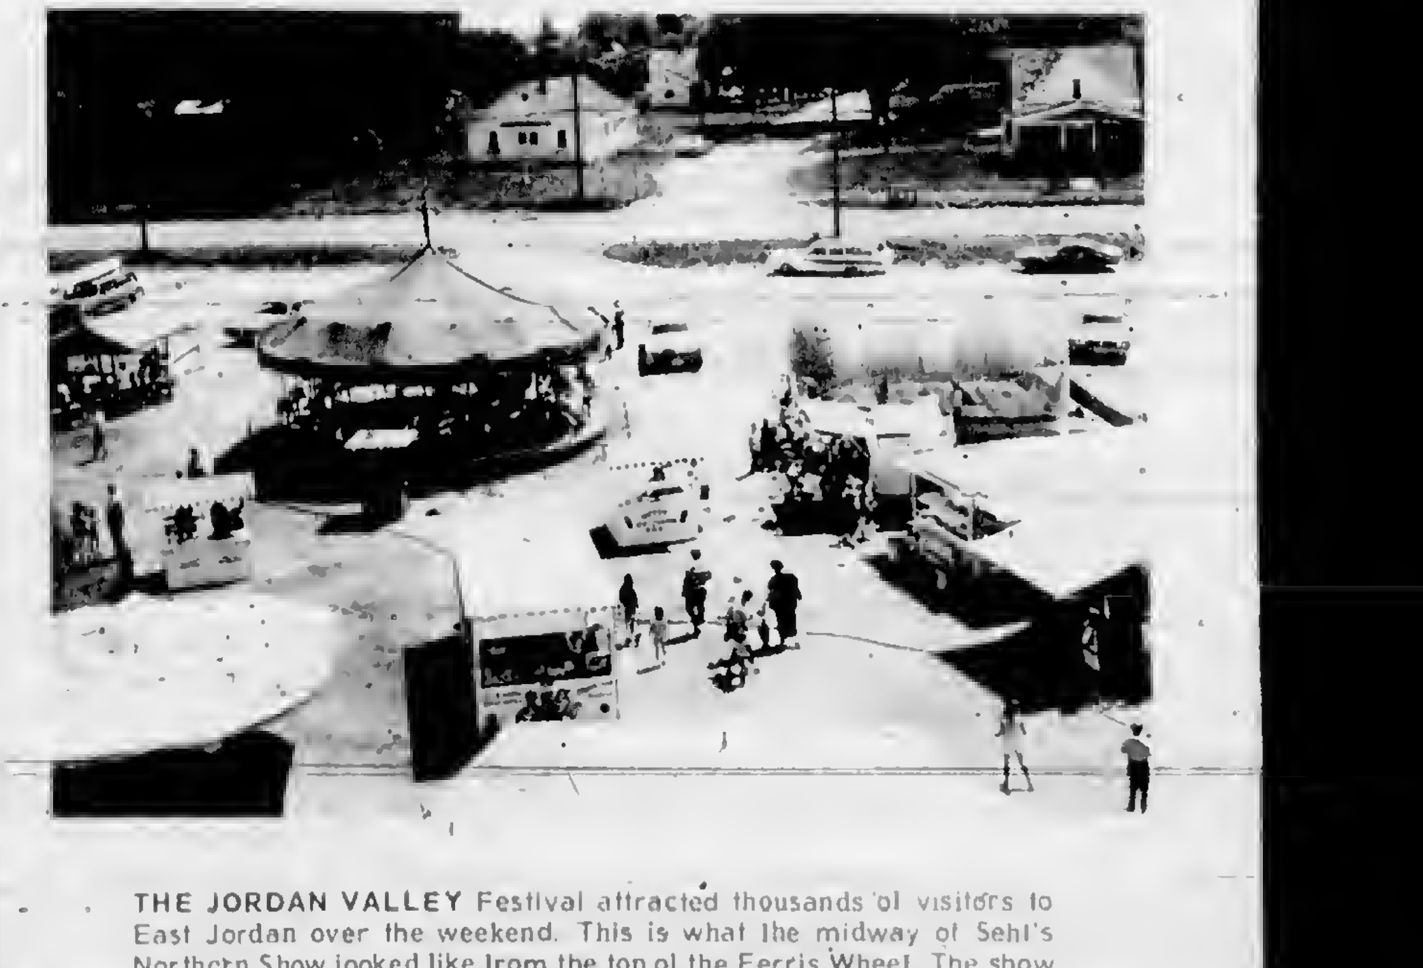
Would you rather work ten hours four days a week rather than the usual eight hours each day, five days a week? Vote "yes" or "no". Your comments will be appreciated.

Call 547-6558 or drop a post card in the mail to the Courier, P.O. Box 117.

Results of last week's question: Do you think drinking should be included in the bill being considered in the Michigan legislature which would lower the age of legal adulthood to 18?

Yes, 67.7 percent. "They drink any way"..."Might as well make it legal"..."Many hold jobs or are married at 18"..."It's better than using drugs."

No, 33.3 percent. "Because of my neighbor's teen-agers"..."the bars will be too crowded"..."The highway accident rate will go up"..."It's too young an age to start"..."We don't need any more alcoholics."



THE JORDAN VALLEY Festival attracted thousands of visitors to East Jordan over the weekend. This is what the midway of Seht's Northern Show looked like from the top of the Ferris Wheel. The show will come to Charlevoix during the Venetian Festival later in July.

Slave Founded Boyne City

"There are few records of Negroes in northern Michigan, but blacks played an important part in our settlement," writes Roy L. Dodge, author-historian in his new book, "Michigan Ghost Towns," Volume II.

The new edition, a 191-page softback, details what many consider to be the most complete history ever published of the black man's part in the early development of northern Michigan.

"Zachariah Morgan, a former slave, founded Boyne City. Another black, whose name is not even recorded, invented a number of devices that were considered major achievements in engineering circles at the time," reports Dodge in his book, "yet he was not recognized for his efforts."

Actually, black history is incidental to the real purpose of Dodge's work, which is to relate the location and history of more than 300 additional Michigan towns that sprang up and died during the logging boom that swept the state between 1860 and the early 1900's.

His first volume, under the same title, details ghost towns primarily in the lower part of the state. Volume II deals almost completely with the northern lower peninsula.

Henley-Gregory Rites Solemnized

The Bethany Lutheran Church was the scene recently of the wedding of Penny Lynn Henley and Edwin Gene Gregory.

The Rev. Duane Imig officiated at the double ring service in the presence of 200 guests before an altar graced with arrangements of white mums and candelabra. Janet Pease, organist, played a program of traditional music including "We've Only Just Begun," "More," and "One Hand, One Heart" and the wedding march.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Henley and Mr. and Mrs. L. Watson Gregory jr., of Petoskey.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride chose an Empire gown of re-embroidered lace and chiffon. Fashioned with a lace bodice, long sleeves and high neckline, the gown featured a chapel length train tirmmed with the same lace and a bow at the waist to give it back interest. A re-embroidered lace and sequin headdress secured her fingertip veil. She carried a nosegay of white roses and carnations, purple bachelor buttons and baby's breath.

Mrs. Robert Harrison of Idaho Falls, Ida., was her sister's matron of honor and Kay Fiedorek was bridesmaid. They wore identical empire gowns of butterfly print in summer colors and matching lavender ribbons in their hair. Each carried a single white rose.

Wendy Yates of Kalamazoo was flower girl and Dennis Huber of Mt. Pleasant, cousin of the bridegroom, served as ringbearer.

Michael McLaughlin of Petoskey was best man and Patrick Gregory of Petoskey, uncle of the bridegroom, groomsman. Richard Fowler of Petoskey and James Huber of Mt. Pleasant, uncle of the bridegroom, seated the guests.

Mrs. Henley selected a print dress in garden colors and white accessories for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Gregory, mother of the bridegroom, wore a pink ensemble and pink accessories. Their corsages were of orchids.

A reception, hosted by the bride's parents, followed, at the Belvedere Casino where guests danced to the music of the Bay City Four. Mrs. James Beacham of Kalamazoo, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Charles Hoffman of Lansing, served the wedding cake and Mrs. William Yates of Kalamazoo and Mrs. Jake White jr., assisted. Gifts were in charge of Terri Wood and Mary Gregory of Petoskey, aunt of the bridegroom.

After a wedding trip to Canada the couple will be at home at 1031 May-st.

The bride, a recent Charlevoix high school graduate, is employed at Fay's shop. The bridegroom is employed by the Pepsi Bottling Co. in Petoskey.

Wedding guests were present from Idaho Falls, Ida., Royal Oak, Detroit, Lansing, Kalamazoo, Dorr, Traverse City and Petoskey.

Electric Worm Probes, Toy Lighters Hazardous

District Health Department No. 3, covering Charlevoix, Emmet, Otsego and Antrim counties, has passed along warnings on two potentially dangerous commodities now on the market.

On advice of the Food and Drug Administration, (FDA), local health officers are urging residents to beware of electrical probes used to force worms from the ground.

Such probes, sold through a number of mail order specialty houses, could electrocute the user, the FDA says.

The other potentially dangerous item, sold through vending machines, is a miniature cigarette lighter that measures one-half inch wide, one-inch tall and one-quarter inch thick that actually lights when filled with fluid.

Charles C. Edwards, M.D., commissioner of food and drugs, says the worm probes have caused two deaths already and may be responsible for eight other electrocutions.

A 10-year-old Riverton, Wyo., boy and a 15-year-old Denver youth died in accidents involving worm probes. The two youths were electrocuted when they accidentally came in contact with the rods or stepped on wet ground in the area being probed.

The two metal rods are each connected to the two and wires of an ordinary extension cord which is plugged into an electric outlet. The rods are placed five feet apart in ground which has previously been dampened with water. It is claimed that when the cord is plugged in, the worms react to the current by crawling out of the ground.

A person stepping on the ground within 15 feet of a probe (depending on the wetness of the ground and the degree of insulation provided by the person's shoes or clothing) may suffer a dangerous electrical shock or electrocution, an FDA investigator said.

Although the Agency discourages the use of the products, those who disregard this warning should under no circumstances leave the product plugged in and unattended.

As many as 30,000 of the devices are estimated to have been sold. Many more home-made versions of the device, which are considered even more dangerous are being used.

Several distributors have voluntarily agreed to recall the devices and delete them from their catalogues.

The Michigan Department of Public Health says the miniature cigarette lighters are old in 10-cent vending machines, along with various small toys and gadgets.

"This lighter in the hands of a young child whose normal curiosity could lead to the procurement of some lighter fluid converts the "toy" into a potential danger," the department says.

Such a lighter was purchased from a vending machine in Sterling Heights by a small boy while shopping with his mother. The mother was not aware of her son's purchase until at home she caught him in the act of filling the lighter with fluid.

The incident was reported to the Michigan Department of Public Health. The matter was investigated and a promise extracted from the vending machine owner to remove the lighters from his units.

How many other vending machines in the state may contain similar miniature lighters being dispensed as "toys" is not known.

Since it is possible there are others, Director of Public Health Dr. Maurice S. Reizen has alerted all parents of young children. He cautioned, "If your children have money to make a toy purchase from a vending machine, it would be wise to check their purchase. It's better to be safe than sorry."

Annual Alewife Die-Off Underway in L. Michigan

Except for a few possible trouble spots, Lake Michigan's die-off of alewives this season is expected to be about the same as last year and, perhaps, somewhat lower, reports the Department of Natural Resources.

That encouraging outlook for shoreline owners and swimmers is based on last year's studies by the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife which point to a relatively low, overall abundance of adult alewives in the lake.

Latest findings of the federal Bureau indicate that the lake's populations of the mature nuisance fish are only about one-third as high as in 1967 when alewife losses reached massive proportions along the west side of Lower Michigan.

Those same survey results raise stormwarnings, however, for the Ludington area where trawl-netting operations by the Bureau last fall showed a substantial increase of adult alewives. "This build-up may signal a rather heavy alewife die-off in coastal waters along Ludington within the next few weeks," observes John Scott, in charge of the DNR's Great Lakes section.

His appraisal of the situation there takes note of the fact that large numbers of the silvery, saw-bellied fish have recently died and washed ashore in the Chicago area. The high die-off there apparently stems from sizable alewife concentrations which the Bureau's netting operations uncovered in the Waukegan, Ill., area last fall.

Scott reports that the DNR has two of its beach-cleaning machines already stationed in the Ludington area, and he believes those mechanized units will meet any job of alewife removal which may develop there.

He also points out that the DNR has trawling gear which can be contracted out to private operators for skimming dead alewives off the surface of the lake.

"We're geared up to handle the alewife problem in any possible trouble spot, but we don't think the die-off this year will become serious enough anywhere to require the use of our skimming equipment," says Scott.

Some alewife losses have already been reported in the St. Joseph-Benton Harbor area and the toll there is said to be running comparatively light, as should be the pattern along most of Lake Michigan's shoreline.

Even so, some mop-up work will be required and the DNR has other mechanized beach cleaners strategically stationed along the Lake Michigan front to meet the need when and where it may arise.

If the situation calls for it, those units will be farmed out to local communities to remove alewives from their beaches.

DNR parks officials, reflecting upon this year's generally low levels of adult alewives and their fleet of beach cleaners, look for no major problem this season in keeping state park beaches open to public use on the Lake Michigan side.

Scott credits predation by planted lake trout, salmon, and steelhead for playing an important role in thinning Lake Michigan's populations of adult alewives.

Those game species feed heavily on the smaller forage fish and their impact on depressing alewife populations is largely responsible for the recent upswing of perch stocks in southern Lake Michigan.

Shipwrecks Lure SCUBA Divers

SCUBA diving is gaining in popularity across the United States, but no where is the sport practiced more earnestly than in the Charlevoix area, the scene of many shipwrecks in years past.

When property dried and finished, shipwreck timbers have been turned into beautiful tables, benches, lamps and even jewelry.

According to the United States Department of Commerce, the popularity of SCUBA diving has increased so rapidly that it now rivals other forms of water-oriented recreation and the familiar red flag with diagonal white stripe signifying "divers down" is being seen more and more.

SCUBA (which is short for Self-Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus) equipment was developed and perfected by the U.S. Navy during World War II.

Lake Survey Center, Great Lakes chartmakers and part of the Commerce Department's new National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration operating directly under the National Ocean Survey, provides important services to the beginner, as well as the experienced SCUBA diver.

Charts from Lake Survey by mail or from an authorized dealer are a "must." Half the fun of SCUBA diving is finding something or looking for something you know is there.

If you find some form of sunken treasure, mark its location on your chart so you can find it again. If you have the location, mark it on your chart and then navigate to that spot. Lake Survey Center charts do show some wrecks but usually only those considered to be a hazard to navigation.

Besides charts Lake Survey has several other items to aid the SCUBA diver. The Great Lakes Pilot contains brief descriptions and locations of some wrecks although usually neither the vessel's name nor its cargo is known.

The Pilot can be purchased by mail from Lake Survey Center, Federal Bldg., Detroit 48226, or from an authorized dealer.

A two-page listing of wreck information sources and a Great Lakes chart catalog which contains addresses of authorized dealers are both free on request to the above address.

Happy diving and remember: never dive alone; check equipment carefully; get the latest National Weather Service forecast; and use only the latest, up-to-date charts.

Science Seminars Scheduled

Two one-day sessions designed to acquaint teachers with a new science curriculum will be held at Northwestern Michigan College in Traverse City this summer under the sponsorship of the Michigan State University Science and Mathematics Teaching Center and the National Science Foundation, it was announced this week by Dr. Milton J. Hagelberg, Director of the MSU Continuing Education Center in Traverse City.

On Monday, July 26, a meeting to acquaint elementary school science teachers and administrators with the philosophy, materials, modes of teaching and implementation procedures of the Conceptually Sequenced Elementary Science Program will be held.

On Wednesday, August 18, a similar meeting will be held for Junior High School science teachers and administrators on the Intermediate Science Curriculum Study.

University professors and science supervisors who have received extensive training in the new curriculum will conduct the sessions. There will be ample time for discussion of the expected advantages that might accrue to the student and of possible problems faced by the school in implementing the curriculum.

There is no cost for the program, but advanced registration is important to determine if there is sufficient interest to hold the sessions. Reservations may be made by writing or calling the MSU Continuing Education Center in Traverse City (Telephone 946-7496, Area Code 616).

Details including room location and time schedule will be provided those making advanced reservations. Further information concerning the sessions may be secured from the Center.

ALCOHOL IS ONE OF TWO LARGEST SINGLE FACTORS INVOLVED IN MICHIGAN TRAFFIC FATALITIES. SPEED TOO FAST FOR CONDITIONS IS THE OTHER. A RECENT STUDY SHOWED 50 OF 207 DRIVERS INVOLVED IN 135 FATAL ACCIDENTS, OR 24 PERCENT, HAD BEEN DRINKING TO THE POINT OF IMPAIRMENT. POLICE WERE UNABLE TO BE SURE IN AN ADDITIONAL 48 PERCENT. THREE KINDS OF PERSONS WERE INVOLVED: THE ALCOHOLIC, THE SOCIAL DRINKER WHO EXCEEDS HIS LIMIT AND THE YOUNG DRIVER—WHO MAY BE EITHER.

Hobbycraft Show, Festival Included in July Events

Whether it's a trip through Traverse City's fabulous cherry orchards or just enjoying the music of an Alpine band while sipping on a frothy beverage, Michiganians planning vacations or weekend trips this month (July) are sure to find something to their liking.

Highlighting the 11 major events that are listed on Automobile Club of Michigan's feature map for July 12 to 25 are Traverse City's Cherry Festival and Gaylord's Alpenfest. The map is the sixth in a series of 14 showing what to do and where to go in the Wolverine State.

Locally, there is Charlevoix's Hobbycraft Show in East Park July 10 and the Venetian Festival, July 23 to 25.

Approximately 300,000 persons are expected to attend the Cherry Festival which runs from July 12-17. Among those attending will be Governor Milliken, Buddy Ebsen of the Beverly Hillbillies TV program, who is grand marshal, and Cherry Queen Trudy Annette Lindsay of Central Michigan University.

Most attention will be directed towards the Grand Cherry Royale Parade on Friday, July 16, at 2 p.m. in downtown Traverse City. Featured will be floats, bands, military color guards plus special dignitaries.

Gaylord's 7th annual Alpenfest, with an emphasis on parades, band concerts, a water show, an all-terrain vehicle race plus loads of free entertainment, runs July 14-17. A crowd of 50,000 is anticipated.

The 75th anniversary of the car will be celebrated during the Automobile Diamond Jubilee July 15-17 at Greenfield Village in Dearborn. The event is open to the public with 500 persons participating in the Jubilee.

Upper Peninsula travelers will find the Ferrous Frolics at Caspian, July 15-18, an interesting attraction. It is to be held in conjunction with the Michigan Artrain, which will be in nearby Iron River. The Artrain is carrying four carloads of paintings, sculptures and carvings to 25 Michigan counties.

The National Camporee, sponsored by the National Square Dance Campers Association is set for July 15-17 at Monroe. Comedian Jackie Vernon is the nightly headliner at the 30th annual Chesaning Showboat, July 12-17.

Cadillac's Centennial celebration July 17-25 will include an antique car parade, art festival, community barbecue dance and youth concert.

The communities of Saugatuck and Douglas will hold a joint Art Fair on July 17 while the Pentwater Art Fair is slated July 16-17.

Tawas Bay will be the site of the second Tawas City Hobie Cat Regatta, July 17-18, while Three Rivers is posting a Water Carnival July 16-17.

MR. AND MRS. Percy Woodcock of Boyne City celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary July 6. A reception was held Sunday at Christ Episcopal Church following the morning service. The Woodcocks were married in 1921 in Kincardine, Ont.

THE PAIR of mallard ducks which won friends up and down Bridge-st. early this spring has survived the first onslaught of summer visitors. The pair was photographed behind the Pine River building last week. The two are so tame that they approach strangers looking for handouts.

DNR Cuts Anterless Deer Kill

Michigan's harvest of antlerless deer will be scaled down to only about 19,000 animals during this fall's Nov. 15-30 firearm deer season, if final recommendations of the Department of Natural Resources are approved.

The DNR's proposed kill quota, some 32 percent below the one it offered a year ago, is scheduled for action by the Natural Resources Commission when it meets July 8-9 at the Higgins Lake Conservation School.

DNR wildlife officials also point out that their recommended kill figure for antlerless deer is 10-percent short of the level ultimately adopted by the Commission in 1970 when the Upper Peninsula was closed to antlerless deer hunting in line with a legislative mandate.

As the DNR's recommendations now stand, the Upper Peninsula would be re-opened to a conservative kill of 6,120 antlerless deer to avoid a "senseless waste" of those animals which would otherwise result from a severe winter.

Also going before the Commission July 8-9 will be a proposal to cut the antlerless deer quota for the northern Lower Peninsula to 8,760 animals. That figure represents a 48-percent reduction from the DNR's suggested quota in 1970.

For the southern Lower Peninsula, where car-deer collisions stir major concern, DNR wildlife leaders are pointing toward a harvest of 4,140 antlerless deer this season. That marks a 8-percent rollback from last year's kill figure for the southern region.

For the Upper Peninsula, the DNR recommends bucks only in Keweenaw County and parts of Gogebic, Ontonagon, Houghton, Baraga, Marquette, Alger, and Delta counties, and only a modest antlerless take in the remainder of the Peninsula.

The Department's recommendation to lift the Upper Peninsula's moratorium on taking antlerless deer is tied to the fact that the region's deer range is steadily worsening and, as such, is aggravating greater food shortages for the animals during the winter.

The impact of this situation, combined with severe weather conditions, was felt last winter when upwards of an estimated 15,000 whitetails were lost to starvation in major yarding areas above the Straits.

"Our recommendations for the 1971 season are designed to head off such a senseless waste by putting some of this winter's potential deer losses into the legal kill column for hunters," explains DNR deer specialist David A. Arnold.

He adds that, in view of the Upper Peninsula's deteriorating deer range, there is no potential for generally increasing the herd there by curtailing or eliminating antlerless deer hunting.

The situation is different in the northern Lower Peninsula where DNR wildlife men are encourage by signs that a better balance has been reached between the deer herd and the carrying capacity of its range in certain deer management units.

Arnold notes:

"As a whole, that region's deer population is only a slightly below what it was 10 years ago. Over the last 15 years, both deer productivity and the general physical condition of the animals have improved in that part of the state."

Arnold goes on to explain that there are two possibilities for helping the deer herd to build up in the northern Lower Peninsula. "First of all, we can continue to raise the carrying capacity there through strategically planned commercial tree cuttings and by moving ahead with habitat improvements where logging operations are not practical."

In the northern Lower Peninsula, the DNR believes the total antlerless deer hunting area should be cut back 34 percent to cover 9,400 square miles. As part of that same plan, it would like to see the region's number of antlerless permits reduced 46 percent to 37,340.

Camp Charlevoix

Corral Chatter

BY KEN

The first week of camp started off Sunday morning with a real hot day greeting us.

Chapel was held on the shore of the lake around the flag pole and everyone enjoyed the beautiful sight of the blue sky, the blue water, and several beautiful boats making their way far out in the lake. Ken gave the talk at this opening service, speaking on "Building a reputation." It was a challenge to the boys to start here with a clean slate and do everything they can to be friendly, cooperative, and to try to make as many new friends as possible. Eric Muskekamp read the Scripture, and David Roe gave the prayer.

At Sunday dinner, the staff was introduced, each man giving his name, college, years in camping, camp speciality, and number of years at Camp Charlevoix. It was all very interesting as we once again have 23 different colleges or universities on the staff. In the afternoon the camp physicals were given and the waterfront on the staff. In the afternoon the camp physicals were given and the waterfront staff gave swim tests. It was a very hot afternoon, and boys enjoyed the lake.

Monday was another very hot day, the temperature getting up to about 88 and though we heard that it was hovering around 100 downstate, we had a delightful day, hot, sunny and the activities started off in great fashion. Boys were anxious to get going, and though it was hot, boys enjoyed all the activities. The waterfront activities were especially popular.

Late afternoon, our overnight trips got underway with our trips man, Curt Huber, taking out his cabin of boys and George Tilton's cabin. The boys on this first overnight were: Frank Perron, and George Tilton's cabin. The boys on this first overnight were: Frank Perron, Steve Horwitz, Aaron Chatterson, Steve Taylor, Eric Muskekamp, David Roe, Mark Wilson, Bill McKee, Bob Swain, Brian Weeks, Jeff Taylor and Jimmy Eberts.

Tuesday was another hot day, great for camping. At the noon meal, it was announced that the election of Green-Grey leaders would take place upon dismissal from the dining room. Boys were excited, as the captains and lieutenants of these teams really have much to do in trying to bring their team to victory in the many events of the summer.

The following boys were chosen as leaders:

The Junior Greens picked Lloyd Collins, Birmingham, as captains with his two lieutenants being: Don Cook, Chicago, and Scott Sohn, Okemos, Mich. The Junior Greys chose: Captain Gordon Bennett, Lathrop Village; Lt. Brad Dillon, Ferndale; and Lt. Bob Batts, Grand Rapids. The Prep Greens picked Peter Kay, Grosse Pointe, as captain with Ben Dancer, Stockbridge, and Pat Green, Algonac, Mich. as lieutenants.

The Prep Greys chose: Bill Hall, Bloomfield Hills, as captain and Russ Epker, Birmingham, and Chris Kelly, Grand Rapids, as lieutenants. The Intermediate Greens chose San Greenawald, Birmingham, as captain. His lieutenants are John Breitinger, Lexington, Ohio, and Mike Hoffman, Indianapolis. The Intermediate Greys are being led by Scott Williams, Bloomfield Hills, as captain, with Lieutenants Dave Townsend, Lynn, Ind., and Jim Shook, Lafayette, Ind.

In the Senior Section, our oldest and biggest boys in camp, the Greens chose Scott Packard, Orchard Lake, as captain, with his lieutenants being Tim Washburn, Detroit, and Frank Perron, Birmingham. The Senior Greys chose Eric Muskekamp, Cincinnati, as captain, with Steve Baker, Milford, and Jim Osborn, Dearborn, as lieutenants. The competition got underway with a track meet on July 4. Jim Osborn, Dearborn, as lieutenants. The competition got underway with a track meet on July 4.

Late afternoon, two cabins took off for an overnight at our campsite down the lake. Eldon Frandzen and Steve Banta took David Townsend, Jim Shook, Billy Guggenheim, Jay O'Neill, Mike Hoffman, and Jim Batts. Fred Matora took his boys, John Breitinger, Rick Coleman, Peter Perron, Scott Williams, Jimmy Chalberg and John Graham.

Wednesday dawned very hot again, but with a nice breeze off the lake to ease the heat. This was the day of the Initiation Council Fire and boys were excited about being brought into the Tribe of Charlevoix. In the evening, new campers were blindfolded and led by old campers down the lake to our Council Ring. Blindfolds were removed, the Council Fire started, the 1970 Spirits were dug up and Ken read several messages left by campers of last summer. Four members of the staff gave talks, each challenging the campers in different areas. The speakers were Chuck Osborn, Ralph Boldt, Andy Case and Dave Tuttle. Bill Townsend, director of activities, summed up the four talks, and directed the two Indian Braves to paint on the forehead of each new camper the camp emblem, and arrow "C". After the singing of taps, the boys filed slowly and thoughtfully out of the Council Ring and back to their cabins.

It was a very impressive ceremony and boys were happy to be formally accepted into the Tribe of Charlevoix. We had a heavy rain in late afternoon, and it was most acceptable as it was much needed.

Thursday morning dawned cloudy and cool, and it seemed great after all the hot weather of the last five days. In the afternoon, Bruce Jendrusia and Gard Garvie took their boys down to the camp-craft area for their first overnight. These boys were Larry Webb, David Howell, Peter Whitman, Howie Kay, Jeff Edison, David Taylor, Harry Heck, Dennis O'Brein, Steve Lichtenauer, Brian Mathews, Skipper Little, Kris Matson and Sanny Greenawald.

Friday was another beautiful day with the temperature about 72. Late afternoon, we had our first trip leave for the Jordan River. This is always a great trip down this famous river, and Tom Dorsek took his cabin of our biggest boys and Curt Huber took his boys, too.

MRS. WILLIAM Haggard and daughter Diane pose with their three prize-winning Newfoundlands.

Newfoundland Dogs Like Charlevoix's Cool Climate

By BETH BALDWIN

If you see a dog that resembles Nana, the faithful nursemaid of "Peter Pan," it could only be one of Mr. and Mrs. William Haggard's three Newfoundlands.

The Haggard's have two males and one female of the Newfoundland breed, two of which they have entered into dog shows. The dogs, Edenglen's Ursa Minor (Henry), Castaway Nor-Wester (Cassy) and Shipshape Sea Skipper (Skipper), have been acquired within the past year.

Henry and Cassy have only recently been entered into shows. On May 1 at the Wayne County Dog Show, Henry, handled by Haggard, took Best of Breed which earned him two points toward his championship.

At the May 31 Ann Arbor show, Henry took Best of Winners and Cassy won Best of Opposite Sex. Cassy was only seven months at the time. She also took a First in Puppy Class in the Toledo show with the Haggard's daughter, Diane, showing her.

In the two months of showing, the Haggards have accumulated six trophies, four of them Henry's.

All the dogs have famous ancestors. Henry's grandparents are the cover dogs for the books on Newfoundlands. Another grandfather was a Canadian champion and a Swiss import.

Skipper's father was the sixth champion in 1969 and his grandmother was the top producing dame in 1969.

Cassy's father was the sixth champion in 1970.

At the present, Cassy has one point toward her championship. Henry has seven, four of which he has earned since the Haggards acquired him.

The Haggard's have bred Henry and his first litter was due this past week. They will be available when eight weeks old.

A Newfoundland is a gentle friendly dog who does not like to be left alone. According to Mrs. Haggard, Charlevoix's climate is almost ideal for them. The dog requires little training and housebreaking is easily learned.

The Newfoundland is famous for it's lifesaving ability and its even disposition makes it a favorite with handicapped children.

The most common coloring of the Newfoundland is black, although some are black and white or even gray.

Library Notes

The Library has a special section of "easy" books for the very young fry and pre-schooler. We thought we would suggest some nice and easy adult books for the lazy summer days ahead. These titles are especially recommended for hammock reading with a tall, cool glass of lemonade close by.

"Lonesome Traveler" was written by Weldon Hill who also wrote "Rafe". The author has been called a modern Mark Twain, and patrons who have read one of his tender and good-humored books won't want to miss this one. It is the story of Clem Marlow, 14 years old, just about penniless, without family except for his mother who lies in a hospital 700 miles away. Clem is so lonely for her that he sets off in a small cart drawn by his pet burro, Pedro and his Duke, to find her. It is an incredible journey from Oklahoma to New Mexico, and the boy meets an astonishing collection of people along the way.

"The Prosecutor" is a new novel by James Mills, associate editor for Life Magazine where a substantial portion of the book originally appeared. The book, which is fact not fiction, examines not only a trio of New York City's recent murders but the widespread fear that the balance between the protection of society and the rights of the accused has gone off-kilter. It makes easy, fascinating reading.

"The Girl in Melanie Klein" by Ronald Harwood, is a humorous, suspenseful and entertaining book about a posh asylum in suburban London called The Nest. A strange group of people are mixed up in the plot, the main character being a beautiful and young girl, Niobe, who arrives with her own ghosts brought on by a terrifying experience.

"Mister Fisherman" is another fine book by Jack Bennett, author of "Jamie." This new book is a moving and refreshing story of Pillay, the fisherman, and his tourist-passenger, Faraday. They have fished throughout the day as strangers, separated by the force of racial difference. And then, miles off a remote stretch of South African coast, the engine of the small fishing boat breaks down. They face gale storms and killer whales, and the end of the book leaves the reader with a great deal to think about.

"The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight" by Jimmy Breslin is a light-hearted book about the Mafia. There is Papa Baccalá and Kid Sally Palumbo and a peppery old party named Big Mama Ferrara. It is high adventure in fine Sicilian style and everybody gets his, in a manner of speaking.

Miss Odmark Plays With Ferris Band

Julie Odmark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Odmark of Charlevoix, is one of 23 select high school musicians who joined the Ferris State College band during commencement exercises in June.

Miss Odmark has been accepted for enrollment at Ferris.

George C. Wilson, interim president of the National Music Camp and the Interlochen Arts Academy, served as guest conductor for the Honors Clinic Band.

FASTPITCH TIED

The two Banks, County state and First State, remained tied for the league lead after last week's play. First State was forced to share the top spot when County State got two markers in the ninth inning to post a 12-10 win in a real slugfeast. Tom Drenth broke the contest open with a home run.

Potter's Appliance won an exciting 5-4 contest from Novak's. The Potter brothers, Larry and Jim opposed each other on the mound.

Jimg

Jim got the win allowing five hits while Larry was tagged with the loss, allowing the same number. Clay Jones had two hits for the winners while Terry Blissett homered for the losers.

First State Bank hung a 10-0 whitewash job on Potters with veteran Nate Boss hurling a sharp one-hitter. The only hit was an infield variety that eluded several infielders. Boss banged three hits as did teammate Lee Cross.

County State Bank came from behind with two seventh inning runs to nip Morweld 7-6. John Ferguson and Mike Crain combined hits for the key runs. Pitcher Tom Drenth, in relief of Ed Holm, picked up the win and also homered for the Bank boys.

American Dream Best, Tarnish and All

There was a breach of national etiquette in East Park Wednesday night during the band concert that is symptomatic of the national illness.

A number of young park habitues -- both boys and girls -- refused to stand during the playing of the National Anthem.

While old people and toddlers rose to their feet, at least a half dozen members of the younger generation refused to budge. They remained recumbent on the lawn throughout the playing of the anthem, apparently enjoying the looks of puzzlement and annoyance cast in their direction by other concert-goers.

Of course, there is no law that we know of requiring Americans to rise to their feet when the National Anthem is played. To do so is simply one means of paying a modicum of respect to that odd conglomeration of people, ideas and ideals we call the United States of America.

Even strangers to our shores usually stand with the rest of us when the Star Spangled Banner is played, and Americans abroad do the same when they hear the national anthems of other countries.

Not to do so would show a lack of common courtesy.

Then why did a handful of young people chose to ignore the National Anthem in East Park last Wednesday night?

Of course, their reasons are their own. No one asked them why they failed to stand. No police officer prodded them in the ribs with a heavy boot and ordered them to rise. There were no taunts, no insults. For the most part they were ignored.

However, we suspect that somewhere near the root of their reluctance to pay so slight an homage to their nation is the Vietnam War -- certainly the most unjustified commitment of troops in the history of the United States. The slaughter has been heinous and the immorality of our involvement is becoming more apparent with every passing day.

Yet we would like to remind the young people who refused to stand for the National Anthem that all nations -- even great nations -- make mistakes from time to time.

But one mistake, or even a dozen mistakes, does not mean that everything the United States has stood for the past 195 years is bad.

Even though we have permitted our elected leaders to abridge the Constitution and ignore the Bill of Rights, the power of the nation still rests with the people. And the people have acknowledged their mistake in Vietnam and are ready to make amends.

When a fellow stands up for the National Anthem he isn't paying tribute to a pot-bellied politician in Washington, a conniving war-profiteer in Detroit or a spit-and-polish brass hat in the Pentagon.

He is simply reaffirming his belief that the American dream is still the best dream going, tarnish and all.

Speak Up! I Can't Hear You!

Mrs. Julius Gilbert is concerned over an increase in "noise pollution" in Charlevoix — particularly the noon siren and the curfew siren at 9:30 each evening. She asked to have the following article reprinted in the Charlevoix Courier.

GENEVA (UPI) - Acoustics experts said Wednesday everyone living in a city could be stone deaf by the year 2000 if noise keeps rising at present rates.

The International Standardization Organization said "noise pollution" has become a serious health hazard.

Urban noise, it said, has been rising at the rate of one decibel a year and if this continues "every city dweller will be stone deaf by the year 2000."

The ISO questioned where the use of "noise-making machines" in New York City, a place where the fire service was forced to install louder sirens to penetrate the din on the streets.

Many New Yorkers like the sound of waterfalls in particular, it said, and use machines reproducing this sound to drown out street noise.

"There is evidence, however, that by adding to the total noise assault on the ear, the noise machines merely make a bad situation worse from a health point of view," the ISO said.

The maximum permissible noise level should be 85 decibels because at 90 noise becomes dangerous to health and at 100 noise can deafen a person for life, the organization said.

By comparison, a riveting gun reaches a level of 130 and a jet aircraft, 150.

Hails New Airstrip On Island

July 1, 1971

To the Editor:

As a frequent visitor to Beaver Island, I believe Donald Nelson has done a positive service to both island residents and visitors by constructing a landing strip in the vicinity of Cable Bay.

Mr. Nelson admittedly extended the runway from private property onto state land, but the added length will permit the landing of planes larger than Nelson's own 205 Cessna, which has been converted for short landings and take-offs.

Fliers now have a "harbor of refuge" at Cable Bay that they didn't have before.

The portion of Mr. Nelson's runway on state land actually amounts to little more than a leveling of the terrain to permit safe landings and take-offs by larger planes.

Rather than objecting to the new airstrip, residents of Peaine Township and the Peaine Township Board should be thankful for Mr. Nelson's project, which could benefit everyone of them in an emergency.

Mr. Bob Clock,
The Charlevoix Courier

Dear Mr. Clock:

Looking back on history, it is difficult to find a single secret agreement between governments that helped the common man.

Our recent administrations have run true to form. Their secrets, plus the gyrations they have performed in guiding us through foreign relations, now seem to be surfacing.

These published revelations make one think of old Diogenes with his lantern, searching for an honest man. Consider the frustration he would have at present, even with modern illumination, looking through our government offices in Washington for a man with wisdom.

Dejectedly,
Geddie.

Does Organic Food Really Taste Better?

(Editor's Note: The following letter was sent by Mrs. Rosalie Ottinger of R-1, Charlevoix, founder of the North Michigan Chapter of the National Health Federations, to Huge Downs of N.B.C. TV network, relative to organically grown foods.)

June 9, 1971

Mr. Huge Downs
N.B.C. Television
New York, New York

Dear Mr. Downs:

I wish to ask you to write me and make a statement like you did on the Today show this morning. You said something to the effect that you thought your taste buds were deteriorating and, that after you started eating organically grown foods, you realized they tasted like foods did when you were a youngster.

You certainly had a marvelous show this morning. I am referring to your interview with the gentleman telling of the Division of Wild Life Services of our government using the formula 1080 by the tons to poison the coyote with the inevitable, widespread and devastating results, and also the report about the two organic gardeners. But nothing has ever pleased me as much as to hear your statement. I'm willing to admit tears of joy came into my eyes.

I am asking this because the Federated Organic Clubs of Michigan (Mr. Earl Madsen, Pres. 185, Grove St., Parma, Mi. 49296) as well as our own Boyne Valley Club, (Ray McCraney Pres., Rt 2, Boyne City, Mi. 49712) would be so glad to be able to use it to influence others in the organic way. It is not for the profit motive I ask this, because all of the people in the Clubs that I know of already have more customers than they can supply, but because we believe it is not only a healthier life, but also one that causes far less pollution. Contamination in the water is nutrition in the soil.

Not many of us are vegetarians as were your people this morning, but we applaud them none the less. In fact, this brings up the point I wish to make. In this type of organization we bridge the generation gap. The young people love us and we them. They trust us because they know we believe in our cause, as do they. It seems they have grown tired, skeptical, and finally hostile with most of their relationships. It not only bridges this gap, but it also overrides political and religious differences. This is a near miracle.

I would like to carry this a step further. I am organizing The North Michigan Chapter of the National Health Federation, a California charter. In my work, I have been invited to speak to the local Audubon Society. While thinking about my topic, I suddenly realized that the National Health Federation is one organization that encompasses all pollution control and ecological groups. It is actively interested in everything that effects the health of the nation. This organization also bridges the generation gap and the political and religious barriers. If there is any approach to unison which will reduce the contamination of our foods and environment, this has got to be it. It also embraces organic gardening.

So Mr. Downs, I ask a lot from you I know, but not only do I hope to get your statement, but I ask and hope you will get in touch with the National Health Federation, P.O. Box 686, Monrovia, Calif. 91016 and have one of the personell appear on the 'Today show.

Thank you again for your understanding and your statement.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Rosalie Ottinger

Group Lauds 'Times' for Viet Papers

The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, (WILPF) commended the New York Times for publishing the Pentagon Papers. A statement from the League's Policy Committee follows:

"We support the people's right to a free press and the obligation of the press to provide access to the truth. Our government has misled and misinformed the Congress and the people concerning our involvement in Indochina. The Nixon administration follows a continuing policy of reluctant negotiations, reliance on military power, and a controlled press.

The Pentagon's withholding of information under the pretext of the requirements of national security has disregarded the fundamental right of the people in a democracy to be informed. The people of this nation now discovering this violation of their rights should demand that the government cease concealment and falsification of facts and the manipulation of public opinion."

They also congratulated CBS on producing and showing "Selling of the Pentagon" and supported the network's right to withhold source material from a congressional investigating committee.

Smith Clan Genealogist Thanks Those Who Helped

(Editor's Note: Frank Van Rensselaer Phelps of King of Prussia, Pa., was in Charlevoix in early June doing geneological research on the Smith family.)

June 28, 1971

Mr. Robert Clock, Editor,
The Charlevoix Courier,
111 Bridge Street,
Charlevoix, Michigan 49720

Dear Bob,

I just want to tell you how much I appreciated your courtesy and that of the fine folk in the Courier office in allowing me to review the old issues on microfilm and helping me find what I needed - that day and a half four weeks ago. When I finished transcribing the obituaries dictated into my recorder, the total of them reached 41, covering 1909 thru 1970, and they furnish a mountain of facts most pertinent to my research on the Smith families of Tim the sailor and Thomas the light house keeper of Beaver Island and their brother of the distinctive name, Flavius Josephus Smith. The genealogical value of these facts far exceeds what had been anticipated. Please accept my thanks for yourself and your fine staff.

My wife and I enjoyed the whole visit to Charlevoix: the clean town, the friendly people; and I the cordial and cooperative help encoutnered in my research; at the city hall, at Brookside Cemetery by Mr. Barrett and by various persons in the County Building, especially in the County Clerk's Office where they had me on their hands most of three days.

Some of my distant cousins I had the pleasure of meeting but there are a host of others in Charlevoix and nearby that time and opportunity did not permit visiting. Now, since coming home to King of Prussia, my copies of The Courier have become, even more meaningful and are looked forward to each week, and are enjoyed, thoroughly, Clockwise and otherwise.

Rest assured, Bob, this is one subscription that will be renewed perpetually.

Best regards,
Frank Phelps

LET'S KEEP FISHING GOOD...PREVENT FOREST FIRES!

Clockwise

By BOB CLOCK

Back last February when the snow lay in great, rolling drifts in the backyard at 207 E. Dixon-ave., I looked out of our kitchen window and started dreaming about a vegetable garden.

"We'll start it back by the lilac bush," I told the kids, "and it will run over into the peony bed."

"What lilac bush?" Jennifer asked, peering out at the vast, unbroken arctic wilderness."

"You can't see it now," I explained. "It's under a snowbank. But there'll come a day when the snow will melt and we'll all work in the garden."

What actually got me thinking in terms of a vegetable garden were the bumper crops harvested last fall by the Albert Lehmans across the alley. The Lehmans not only kept most of the neighborhood supplies with fresh vegetables in season, but they all froze tons of green beans, beets and raspberries, some of which we inherited when they decided to spend the winter in California.

"Think of the money we'd save on food if we had our own garden!" I told Judy, and she agreed.

Of course, planning a garden and planting one are two different things. Spring was late in coming, and it was too cold to work outdoors until late May.

Furthermore, the site I selected was solid turf which had to be dug up by hand three times and roto-tilled (with Bert Lehmun's roto-tiller) before it even began to look like garden soil.

On Memorial Day, we planted our first crops—a dozen tomato plants and a dozen pepper plants. And then we held our breath for a week hoping that there wouldn't be another frost.

The following weekend we planted the rest of the garden: a row of leaf lettuce and another row of radishes; two rows of green beans, three rows of corn and another row of cucumbers.

A full month has passed and I am happy to report that the garden looks just like I had imagined it would from the kitchen window. The leaf lettuce is a pale green, in sharp contrast to the more robust green of the tomatoes, peppers, beans and other plants.

Dirt Farmer

But on closer inspection, my garden doesn't look too red hot and I suspect I have bugs. The bean leaves are riddled with holes, some of the cucumber plants have been gnawed off at the ground line.

Furthermore, you can see where something has been boring into the radishes and the bottom leaves on the tomato plants are beginning to curl. I think it is called "tomato leaf curl."

Rain scattered the lettuce seeds and we now have lettuce coming up where there should be crabgrass and burdock.

The only crop that really looks healthy is the corn, but it wasn't even close to being "Knee-high on the Fourth of July." Some of it wasn't even ankle high, so I'm not inviting anyone over for a corn roast right away.

All of which makes me think my "green thumb" has Dutch elm disease or something. The first garden Judy and I planted down in the steaming hinterlands of Oakland County grew so prodigiously that we ended up boiling lettuce like spinach just to get rid of it.

If it Fitz

By JIM FITZGERALD

A Massachusetts man has been buried beneath the 18th green at his favorite golf course. I guess he was dead.

If I am ever buried on a golf course it will be because I committed suicide there and no one would drag my body away.

Golf is an incredibly stupid game. Hit a ball and then look for it and then hit it again. I don't know why I play. Tennis is really my game but I can never get a court. It has been 24 years since I played tennis which will give you an idea how crowded the courts are - and how hard I've tried to get one.

I often tell people I was once tennis champ of Port Huron. Usually, I tell them after I play golf with them. I want them to understand that golf is too slow a game for an athlete of my vigorous abilities. Any old man can play golf, I tell them with a sneer as I pay what I owe for losing 18 holes, 3 balls and 1 friend who was my partner.

"Yes," the golfers with my money usually say, "but fat old men can't play tennis so it is easy to see why you switched to golf."

That's another thing I've discovered about golf – a lot of wise guys play it. They are always saying things that upset my game and my stomach.

For instance, I slam my usual drive smack down the center, at least 30 feet. "That won't hurt you," says Harvey Hustler. What he means is that lousy drive won't kill me, it will just leave me maimed and limping. It is the lousiest shot he ever saw and 15 more just like it might get me on the green which is that pretty patch of grass with the hole in it in case I've never been there before.

Another thing Harvey often says is, "You had the distance." This means I should have hit the ball 200 yards and, by golly, I did hit it 200 yards. The tourble is I should have hit it north but I hit it south.

The reverse of this comes when Harvey says, "You hit it right on line." This means I pounded that ball straight at the hole, 350 yards away. But the ball went only 20 yards.

And at the end of the game as he takes my money, Harvey explains that I got a lot of tough breaks out there today, while he was lucky, and if a couple of putts had dropped for me it would have been a different story, fella, and my game is getting better all the time and I'm sure to get my money back next week.

Harvey knows it wouldn't help my game if I were Arnold Palmer's little brother. He knows if a long putt had dropped for me I would have got 7 on the hole, instead of 8. He knows I have been playing the stupid game for 15 years and I still address the ball as if I'm afraid it will attack my right foot. He knows all these things but he still mouths the bologna for fear I might quit playing him and he'd have to get his booze money by some more honorable means – such as pawning his mother's wheelchair.

The only time Harvey's language gets precise is when he asks for my score on a hole.

"Let's see," I say, and then I get a faraway look in my eyes and move my lips slowly as my mind backtracks through 2 traps, the right rough, the woods on the left, a rockpile, the freeway, the bushes by the pro shop and that lake where 2 fishermen threatened to sue. "I think I got a 5."

"You got an 11," Harvey says, and writes it down - in ink.

I don't know what bugs me worse, his fountain pen or the money changer he wears on his belt.

But back to the Massachusetts man. I wasn't kidding. His name was Edward Faber and his ashes are buried beneath the 18th green at Stow Acres Country Club in Stow, Mass. Cremation was necessary because the greenskeeper didn't want lumps in the green.

Faber, requested the unusual burial site in his will. "He just loved the game so much and this is what he really wanted," his widow explained.

Owners of the club are so enthusiastic about the idea they plan to erect a plaque to mark the grave. The possibilities do appear promising. Why not a grave or two at every green, and perhaps some by the traps and rough? A guy wouldn't mind attending a funeral if he could chip up onto the burying surface. Of course, the undertaker would have to add a few services - such as caddies for pallbearers - but I'm sure all such problems could be solved with a minimum of keening.

Just so long as slow funerals allow faster funerals to play through.

Onward and Upward.

Only 800 Pairs of Eagles Remain in North America

The killing of 48 eagles in Wyoming recently has alarmed naturalists fighting to save them from extinction in North America.

About 30 bald and golden eagles were felled by poison bait presumobly set out to kill coyotes. Fifteen birds were electrocuted when they landed on power lines. And although they are protected by federal law, at least three golden eagles were shot by hunters.

The great birds that once were seen over most of the United States are found today chiefly in Wyoming, Montana, Idaho and California, the National Geographic Society says. Some spend winters in Texas and New Mexico.

SPECIES DWINDLES

About 800 pairs of nesting eagles remain in the United States, Assistant Secretary of the Interior Nathaniel Reed reports, and their future is uncertain.'

In 1967 researchers found only 18 pairs of golden eagles in a 1,260-square-mile area of Montana, or one pair for every 70 square miles. Poisons and hunting continue to take their toll, and conservationists had hoped Wyoming's remote canyons might provide a refuge.

At least 20,000 golden eagles were shot by hunters using light planes in the 20 years before the practice was banned in 1962. Today, both golden eagles and bald eagles are on the Interior Department list of endangered species. Killing them is a federal offense.

'Feather'd King

While the bald eagle is America's national bird, Persian armies and Roman legions marched behind the standards of the golden eagle. Shakespeare described it as a "Feather'd king."

In falconry, only kings and emperors were permitted to hunt with the eagles. The spirited birds were used for hunting in the time of Kublai Khan, and hunters still employ them in parts of China and the Soviet Union.

By the time an eaglet is four weeks old its sight is eight times sharper than a man's. Its remarkable eyes can focus from telescopic almost to microscopic vision, and a mature golden eagle can detect a rabbit fully half a mile away.

The eagles suffer unfairly for their reputation as hunters. Ranchers kill them for allegedly preying on sheep. But studies indicate the birds live mainly on rabbits, squirrels, snakes, ans smaller birds and rarely on sheep.

A survey in Scotland showed that in a region producing some 4,000 sheep in five years, only seven became meals for eagles. These may have been lambs that died at birth, for eagles will feed on carrion.

Naturalist John Craighead reported in the September, 1967, issue of National Geographic that observations of the remains of 980 animals found in 38 aeries in Montana disclosed only two lambs, and these may have been dead before the eagles flew off with them.

The golden eagles' chances of making a comeback remain slim. The birds mature at five years and may live more than 40. But a pair produces less than two eggs in two years, and not all of these hatch.

Some eaglets die in falls from clifftop nests. Other eagles elude hunters only to alight on power poles, cross the wires by flapping their six-foot wings, and electrocute themselves.

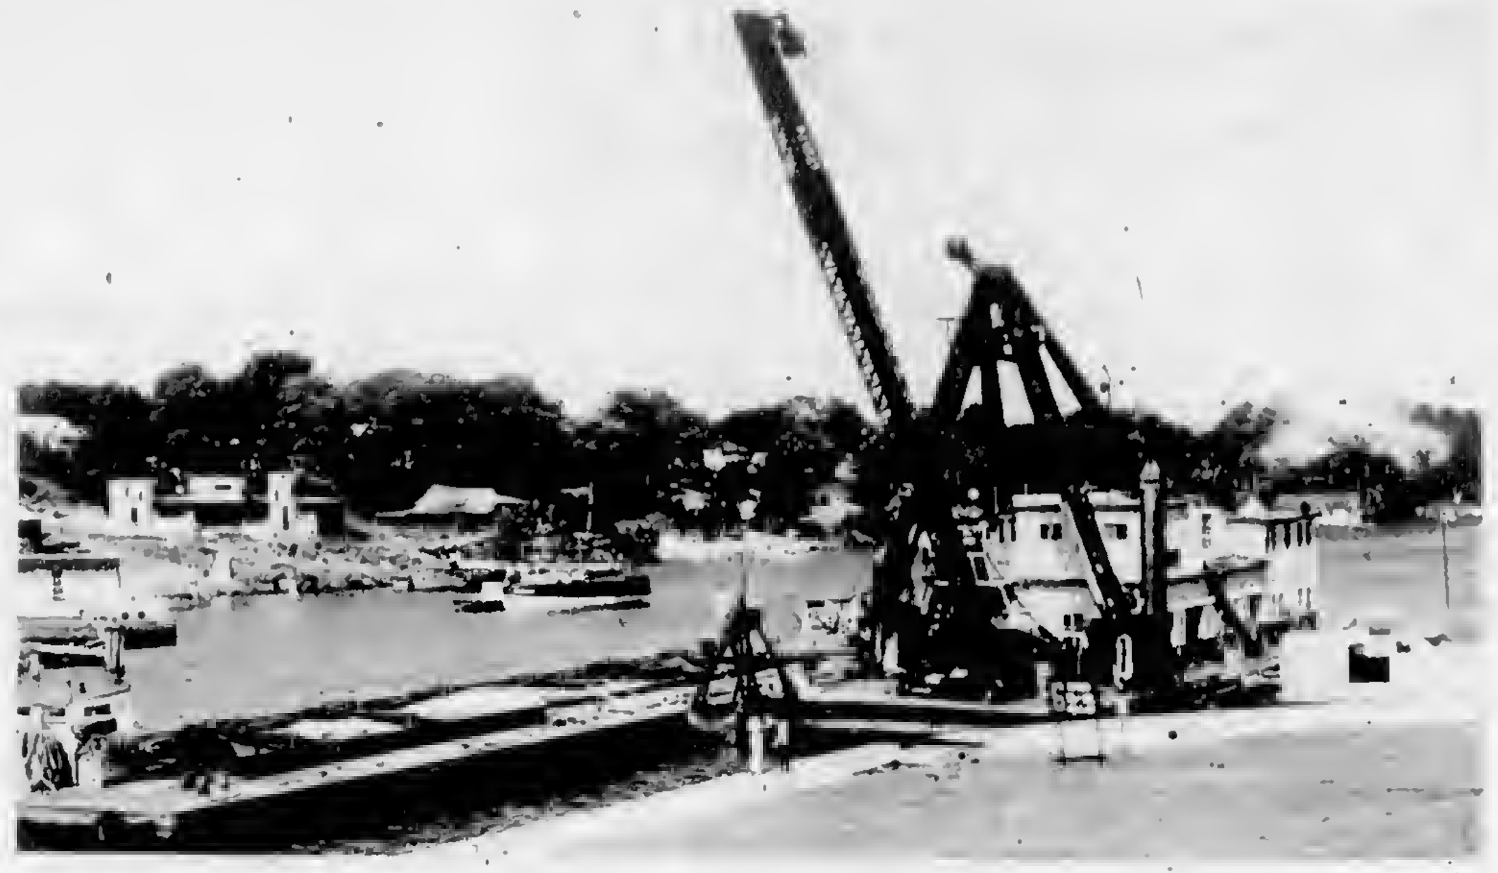
Bus Run Starting Thursday

North Star Lines, Inc. has announced the addition of two daily trips North from Traverse City to Mackinaw City via Elk Rapids, Charlevoix and Petoskey and two trips southbound from Mackinaw City via the same towns.

The new service, in effect Thursday, July 7, will allow passengers to travel between the four towns for shopping, visiting, and sight-seeing and to return home the same day, if desired.

"We know many persons like to shop in these neighboring towns," stated William Post, president of North Star Lines, Inc., "and our runs have been planned to allow time for this. They have also been scheduled to aid vacationers. The bus which leaves Traverse City at 2 in the afternoon, for instance, originates in Grand Rapids at 10:30 AM and reaches the boat docks for Mackinac Island at 5:10 in the afternoon."

Effective date of these new runs coincides with North Star's new schedules which run from Holland, Muskegon, Manistee to Traverse City and northwards.



THE U.S. Army Corps of Engineers workboat Tompkins moved into Charlevoix last week to make temporary repairs to the Pine River Channel revetment. Above, the shovel-equipped vessel lays a blanket of crushed stone behind the revetment on the southeast side of the channel. The Corps of Engineers tug Forney also was in town last week.

City Council

Construction has men and equipment on the plant site and work is progressing, according to City Superintendent Thomas Hanna.

In other action relative to the waste water plant project, the council:

–Agreed to retain former City Attorney John Michael and the Grand Rapids law firm Mika, Meyers, Beckett and Jones (represented by Steven Dykema) for the duration of the Shaw-Henderson litigation.

--Established a separate Capital Improvement Fund to receive waste water treatment plant funds.

In other business the council:

–Heard a request by Paul Olsen, representing Paul-Reed, to purchase city-owned land near the plant for expansion purposes. Olsen said the plant will run out of land for expansion in about two and one-half years. A 7,000-square-foot addition to the plant is planned for this fall. The council told him that land formerly optioned to Robert Dyksterhouse will be available shortly and that he will be notified when it is ready for sale. Paul-Reed manufactures "Hot-Seats", gun cases and other items.

–Received a check for $5,000 from Hopeo Engineering of Grand Rapids for the purchase of two diesel engines from the power plant.

--Received a map from Charlevoix Township Supervisor Oscar Stroud showing the layout of proposed water lines in the township and the location of proposed wells near the intersection of Martin-rd. and Waller-rd. The water lines are planned for North Point, Pa-Ba-Shan Lane, Mercer-blvd. 1,300 feet south of Waller-rd. and along Waller-rd. to Steve LaBlance's proposed plant. Stroud originally asked the city to supply water to the township, but the council was reluctant to act because it was uncertain how much water the township would need.

--Authorized the city treasurer to deposit tax monies on a day-to-day basis at the most favorable interest rate. Tax notices were mailed July 1.

–Learned that the Department of Natural Resources has approved Charlevoix's application for recreation bond money ($10,700) to build two tennis courts but that the allocation must be approved by the state Legislature.

THE NEW Charlevoix County Jail near Garfield and Grant-sts. is open for business, according to Sheriff Philo Sumner.

Death Claims Dr. Grate, Retired Charlevoix M.D.

A private funeral service for Lawrence E. Grate, M.D., 57, will be held at the Winchester Funeral Home at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday, with burial in Brookside Cemetery.

Dr. Grate, who practiced medicine in Charlevoix for 23 years before his retirement in 1967, died Sunday while visiting relatives in Detroit.

For the past 10 months, he has made his home in Ellsworth with Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Taylor. He also conducted a limited medical practice in Ellsworth.

Born in Detroit June 25, 1914, Dr. Grate entered the U.S. Navy after graduation from the Wayne State University Medical School and served as a medical officer during World War II.

He moved to Charlevoix in 1946 following his discharge, entering practive with Dr. G.B. Saltonstall. He was forced into semi-retirement in 1967 because of ill health.

He was a member of the Michigan Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He also was a member and past president of the Mt. McSauba Recreation Association in Charlevoix.

He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. James (Suzanne) Reis of Charlevoix and Cincinnati; Mrs. William (Ina) Fochtman of Charlevoix; and Mrs. John (Margaret) Yarwood of Albuquerque, N.M.; a son, Harry Stutt of Detroit; seven grandchildren and three brothers, Kenneth of Ortonville, Ellsworth of Detroit and Ralph of Holly.

The family suggests that anyone wishing to honor his memory should contribute in his name to Charlevoix Hospital.

LAWRENCE E. GRATE, M.D.

Charlevoix County Loses 127 Farms in 5 Years

Charlevoix county showed a total of 278 farms in the 1969 Census of Agriculture, according to figures released by the U.S. Department of Commerce's Bureau of the Census.

In the last previous Census of Agriculture (1964) the number of farms reported in the county was 405, a decrease of 127 farms.

Of the county's total farms in 1969, 121 are reported as selling $2,500 or more of agricultural products in the year, as compared with 153 in 1964.

The report also shows average farm size in the county was 183.8 acres, and average value of these farms (land and buildings) was $33,714.

Other figures from the report are:

1. Value of all farm products sold in 1969, $1,799,615; in 1964, $1,619,650.

2. Value of all crops sold in 1969, $366,817; in 1964, $454,727.

3. Value of all livestock, poultry, and their products sold in 1969, $1,350,723; in 1964, $1,116,602.

Reported for the first time in an agricultural census is information on the extent to which the corporate structure is being used by operators of farms from which agricultural products totaling $2,500 and over were sold. Including family farms using this type of business structure, 1 of the county's $2,500-and-over farms is incorporated.

Essenburg to Take Bonds to Detroit

Mayor Andrew Essenburg will hand-carry $700,000 in general obligation bonds for Charlevoix's new waste water treatment plant to Detroit on Wednesday for signing in the offices of bonding attorneys Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone.

City Superintendent Thomas Hanna said the bonds will be signed by City Clerk Ida Heise in Charlevoix, but will not be co-signed by the Mayor Essenburg until he reaches Detroit.

He said the unusual signing procedure is a precautionary measure, because once the bonds are co-signed they are "negotiable instruments."

Essenburg will then turn the bonds over to Kenower-McArthur Co., the purchaser, and receive a check for the money drawn on the Michigan National Bank, paying agent.

Hanna says the money will be banked, with interest amounting to about $100 a day.

STUDENTS at Charlevoix's sheltered workshop took a trip to Beaver Island aboard the Beaver Islander on Friday. It was the first time many of the students had visited "America's Emerald Isle."

Petoskey-rd. Springs Leak

Petoskey-rd. near Ainslie-st. has sprung a leak.

But repairs were scheduled for Tuesday.

City Superintendent Thomas Hanna said a main under the newly-paved section of roadway erupted on Friday.

However, he held off repairs until after the weekend traffic rush.

Hodgkiss and Douma of Petoskey just completed repaving the Petoskey-rd. bend with non-skid material.

Water from the broken main ran harmlessly down a nearby storm-sewer.

Board Re-elects Jerrald Redeker

Last Offer Final, Teachers Told

Jerrald Redeker was re-elected president of the Charlevoix Board of Education at its organizational meeting Monday night.

Richard Donaldson was re-elected vice president; Mrs. Janet G. Lieberman, secretary and Charles Elzinga, one of two new members on the board, secretary.

Other members are Larry Warner, who was elected to the board in June, Clement J. Wagner and Burr Blanchard.

In other action, the First State Bank and the Charlevoix County State Bank were designated as depositories; the president, secretary and treasurer were named signatories of the following accounts: general fund, old debt retirement, new debt retirement, Ironton debt retirement, building and site-land, payroll, public library, Title 1 and Materials Center.

Monday was selected as the regular meeting night with meetings scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at the Charlevoix High School building. An effort was made to change the date to the second Tuesday of the month in order that board members may attend council meetings. However, it was brought out that the Charlevoix Courier is printed on Tuesday and that this should be taken into consideration. After the proposal for Tuesday night meetings was vetoed by a vote of 4-2, a second proposal to hold regular meetings on the second Monday of the month was approved by a vote of 5-1 with one member absent.

In accepting the presidency for a second term, Redeker said he would not have considered accepting the post a second time if it were not for "our superintendent, Robert Miller, who, as administrator, has made our job so much easier."

The board went into a short executive session to brief the new members on the proposed terms being offered the teachers by the school board negotiators. Upon re-opening the meeting, Redeker said, in behalf of the board, that the board could not offer any additional salaries above these offered in view of revenue available and that the board did not intend to seek additional millage at this time.

Redeker appointed Donaldson to the negotiating team of the Board of Education after Supt. Robert L. Miller asked to be relieved of his position on the team. He asked to be relieved because, he said, "the teachers have no confidence in me and as a result I am no good to the board or the teachers."

Only one bid was received for the house built on Hampton Road by the Building Trades class. The bid, submitted by Mr. and Mrs. James Boggs, was in the amount of $28,000 and was accepted by the board. The date for closing the contract was extended to 60 days to allow time for financing through the V.A.

Bids for the two driver training cars being sold to the highest bidder were opened after the board had established the minimum bid to be accepted. The minimum for the vehicle, a Kingswood station wagon with air conditioning, was set at $3,500 and for the vehicle without an air conditioner $3,200. Only one bid was received for each of the cars. Since both were below the minimum for the two cars which are little more than five months old ($3,250.51 for the former and $3,001.51 for the latter) the bids were not accepted. It was decided to solicit prices from dealers and or wholesalers.

Following action by the board, two new vocational classes will be offered this fall, auto mechanics and commercial foods.

The board was advised that school had been offered a lease agreement by Bruce Donaldson for his Southgate property complete with the large equipment in the garage. He is asking $6,500 per year for five years with an option to buy. If the property is purchased by the school, the monies paid will be applied to the purchase price of $60,000. Included in the proposal are the building on the site and seven acres of land located on U.S. 31 South.

The board voted to accept the offer and will confer with Donaldson on a contract. James Shepherd, Voc-Ed director for the Intermediate school district, advised that some financial aid would be available.

The board's decision came

Lake Survey Team To Visit Sept. 22

Lake Survey Center's Revisory Section began its usual three-year chart revisory survey of the harbors of Lake Michigan on June 28.

The Lake Michigan operations will take them on a complete circuit of the Lake, beginning at Port Washington on the western side, heading counterclockwise, and ending at Sheboygan sometime late in November. On the way back to Detroit, the unit will cover the St. Clair River and the easterly portion of Lake St. Clair, reaching home port in Detroit in mid-December.

The surveyors will reach Charlevoix on Sept. 22.

William J. Monteith is the engineer in charge of the Revisory Section, which is using the 54-foot, electronically equipped survey boat "Laidly" to carry out its mission. The part welcomes visitors aboard and will be glad to answer questions about the work being done or about other Lake Survey activities.

The survey team covered the Detroit River and the western portion of Lake St. Clair before heading for Lake Michigan.

News Gals to Frolic At E. J. Convention

Approximately 50 members of the Michigan Women's Press Club are making plans for their first convention in northern Michigan, scheduled Aug. 6 to 8 at East Jordan.

Mrs. William (Doris) Huckle of East Jordan, a free-lance writer-photographer, is in charge of the program, which will include a canoe trip down the Jordan River, a visit to the 9th annual Portside Arts Fair in East Jordan's Memorial Park, a trout cookout at Schuss Mountain and a lumberjack breakfast at the East Jordan Snowmobile clubhouse.

Mrs. Huckle also has lined up what is billed as a "nighttime adventure in the woods" for press club colleagues.

Attending the convention will be general assignment writers, women's page editors, free-lancers, publishers and others involved in news work.

Charter members from the area include Mrs. Huckle and Mrs. Luise Leismer-Mahon, former women's editor of the Petoskey News-Review who now is a staff writer for the Detroit News.

Beware of Fly-by-Night Septic Tank Pumpers

District Health Dept. No. 3 reminds residents of the area that they should exercise extreme care in selecting septic tank pumpers.

"Every summer there are a few fly-by-night operators who bilk the public by charging excessive fees for pumping," the Health Department points out.

In addition to excessive fees, the fly-by-nighters often fail to empty the tank completely.

"Many of these operators are not licenses and do not have an approved place to dump their trucks," the Health Department says.

The Health Department offers the following advice:

"When approached or solicited by these pumpers, ask to see their current license.

"There must be, on both sides of the vehicle, printed in letters about two inches high 'M.D.H. licensed vehicle,' followed by the license number and a seal indicating the year for which the license is valid.

"If you are not satisfied as to the legality of the operator, refuse to do business with him and report the incident to the Health Department for follow-up.

"It pays to employ local reputable pumpers," the Health Department concludes. "You will get a much better job done, cheaper and with less environmental damage as a result of indiscriminate dumping."

Nancy Stevens Will Assist Multiply-Handicapped Kids

WANTED!

Children: For Their Own Good

Multiply handicapped children are those who suffer from two or more disabilities. One of the major problems facing the parents of multiply handicapped children is finding programs for training and treatment.

Responding to the need for special services, the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District is now offering consultant and coordination services to meet the needs of these children. This program is federally funded under Title VI-A of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

This program is designed to serve severely handicapped children who are between the ages of birth and 25 and are now being served by a school program.

In order to implement this program, a Title VI consultant, Mrs. Nancy Stevens, has been employed. As part of Mrs. Stevens' job, she will survey the Intermediate School District to find children who might value from services within the home prior to entering a program.

Mrs. Stevens and her husband have just moved to Charlevoix from Kalamazoo. Employed by the Kalamazoo Public Schools this past year,

MRS. NANCY STEVENS

Mrs. Stevens taught pre-primary aged educably mentally handicapped children. She has also written a summer school program for junior high school age educably mentally handicapped students, which is in the progress, and a federal program for secondary handicapped children for the Kalamazoo Public Schools.

Before these experiences, Mrs. Stevens taught primary physically handicapped children at the Harold Upjohn School in Kalamazoo.

She is a graduate of Western Michigan University with a B.S. degree in Crippled and Homebound Special Education and a M.A. degree in teaching the mentally handicapped.

Mrs. Stevens would appreciate anyone referring handicapped children that are in need of service and who are not now in a program. She may be contacted at the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, Special Education Department, County Building, Charlevoix, or phone 547-9947.

Barbecue Highlights Meadowbrook Fete

The 16th annual Fiesta for the benefit of Meadowbrook Medical Care Facility will be held at the Court House in Bellaire, beginning at 2 p.m. July 15.

The event will be held on the grounds of the Court House and will feature booths of jams and jellies, homemade candy, home baked goods of all kinds, fancy work, aprons, white elephant and attic treasures, barbecue sandwich stand, and various games including dart games, fish pond for the children, together with handiwork and crafts of the patients at the facility.

A chicken barbecue will begin serving at 4 p.m. and will continue until 8 and will include potatoes, home baked beans, cole slaw, relishes, homemade pies and beverages.

During the afternoon, entertainment will be furnished by local area talent.

Sponsored by the Clara Millard Auxiliary to Meadowbrook Medical Care Facility, all proceeds of the Fiesta will be used at the facility for any additional equipment which will add to the comforts of the patients.

Established in 1955, the auxiliary over the years has done much to bring these added facilities to the patients of Meadowbrook by proceeds from Fiesta, Bake Sales, Pancake Suppers and many other activities carried on by the members of the Auxiliary adding to a total of approximately $37,500.00.

Again, as in prior years, the Auxiliary is appealing to the Community to back them in the Annual Fiesta. Contributions for the various booths are solicited and will be very much appreciated.

Portside Loses Again

Charlevoix's Portside Sports chalked up one more loss in hardball action on July 4, bowing to Fletch's Imports of Petoskey 3-0.

Bob Vratanina was the winning pitcher. Bill Carey, the losing pitcher, allowed four hits, one run, and struck out four men, walking three. He pitched the first three and a half innings.

Replacing his cousin for the last part of the game was Tim Carey. He allowed two hits, two runs, walked two men and struck out four.

Charlevoix scored no runs on the one hit allowed by Vratanina. Ron Bindi made the hit in the first inning.

This is Charlevoix's first season at hardball and Portside is still looking for its first win.

More Books Needed To Help Indian Kids

Project Ch-I-C-O has received a generous gift from the children who attended the Atwood Reformed Church Vacation Bible School.

They wanted their donations to be used to help people in their own community and chose Project Ch-I-C-O because it's purpose is to improve educational opportunities for Charlevoix Indian children.

The name Ch-I-C-O stands for Charlevoix Indian Children's Opportunities.

Their contribution totals $200.00 half of which was raised in 1970 and half at this year's Vacation Bible School. This is the first substantial donation to launch Project Ch-I-C-O and it is hoped that other groups will want to help also.

On Aug. 12, 13 and 14, the Charlevoix Woman's Club will conduct a book sale on the front lawn of the Public Library to benefit Project Ch-I-C-O.

Hundreds of books will be offered for sale at bargain prices, including recent fiction and non-fiction, old books, paperbacks, children's books and old magazines from the thirties and forties or earlier. The club hopes to have something for every reading taste and for the book collector too.

The Woman's Club will welcome gifts of books for this sale. Books for the sale may be left at he Public Library but should be marked "Book Sale". Call Mrs. Charles Duerr, 547-2603 to have books picked up.

The Woman's Club hopes to make the Project Ch-I-C-O Book Sale a major event that will involve the entire community.

It offers an opportunity to regard your stock of summer reading and at the same time help an Indian child to continue his or her education.

Billboards Under Attack

Legal action to remove 93 billboards along Interstate freeways throughout the Lower Peninsula has been announced by State Highway Director Henrik E. Stafseth and Attorney General Frank J. Kelley.

The action represents the broadest attack yet taken by the state against illegal billboards. Removal of the signs, all put up in 1970, will more than double the number taken down by the state since enactment of Michigan's 1966 Billboard Control Act.

Stafseth sent notices both to the owners of the signs and the property on which they stand. Sign-owners have 30 days to take them down. Those not removed by July 31 will be cut down by the Department of State Highways and the owners billed for the expense.

Kelley said:

"We will continue to use the present law, as ineffective as it is, until we have a meaningful replacement for it. The effort, the time and the cost to the state in proceeding under the present law is immense and would be greatly reduced if the bill which I have proposed for effective public regulation of billboards is passed.

"Nevertheless, the problem of illegal billboards is so severe that we must take whatever steps are available to us to meet the current situation. Therefore, we will use all of the resources available to us now to continue to make a frontal attack on visual pollution in this state.

"At the same time, I join with the governor, environmental groups and thousands of citizens in this state in urging the Legislature to resist pressures which they face from special interest groups and to pass effective billboard legislation in the public interest."

Charlevoix Jewelry Open for Business

Among the new businesses in Charlevoix this summer is Charlevoix Jewelers, located at Bridge-st. at the site of the former Bellinger Jewelry Shop.

The business is owned by Walt Hufford and L.R. (Bob) Hooper, both of Charlevoix, and is managed by Hufford's wife, Anne.

Mrs. Hufford says the business has been opened with completely new stock. Charles Bellinger, proprietor of the former jewelry shop in the same location, closed out his inventories when he retired last December.

Mrs. Hufford is a native of Petoskey although she lived in Muskegon as a girl and graduated from Muskegon High School.

Her husband also was born in Petoskey and took his tool and die training in Grand Rapids. He is co-owner with his brother, Don, of Hufford Industries in Charlevoix.

The Walt Huffords have four children, Sandra, a 9th grader; Steve, a 6th grader; Linda, a 5th grader; and Karen, who will enter kindergarten in the fall.

Hooper lives in Charlevoix and is associated with the Petoskey Child Guidance Clinic.

Library Notes

This week's Library notes include some new and noteworthy books which many of our patrons have been wanting to read. Having read them, they'll be glad they did.

"Life Under Sail" is a large volume collected and annotated by Frank Snyder. It is a long day now since iron men went down to the sea in wooden ships. But for those whose pulses race at the sight of a yar vessel beating to windward, this unique anthology offers the salt-sharp reality of life before the mast. All the stories in this masterful, handsomely illustrated collection are factual accounts–true stories of the adventurers, hardships, horrors and delights of life in the sailing trades during the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries. The authors are all seafaring men (and a few women), some famous, some obscure, some anonymous. There are stories of gallantry, impressment, pirates, enslavement, desertion, whaling, shipwrecks and rescues. In the section on mutinies, Capt. Bligh gives his own account of the classic trouble aboard the famous Bounty.

"How Wall Street Doubles My Money Every Three Years" is a no-nonsense guide to steady stock market profits written by Lewis Owen. Seven years ago, Owens was a very little guy on Madison Avenue. Now he's a very big guy on Wall Street. Today he has more than sextupled his money. He did it by figuring out the real strengths and weaknesses of the small investors and then setting up some realistic guidelines for himself. He believes the small investor can earn substantial and consistent profits in the stock market if he follows certain rules, and in simple-to-understand language, he explains how to do it.

NEW OWNERS of Harbor Hardware on Bridge-st. are Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Kimble of Barnard. Assisting them at the store are daughter Kay and son David. David runs the bike shop.

Harbor Hardware Sold

Harbor Hardware, a landmark on Bridge-st. for a half-century, has changed hands.

Proprietor Don Kowbel of Charlevoix has sold the business to Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Kimble who live on Beck-rd. in the Barnard area.

Details of the transaction were completed Friday, July 2.

Kimble formerly was employed by Electromachine Corp. of Charlevoix. His wife, Marion, who will be helping him in the business, formerly was employed at the Charlevoix County State Bank.

Their son David has taken charge of the store's bike shop and daughter Gay, a 9th grader at Charlevoix High School, is helping with sales.

Kimble is a native of Detroit. Mrs. Kimble was born in Boyne City and spent her girlhood in Hayes Township.

The couple lived in Redford Township near Detroit before moving to northern Michigan 11 years ago.

At present they are busy restocking the store with new merchandise, including an expanded line of Sportsmaster bicycles. A new supply of Martin-Senour paints already is on the shelves.

Mrs. Kimble also is planning a new gift line in the near future.

Next summer, the Kimbles hope to resume the hardware's traditional bicycle rental service.

The business was started about 50 years ago by the Wood brothers of Charlevoix who ran it for 35 years. The store was purchased by Max Hosmer of Charlevoix who ran in for five years in the late 1950's and early 1960's.

In 1962, the business was purchased by Steve Kowbel, who died in 1966.

DONE AT LAST! Campers put the finishing touches on the campfire hoping it remains in place until the evening campfire program.

READY TO PADDLE out into Walloon Lake, these Camp Daggett canoers await instructions. The camp has a fleet of canoes including a war canoe which holds 11 persons or 2,000 pounds.

Kids Love Camp Daggett

Started almost 50 years ago, Camp Daggett has grown from a few tents on Walloon Lake to a camp with cabins, nature building, dining hall and complete recreational program.

Daggett plays host to youngsters from Emmet and Charlevoix county schools between the ages of seven and 14. Boys and girls may attend for one, two, three or a full session of five weeks, according to Charles Wilson, camp director.

During their stay, campers participate in hikes, archery, canoeing, craft work, nature study, campouts, water skiing, sailing, fishing, swimming (instruction included), boating, and riflery.

The most emphasis is placed on the water portion of the program, Helen (Bernie) Myers, program director pointed out.

Daggett is self supporting mainly because local service clubs provide much assistance.

Campers are primarily from Petoskey, Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan. Children who attend Emmet or Charlevoix county schools pay $35 for the one week session and $65 for two weeks. Out of county rates are: one week, $55; and two weeks, $100. This includes health insurance, a handicraft fee and a camp Daggett sweatshirt.

The boys' first week session started June 13, the next on June 20 and the last on July 4 which ends this Saturday. Girls' sessions begin July 18, July 25, and Aug. 8.

SWIMMING INSTRUCTION for all types of swimmers is available at Camp Daggett, including both junior and senior lifesaving. Here campers observe a demonstration of floating techniques.

Michigan Bell Report to Customers
A clarification of facts concerning your telephone service and usage

How much will the proposed new rates really affect your monthly phone bill?

New rates would apply almost exclusively to your basic monthly service charge. Don't be confused by numbers. You may have heard that Michigan Bell has proposed a rate increase of 20%, and you were understandably perplexed if you thought the 20% (more accurately 19.54%) applied to all charges on your total monthly phone bill. That, for example, if you made a lot of extra toll calls last month and your bill was as high as $20, it would increase another 20% to $24 after the increase. Not so.

The 20% increase would apply only to your basic monthly service charges and to special non-recurring services, such as installing an extension or other equipment. Any interzone or long distance calls made in addition to your basic monthly service charge would cost no more after the proposed new rates than before.

For more detailed information about your telephone service, please contact your Michigan Bell Business Office. We want to help.

Corn Feeding Gives Deer Fatal Bellyaches

Department of Natural Resources wildlife officials are calling for a halt to feeding northern Michigan deer with surplus federal corn during winter emergencies, explaining that such releases of grain lead to "a senseless waste of deer, more extensively damaged winter range, and lowering of the vitality and productivity of the total deer herd."

Their recommendation, which went before the Natural Resources Commission at its July 8-9 meeting at the Higgins Lake Conservation School, stresses that the DNR shares the public's concern for doing everything possible to relieve all forms of wildlife from harsh and inhumane conditions.

However, notes DNR Wildlife Chief Merrill L. "Pete" Petoskey:

"In spite of maximum efforts by the Department, coupled with outstanding public cooperation, the number of deer reached and helped by a corn feeding program is insignificant."

He points out that at least 9,000 deer and possibly as many as 15,000 whitetails were lost to starvation in the Upper Peninsula's major yarding areas last winter even though an all-out effort was made to distribute corn in that part of the state.

"Even in the northern Lower Peninsula where four times more corn was fed than in the Upper Peninsula, the direct losses and poor physical condition of the herd both demonstrate the futility of using corn," Petoskey adds.

Paradoxically, deer losses have been the highest and fawn production and survival the lowest in those areas of the northern Lower Peninsula where the most corn was fed to the animals.

Another serious drawback of the artificial feeding program is that hungry northern deer are frequently killed from eating corn. The animals are often victimized when the abrupt shift from natural forage to corn causes fatal digestive upsets, reports Petoskey.

This problem generally hits older and larger deer the hardest because these animals out-compete with younger whitetails for most of the corn which is put out. Ironically, these same older deer usually have the best chance of surviving without artificial feedings because they usually have greater body energy reserves.

Petoskey reports that a number of corn-killed deer were found in the Escanaba and Newberry districts last winter, and he is convinced that "many more deer" died from eating corn but were not discovered by field men.

The DNR's Wildlife Chief says it is more than a coincidence that high deer losses have resulted directly or indirectly from malnutrition when and where corn feedings have been carried out. That toll ran heavy in the corn-feeding winters of 1962, 1965, 1969, and 1971

Petoskey, reflecting further on the poor returns of last winter's maximum corn-feeding effort above the Straits, says it is fairly certain that upwards of 75 percent of the Upper Peninsula's newborn fawns have already died this spring because does carrying them suffered from malnutrition.

Another point which disturbs DNR wildlife men is the fact that artificial corn feeds amplify damage to the deer range by concentrating the animals in smaller areas than normal. Deer then severely over browse most of the plants in those areas.

"When deer harvests are too conservative, the animals that should have been taken by hunters place excessive browsing pressure on their range and it's pure folly to think that corn feedings will keep deer from making an increased drain on their natural food supplies," explains Petoskey.

He observes that it cost the DNR's Wildlife, Forest Fire, and Law programs nearly $100,000 to carry the logistical load for last winter's distribution of 105,000 bushels of corn. The cost figure nearly equals the DNR's total current budget for deer habitat management.

Petoskey and other DNR officials agree that the manpower and money tied up in that effort could have been better used for more effective programs to help deer, such as generating timber cuttings and plowing roads to strategically located logging sites.

The DNR's Wildlife Chief reports that timber cuttings and other range improvements, combined with an adequate annual take of deer by hunters,' are the bonafide management approaches to healthy deer populations and high sustained harvests.

The DNR lists these other disadvantages of emergency corn feedings for deer:

---Artificial feeding often concentrates deer near highways where they are more vulnerable to automobile collisions, poachers, and dogs.

—Trails made into deer concentration areas by persons distributing corn are frequently used by deer-running dogs which created a serious problem among whitetails in some parts of northern Michigan last winter.

—Those deer most in need of being fed—fawns—are usually kept away from supplies of artificial food by larger animals.

Corral Chatter

By Ken

The second week of this season started on Saturday with another beautiful day. Activities were going strong and in the evening we had our first "Skit Night." Several of the cabin groups put on "skits" in the Bigwam, and boys do enjoy these. Cabin 21, Cabin 13, Cabin 4, Cabin 20, and Cabin 7, were the performers. Scott Sohn, of Okemos, Michigan, played a piano solo during the intermission.

The Fourth of July dawned bright and sunny, and everything pointed to a very full and exciting day. Chapel was held in the woods, with Bob Swain reading the prayer and Bill McKee giving the prayer. The talk was given by Andy Case, and he spoke on "The Responsibility of a Boy to Camp." He gave the boys much to think about.

In the afternoon, the annual track meet was held and as this is the start of the Green-Grey Competition for this summer, it is always a most exciting affair. The events were many and varied, boys trying to gain points for their team. At the end of the afternoon, each team had won two points, therefore the Green-Grey competition was started off all even. Some of the boys winning events were: Tod Pline, Don Cook, Glen Graber, Tom Largo, Lloyd Collins, Gordon Bennett, Bill Bauer, Bob Hutner, Mike Chen, and Kelly Marzetti, all these boys winning in the Junior section.

Boys winning events in the Prep Section were: John Bauer, Scooter Smith, Linc Craton, Perry Williams, Russ Epker, Gordon Dobie, Jim Vogt, Bill Hall, Tey Marzetti, John Marzetti, Mark Roberts, and Chris Kelly. Intermediate winners were: Jay O'Neil, Jim Batts, Ricky Coleman, Mike Hoffman, Scott Williams, Jimmy Shook, David Townsend, Sanny Greenawald, Larry Webb, Steve Lichtenauer, Dave Taylor. In the Senior Section, the following boys were event winners: Eric Musekamp, Jeff Taylor, Brad Hillis, Tim Goldich, Eric Artman, Scott Packard, Malti Koivula, Steve Baker.

It is traditional here at Camp Charlevoix that we have a beautiful buffet supper on the shore of the lake each Fourth of July. Our cooks Louie Warren, Rose Hilton, and Harry Craig did themselves proud as they sliced thick slices of roast beef, spaghetti, relishes, rolls, potato chips, punch and ice cream. It was a lovely evening, but just as we were finished eating, and the equipment was put away, it became very windy and dark and it looked as though a storm were brewing. We postponed our council fire, and our fireworks, and had a movie which the boys really enjoyed. It was a Laurel and Hardy Comedy and even the staff enjoyed it. The storm never came, we had a few drops of rain, but we did postpone our fireworks display until the following night. Along about nine o'clock, and right up till ten o'clock, the phone was ringing, folks around the lake asking if we were going to have our annual display. For years, our fireworks have been enjoyed by many people around the shoreline, and even from boats anchored out in the bay.

Monday morning arrived a little chilly, but sunny and bright and boys all keyed up to get going on their activities. This was the day in which Mugwump was started and boys were anxious to get this competition going. It is made of wood, shaped like an eagle and is hidden in the woods for the boys to find. The team finding it (greens or Greys) have the chance to run it at least once a day through the entire camp, hiding it again, and thereby gaining one point for their team. It was hidden during supper, and David Roe found it for the Grey team. Later in the evening, we had a council fire down in our council ring. It was very impressive and activity men read the names of boys who had made progress and passed star requirements during the past week. About nine o'clock, the entire camp assembled on the sandy beach at the waterfront to watch the Annual Camp Charlevoix fireworks display. It is a very exciting time and everyone enjoys it.

Tuesday morning we slept late, breakfast at 9:15 and everyone was glad of the extra hour's sleep. The camp photographer, Jack Marion of Brown City, arrived ready to take the camp pictures, and the morning was used for cabin pictures and activity pictures. After dinner at noon, the large group pictures were taken, and in the afternoon, more activity pictures.

In the afternoon, cabins four and two left for an overnight at the camp-craft area. It was a beautiful night, full moon, making a beautiful path across the water and as the hours grew later this path turned to gold, and it was a night to remember. The boys on this trip were: David Lewis, Robert Phipps, Peter Gardella, David Hutner, with their counselors, Ron Schultz and Kim Miller. Cabin four with Mike Kelly and Paul Dancer had these boys: Don Cook, Tom Largo, Brad Dillman, Glenn Graber, Michael Chen, and Billy Bauer. Upon their return, they all reported a great time.

Wednesday, another beautiful day, hot and great for camping. Cabins 9 and 10 took off for an overnight at our campcraft area. Chuck Osborn and Andy Case were the counselors of this group. The boys on this trip were: Don Huffman, Bill Hall, "Scooter" Smith, Tey Marsetti, David Minas, Chris Jones, Lincoln Craton, "Duke" Scott, Gordon Dobie, John Harvey, Russ Epker, Chris Kelly, and John Bauer. In the evening, the boys were all excited about the Green-Grey Competition called "Capture the Counselor." The men hide in the woods and the campers try to capture them. The teams catching the most men win the points. At the end of the chase, the Greens and the Greys each won two points, each winning in two sections. Boys enjoy this event, and are looking forward to next week's "Capture the Camper" when they do the hiding and the staff looks for them.

On Thursday, cabins 7 and 8 took off for their overnight, the staff on the trip were Mike Derrickson and Ralph Bolt and Bill Harbeck. The boys were Jim Bennett, Dean Lewis, Paul Edison, David Austin, Mark McCardel, Mark Roberts, Pat Green, Ben Dancer, Jim Vogt, Peter Kay, Pat Marzetti and Perry Williams.

We have indeed been having great camping weather and everyone enjoys camp on hot, sunny days. Activities are going full force and boys are learning many new skills.

To Handle Surplus Salmon

Michigan Fisheries, Inc., of Lansing was recently contracted to harvest an estimated two million pounds of surplus salmon this fall at the Department of Natural Resources' capture weirs on the Platte and Little Manistee rivers.

The firm, offering to pay 6.7 cents a pound for the coho and chinook it will process, was signed to handle the operation by the Purchasing Division for the Michigan Department of Administration.

Its winning bid, highest of 4 submitted, will bring the State about $130,000 of the company's harvest reaches the projected poundage total.

Of that total, Michigan Fisheries, Inc., has been contracted to take chinook for commercial marketing this fall.

The firm's contract also calls for it to handle and process about 30,000 coho and chinook for free distribution to Michigan's licensed salmon fishermen this fall. Those fish, to be dressed out and iced, will be given away to licensed anglers at the DNR's Platte River harvest weir near Honor and at the recreational harbor facility in Manistee.

Distribution of salmon at those two pick-up points will be made on weekends, starting in late September and running through October.

A BASKETBALL ring gets plenty of attention at Camp Charlevoix. Here Counselor Dick Geddes of Watseka, Ill., shoots baskets with camper Lincoln Craton of Birmingham, Mich.

Hot Weather Causes Highway Blow-Ups

State Highway Director Henrik E. Stafseth cautions Michigan drivers to be alert to the possibility of pavement "blow-ups" on concrete highways during hot weather.

Several such blow-ups have occurred on roads in the Charlevoix area already this summer, because of the unusually hot weather.

"So far this year there have been more than 600 blow-ups on state highways, and probably many more on county and city roads," Stafseth said. "Sudden collapse of concrete pavement at joints could cause trouble for unsuspecting motorists."

Blow-ups occur at pavement joints, usually in late afternoon after a day of intense heat. Sudden changes in temperatures also are a major cause of blow-ups.

Concrete expands and contracts when subjected to heat or cold. To compensate for this, highway engineers design space or expansion joints between slabs of concrete.

The Highway Department currently is experimenting with four-inch strips of polyethlene as relief joints in locations where blow-ups may take place.

When adjacent slabs of concrete expand, they push against each other, building up a pressure that causes concrete to collapse or "blow-up." More than 2,000 such blow-ups have occurred on state highways in a single summer.

When a blow-up occurs, the Highway Department makes immediate but temporary repairs. The Department has developed a new technique for making the permanent repairs which lessens the time for blocked traffic lanes from as much as a week to just a few hours.

Formerly, the old pavement had to be removed and fresh concrete poured, taking several days for crying and setting. The new technique involves pre-cast slabs of concrete lowered by crane into the space occupied by the old pavement. The Highway Department is continually experimenting with techniques for making speedier and less costly repairs.

TOPSIDE ON TOP

Topside captured the first round of the slow pitch league by beating Howards 14-4. Despite still having two games left in the round no one can catch them as everyone else has lost at least three games. An unbelievable start, when Tim Doan, Norm Ostrum, Ralph Doan, and Terry Blissett all blasted out first inning home runs, made it easy for Topside. Ralph connected again later and Stewart Coleman hit a round-tripper to help account for the winner's runs.

The battle for second will be interesting as several teams are "alive" with this week's games winding it up.

In other games the Argonne had their hitting shoes on in beating American Mold, 10-5. Dick Mitchell homered twice for the winners. Jerry Stewart's two homers led Townhouse past Medusa 14-8. Andy's won from Howard's Oilers of Boyne City.

Freedman's scored three times in the top of the seventh to break a tie and defeat Portside 15-13. Gale Shelden homered twice for the winners.

Portside bounced back to beat the Townhouse 14-0 behind the three-hit pitching of Sonny Wright.

Andy's, edged Airport 5-4 behind Harv Cole's two round-trippers. American Mold surprised Freedmans 8-4 with Mike Crain, Lawrence Bergmann and Herb Cummings hitting homeruns.

FASTPITCH RESULTS

Novaks threw the fastpitch league into a tight race by beating both banks, the top two teams, during the week. Against County State Larry Potter pitched a neat one-hitter while teammates' bats boomed out 13 runs and 10 hits including three each by Ralph Doan and Krang Lieberman. Against First State Bank it was a squeeker 4-3. Potter allowed three hits in out dualing Nate Boss who gave up seven. Two runs in the first and second innings did the trick then they hung on for the win.

Morweld won twice from Potters 5-2 and 4-1. Both games were nearly identical. Losing Pitcher Jim Potter had pitched brilliantly for five innings before tiring in the late innings. Both times Morweld picked up four runs in the seventh inning to post the wins.

LYING JUST off the Charlevoix County shoreline, Fisherman's Island has long been a mecca for lovers of the outdoors.

Builders Put Fisherman's Island in Jeopardy

Mainlining

By BETH BALDWIN

The Fisherman's Island area, one of the most unique and untouched parcels of property in Charlevoix County is in the process of being destroyed.

The Keating Corp. of Birmingham is going ahead with plans to develop the land just south of the Bells Bay campground into a recreational home subdivision.

The company already has built roads in the area, the first step in exploiting and ruining the natural setting.

However, a possibility exists that the Fisherman's Island property may be turned into a federal park by the state and federal governments. The site qualifies as a Woodland Indian Memorial National Historic Site, according to Sam Milstein, deputy director of the Department of Natural Resources.

A committee of National and State Park people have decided that the Fisherman's Island area is the best spot for a 5,000 acre national park. For more than 10 years the federal government has eyed Bells Bay as a park for ecology reasons.

A committee has been formed to stop the development and to preserve the area.

Property near Alba is also being considered, as is Lake Skegemog, located south of Torch Lake. But the Fisherman's Island appears to have the inside track.

This is not to be taken as a personal attack against the Keating Corp. It is a business and naturally interested in making money. Such a development could be very profitable.

However, that particular area should not be spoiled with homes no matter how well built, how far apart, or how expensive. It should be left as it is so that people and wildlife can enjoy the unstained rustic beauty of land perserved by human hands. What a contrast to the usual treatment of our habitat.

And if we do get a chance to maintain this land as is in the form of a national park, it is our responsibility to keep it beautiful and in its natural state and not blemish it with trash or empty beer cans. Fisherman's Island must be taken care of, mothered, protected and respected.

With the present situation on earth, we cannot afford to allow every piece of desirable land to be eaten up and commercialized, industrialized, and humanized. By now we should realize the value of land.

Here, in northern Michigan, we are spoiled. There are not the rows and rows of houses squeezed together that are common in the lower part of the state. We have clean air and water. We have places like Fisherman's Island where one can stroll along the shoreline and enjoy nature.

And we have the duty to protect these places so that not only we benefit from them but also generations for years to come.

Soyuz Tragedy Bares Need for Joint Effort

The eerie deaths of three Russian cosmonauts on their return to earth last week after a record 24-day flight only serve to remind us that outer space is a hostile environment to the likes of man.

Cosmonauts Georgy Dobrovolsky, Vladislav Volkov and Viktor Patsayev apparently died as the result of a small hole in the wall of Soyuz 11 which caused a sudden depressurization of their cabin when they re-entered earth's atmosphere.

Communist sources say the three died of "an explosion of blood to the brain."

The cosmonauts apparently were not aware that their cabin had been damaged when the craft separated from the Soyuz orbital compartment.

Although the world mourned the deaths of the valiant cosmonauts, the incident has served to make all nations engaged in space exploration that any expedition beyond the the band of earthly atmosphere is fraught with danger.

There must come a time when the United States, too, will suffer the loss of astronauts during a flight into the unknown.

The deaths of the Soviet cosmonauts is a good argument in favor of a joint U.S.-Soviet space program which would mitigate the danger of such accidents in the future.

Certainly each nation possesses technological know-how relative to space travel that is unavailable at present outside their national borders.

A pooling of such technology would not only result in safer space travel but also in a better relationship between the two nations back home on Mother Earth.

Patio vs Kitchen

By JIM FITZGERALD

It was freezing out the other day, but my wife cooked steaks on the outdoor grill and then rushed them inside to eat. "I don't want to get the oven dirty," she explained.

I ate the steak with my fingers, so as to not dirty silverware, and that night I suggested we sleep on the floor, so as to not muss up the bed. And I was thinking how neat the hospital would be if the patients would just go somewhere else to be sick.

A week later I noticed something new spinning slowly on the outdoor barbecue spit (and isn't "spit" a lovely word for a cooking utensil?). It was a sort of wire cage, cylinder shaped.

"I bought that at Yankee's," my wife explained proudly. "You just fill it with chicken thighs and legs and then attach it to the spit and it revolves slowly over the fire. It's better than spitting a whole chicken."

"Gee," I said.

A few minutes later I heard a terrible scream, followed by sobs. The door on the revolving cage had flipped open and all the thighs and legs fell into the charcoal fire.

"As a chicken cooker," I told my distraught wife, "you do not remind me of that white bearded Kentucky colonel who always smiles as he produces delicious chicken on TV. But this is probably because you shaved this morning."

"I will wash this chicken and then put it back in the cage," she said. "No one will taste the difference."

"Certainly," I said. "And scrub it good. There is nothing I like better than Rinso chicken with a charcoal flavor. It's like taking a bath in the fireplace."

"You are a riot," my wife said. "It doesn't even occur to you that this is your fault. In other families, the husbands do the outdoor cooking. If you had been out here watching, the chicken wouldn't have fallen in the fire."

"That's right, Daddy," said two little brats. "Other dads do the outdoor cooking. How come you don't?"

"It's because I'm afraid of the wild outdoors," I explained. "I might get attacked by a bear or something. Gee, the last time I went alone to our outdoor cooking spot I almost got lost. I had to follow the extension cord back home."

Which brings us to the incredible part of this open air cooking mania which is swiftly burying our nation in charcoal dust. I wouldn't mind if all these nuts wanted me to go to an old-fashioned picnic in the woods. I would simply refuse, explaining I have still not recovered from World War II battle fatigue. I got my fatigue while battling to keep the peas out of my peaches, and the rain out of my coffee. I forgave the Germans and the Japanese long ago. But I have never forgiven the cross-eyed mess sergeant who splotted a whopping spoonful of creamed crud into my pocket containing a scented letter from my girlfriend.

Any patriotic American must understand my refusal to risk opening old wounds with a rusty can opener, around a campfire, swatting bumblebees, sitting on burrs, 30 feet downwind from a newly dug john. But that is not what outdoor cooking means today. The modern picnickers never leave home. They do their grilling and spitting on the patio, ten steps from a $500 GE oven which is turned on every Christmas. During blizzards, some families cook in the living room fireplace. The important thing is to not cook in the kitchen.

A sane man might well wonder why an electric civilization is returning to the open flame of the cave men. The most often heard reason is that charcoaled food tastes better. This is hooey. Most outdoor-cooked meat is either burned or raw. The only way you can stomach it is to drench it in sauce made from hot peppers and brimstone. And the only way you can sleep that night is in an Alka Seltzer bottle.

The one big reason for the popularity of outdoor cooking is the cunning of the female. Mable wants to move the mess out of her kitchen and into the yard, so she doesn't have to "get the oven dirty." With the aid of Sears Roebuck and national advertising, she has convinced her husband there is something rugged about preparing meals in the fresh air. It feeds his ego to don a corny apron and play Mrs. Tarzan of the patio. He thinks it is man's work, so the big clown does it. It is really Mable's work but she has escaped it by moving the pots and pans outside.

Seconds Neff On Airstrip

July 9, 1971

To the Editor:

I agree with Bob Neff that the airstrip constructed on Beaver Island by Donald Nelson was a badly needed improvement, even though the runway extends onto state land.

Fliers encountering trouble certainly will be glad to know there is a second airstrip on the island, a good six miles closer to Charlevoix than the present airport.

There have been times in the past when such an airstrip was needed, and it certainly will be used in emergencies in the future.

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS from The Bible

For with thee is the fountain of life.—(Psalms 36:9).

All of us have had the experience of feeling tired and listless until something happened to awaken our interest and enthusiasm. Where minutes before we felt drained of energy, now we become alive, vital and awake. The source of our energy is God, the power within us. We are continually renewed, refreshed, and restored by His life. Let us give thanks for this.

Says City Taxes Rose 112.5 Pct.

July 5, 1971

To: The Editor, Charlevoix Courier

The City Summer tax on my home for 1971 is 112.5 percent higher than the tax for 1970. There was a note from the mayor attached to the Tax Statement purporting to explain and to justify this over 100 percent increase of the 1971 tax over the 1970 and earlier years' summer tax.

It appears to me that we, the taxpayers are entitled to a more complete accounting of where our tax dollar is expended. A statement should be included with the tax bill giving this information. For instance, for each tax dollar paid by the taxpayer a statement for 1970 and for 1971 should show the item and amount by percentage which is allotted to each item in the budget. The taxpayer is certainly entitled to this information. Also the statement should show to each taxpayer the millage he is paying to cover the total city costs. It is presumed that each and every taxpayer has been charged the same millage on his property valuation as have his fellow taxpayers.

Zoo Animals Suffering Lung Cancer

Pollution is killing beauty. And life. All kinds of life.

Hundreds of acres of magnificent pines and orange trees have been wiped out by smog and car exhaust on the West Coast. And on the opposite coast, the Philadelphia zoo reports an increase of lung cancer among animals who spend their lives outdoors.

The zoo said the increase in lung cancer was especially pronounced among water fowl. Air pollution is pinpointed as the culprit because pollutant particles fall to the bottom of ponds where birds feed. The birds are breathing and--literally--eating pollution. Lung cancer rates are also up in lions, otters, skunks, and other animals.

There is no place to hide. For trees, flowers, animals, or people.

A recent article in Science suggests—on the basis of considerable research—that if air pollution in major urban areas could be cut by 50 percent there would be a 25 to 50 percent reduction in morbidity and mortality due to chronic bronchitis. At least among humans. And a 25 percent reduction in mortality from lung cancer.

The chief cause of air pollution is car exhaust. Now many citizen groups are pressing for more and better mass transit. For better bicycle routes. For gasoline without deadly pollutants. For pollution control devices in cars that really work. Concerned citizens are getting organized to try to salvage what beauty—and life—is left.

To join the fight against air pollution, check with your local tuberculosis and respiratory disease association. It's a matter of life and breath.

Dr. Grate

Charlevoixans were saddened to learn of the death of Dr. Lawrence E. Grate, 57, in Detroit on Sunday.

Larry Grate served Charlevoix well as a "family doctor" from 1946 until poor health forced his retirement in 1967.

He delivered hundreds of babies, set thousands of broken bones and stitched up countless wounds and treated virtually every ailment in the medical lexicon during his years in Charlevoix, winning a wide following of devoted patients.

His gruff, straight-from-the-shoulder manner of speaking was only a bluff. He loved his patients and they returned his affection.

At the time of his retirement, he was concerned over the growing demands on the "family doctor"---demands which kept him from giving his patients the time and attention he felt they deserved.

"If this is what they call 'practicing medicine', I don't want any part of it," he told the Courier at the time.

However, Dr. Grate returned to a limited practice of medicine in Ellsworth last year.

Dr. Grate will be long and fondly remembered by his patients and friends in the Charlevoix area.

Clockwise Editor's Dilemma

By BOB CLOCK

Would anyone like to trade places with the editor of the Charlevoix Courier?

The past few days have been trying ones for this old greybeard who wishes he could come up with some pat answers to some of the problems facing "Charlevoix the Beautiful." But he can't.

Take Medusa Portland Cement Co., for example.

Last Tuesday night (July 6), the editor received a telephone call from a Charlevoix flier who said that the Medusa Cement Plant on South Point was pouring an ungodly amount of cement dust from the stack.

To verify the complaint, Clockwise took one of his infrequent plane rides over the city for a personal look-see.

The report, unfortunately, was true. A banner of yellowish effluent was billowing forth from the stack. It traveled on the back of a south wind across the Charlevoix harbor to North Point and was clearly visible as far as Harbor Springs.

We were properly incensed until we checked with Fred Cohrs, manager of the Medusa plant.

Cohrs explained that the plant had suffered a breakdown and the kiln had been re-started about 6 p.m. that evening.

Because of technological considerations beyond the comprehension of a mere editor, the electrostatic dust precipitator cannot be turned on until the kiln has been in operation for several hours and a certain amount of air pollution is inevitable.

If the precipitator is turned on prematurely, the whole works might blow up, Cohrs said, and we would rather take him at his word than ask for a demonstration.

This fact apparently is so well recognized that the Charlevoix Township ordinance governing air pollution expressly gives the company a period of eight hours between resumption of production after a shut-down and activation of the precipitator.

During this period there is absolutely nothing the plant can do to control what comes out of the stack, where it goes or whom it offends.

During our flight over the plant, we also noticed a large pool of inky black effluent in Lake Michigan just off the tip of South Point.

Cohrs says he has had the gump analyzed and it contains nothing more than organic matter from decaying vegetation. He says if you bottle it and expose it to direct sunlight for a few days, the water clears.

Again, until an independent chemist analyzes the same effluent, we are going to have to take Cohrs at his word.

Cohrs says the discoloration is something akin to the yellowish water resulting from decaying vegetation that appears at Taquamenon Falls in the Upper Peninsula.

Then there is the resort development currently underway between Bells Bay and Fisherman's Island. This one has kept me awake nights for the past several months.

Until the Branch Corp. announced plans for the development, most Charlevoix residents assumed that the land was a part of the Jordan River State Forest, although private ownership of the land was clearly designated on the plat books.

Now that development has started, local citizens are up in arms. They want Bells Bay and Fisherman's Island to remain "as is" for all time to come — a wilderness mecca for hunters and outdoorsmen.

Furthermore, recent archeological digs have indicated that the area was the site of prehistoric Indian encampments and could prove an invaluable chunk of real estate in determining the life-style of our progenitors in this area. This fact may help save the area if the federal government decides soon to set Fisherman's Island aside as a national Indian monument.

Needless to say, residential development of the area has many backers, aside from the developers themselves. Some taxpayers of Norwood Township can think of a dozen ways they could use the added tax dollars. And some merchants see nothing but dollar signs when they think of dozens of new families doing their shopping in Charlevoix.

Another "improvement" which has cost Clockwise a few grey hairs is the paving of the Bells Bay rd. by Charlevoix Township, under Supervisor Oscar Stroud's policy of blacktopping everything that doesn't move.

Until a few weeks ago, the road was a meandering gravel path, filled with chuck holes and rough as a cob. Now it is a smooth, black-topped raceway, zooming all the way from the Medusa plant entrance to the turn-around past the last campsite.

Veteran campers, who ate more road dust than baked beans while staying at Bells Bay, like the new road, which is virtually dust-free.

But somehow it has changed the entire character of Bells Bay from a rustic campground to a suburban parkway. You can find the same type of road and almost the same type of scenery near most large cities.

For my money, the old charm of Bells Bay disappeared with the old road. I wish the township had tried calcium chloride to keep down the dust before it resorted to blacktopping.

So what does an editor do, faced with such problems?

Is he to condemn Medusa for polluting the atmosphere, when such pollution is expressly permitted in Charlevoix Township's air quality ordinance — which, incidentally, is one of the most stringent in the country?

Is he to fight tooth and nail against further resort development in an area which derives its very sustanance from the resort trade?

Is he to balk at every so-called "improvement" that comes down the pike bearing the banner of "Progress" — witness the paving of Bells Bay rd. — particularly when he knows that so many Innovations that parade as "Progress" are actually steps backwards?

I don't know.

But I do know that the charm of the Charlevoix area is not contingent upon cement plants and suburban development.

When the Clocks moved to Charlevoix from Oakland County in 1965, we were amazed at the clarity of the air. The atmosphere fairly sparkled and objects seen at a distance stood out in sharp relief.

I can't say the same thing today, although it may be that I have just become accustomed to our relatively and unpolluted air.

Although new resort subdivisions undoubtedly will bring new taxes and new business to the area, I am terribly afraid that if such subdivisions blanket the landscape, Charlevoix will lose its appeal as a resort area.

City dwellers flock to Charlevoix each summer because northwestern Michigan doesn't resemble in the slightest their normal day-to-day surroundings in the metropolitan areas. Woods and waters don't have much commercial value in and of themselves, but they are priceless adjuncts to "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

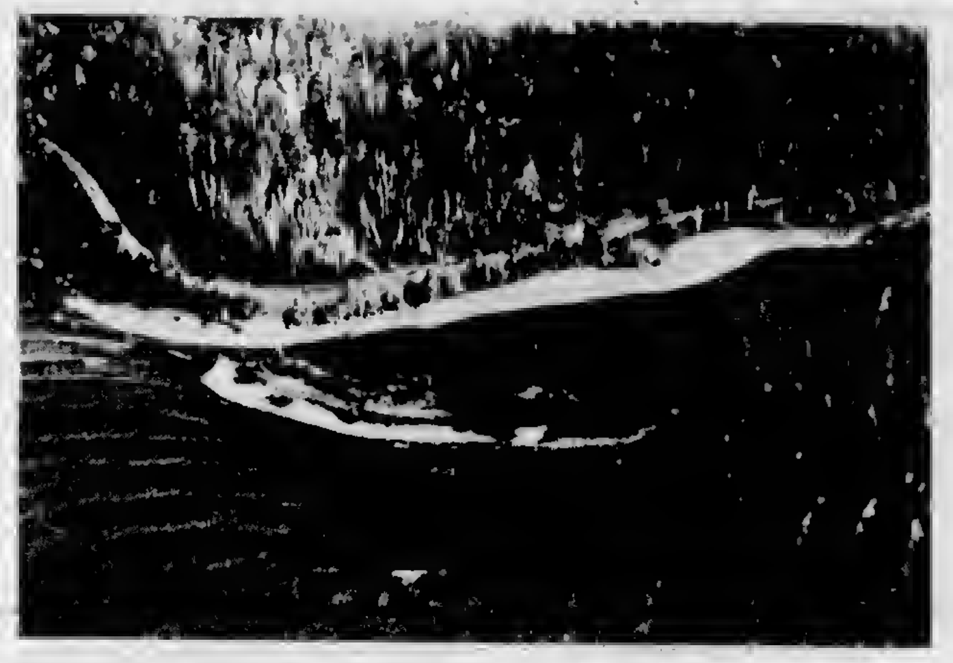
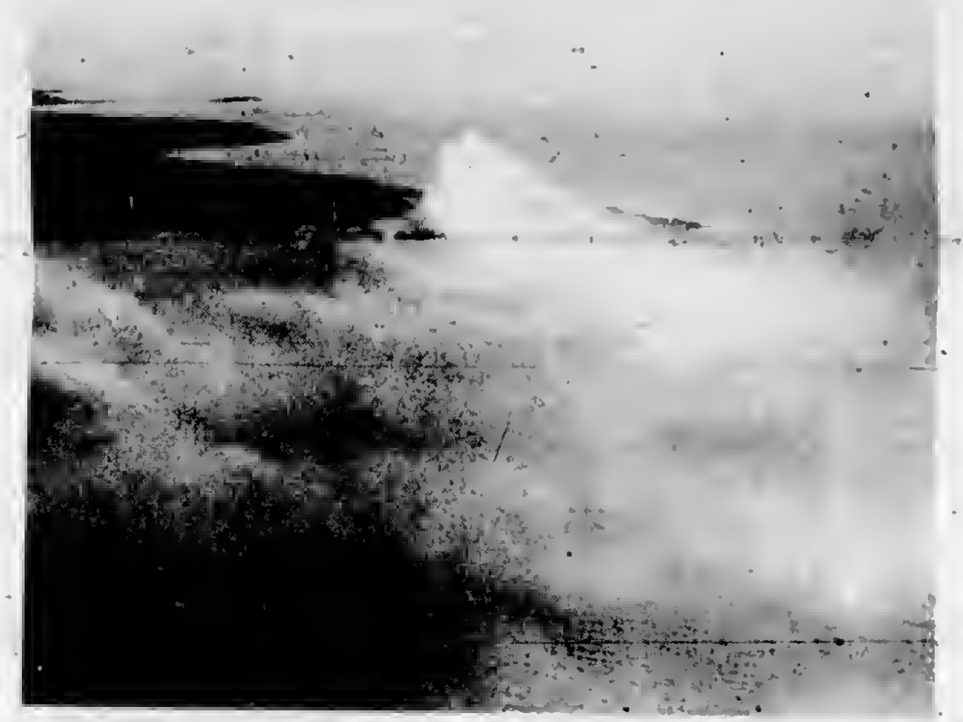
Anyonw want to trade places with the editor?



BEFOULED WATER off South Point is clearly evident in this aerial photograph. Fred Cohrs, manager of the Medusa Portland Cement Co. plant, says the water is discolored by organic matter from surrounding woodlands.



EFFLUENT from the Medusa stack fans out over Charlevoix Harbor and heads for Harbor Springs on the back of a south wind. This photo was taken shortly after the plant went back into production after a shut-down. For technical reasons, the plant is allowed an eight-hour grace period after starting up before the dust precipitator is turned on.

Chautauquas Make Comeback in U.S.

Traveling Chautauquas are making a comeback.

Prominent scientists will visit a dozen United States cities this year and next to give science teachers a four-day course in such subjects as human genetics, computer techniques, and air pollution.

The lectures, directed by the American Association for the Advancement of Science, are modeled on the Chautauquas that brought adult education and entertainment to rural America at the turn of the century. But the science seminars will be held in the winter, while the earlier Chautauqua circuit was a summertime activity.

BEGAN IN 1874

The traveling Chautauquas took their name from a two-week meeting of some 2,000 educators and clergymen held at Chautauqua, New York, in 1874, the National Geographic Society says.

Intended to upgrade the teaching in Sunday schools, the gathering combined lectures and debate with music and outdoor recreation. It proved so popular that the Chautauqua Assembly became an annual event.

As it grew in size, the sessions stretched to eight weeks and began including art, crafts, and music lessons along with lectures on science and current events.

Chautauqua pioneered summer school and university extension courses. The first book club in America developed from a program of recommended reading devised there.

IMITATORS

Imitators sprang up, and by 1884 there were about 50 Chautauquas in the nation. Traveling Chautauquas took to the road in 1904, pitching tents and presenting lecture programs leavened with operatic divas, jingle acts and ventriloquists.

By 1909 there were 554 Chautauquas making the rounds, and "Chautauqua time" had become the high point of the summer in towns and villages across the country. In their peak year of 1924 Chautauquas played before more than 30 million persons in some 12,000 communities.

ORATORY AND GUITARS

On the Chautauqua circuit William Jennings Bryan repeatedly delivered his famous "cross of gold" speech attacking the gold standard. Audiences in straw hats, waving hand fans against the summer heat, heard Swiss bellringers, Hawaiian guitarists, and Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink singing Schubert.

Radio, motion pictures, and the Depression of 1929 ended the circuit. Even the nonprofit Chautauqua Institution in New York nearly failed. Wreckers were on the grounds to demolish the buildings when a last-minute fund drive saved the day.

50,000 VISITORS

Now more than 50,000 visitors are expected to throng the 700-acre grounds for Chautauqua's 98th season, from July through August. Staying at the five hotels or 29 inns, or just spending a day, they will hear politicians, academics, and authors discuss narcotics, the future of the Presidency, foreign policy, and the plight of the cities.

Robert B. Frantz Dies at Saginaw

Robert B. Frantz, 77, well known Michigan architect, Saginaw civic leader and a member of the Belvedere club here for many years, died June 14 at Saginaw General hospital after a lengthy illness. His daughter, Mrs Fred Meyer of Rochester, N.Y., and the Belvedere Club has informed the Charlevoix Courier.

Funeral services were held June 17 at the First Congregational church in Saginaw. Burial was at Green Hill cemetery, Waynesboro, Pa.

Mr Frantz, as a member of the Belvedere Club, had been a summer resident here for many years. He was also known as the husband of Sarah "Sali" Frantz, painter-artist of national renown. He always accompanied her when she exhibited at the Waterfront Fair here until her death in 1967.

A native of Waynesboro where he was born March 30, 1894, he was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1918, served in the U.S. Army during World War I and returned to earn his master's degree in 1920.

He began the general practice of architecture in Saginaw in 1925 and for 35 years was associated with the late James A. Spence until they dissolved their partnership in 1960.

He had designed many commercial, public and industrial buildings in Saginaw, among them Saginaw's $2 million-plus postoffice building and Arthur Hill and Saginaw High Schools. In 1952 he became the first resident of Saginaw to be presented a fellowship in the American Institute of Architects in recognition of his contributions to the professioo.

He was a member of the First Congregational church and past president of its joint board of trustees and wardens; a trustee and past president of the Saginaw Museum; a member of the National Council of Architectural Registration Boards; past president of the Saginaw Valley chapter, American Institute of Architects; past president of the Detroit AIA chapter; a member of the Saginaw Planning Commission for 26 years; member of the American Society of Planning Officials; was prominent in Saginaw Masonic affairs.

He is survived by a son, Peter B. Frantz of Bay City; a daughter, Mrs. Fred (Joan) Meyer of Rochester, N.Y., and the Belvedere Club here and four grandchildren.

Memorial Planned

The 1969 class of Charlevoix High School is planning a memorial to their friend and classmate, Richard Plumm, who was killed in Vietnam May 22.

Members of the class are urged to contact Becky Hiller or Mary Plumm immediately concerning the memorial.

after it was explained that 22 students had signed up for the program. However, if it became necessary to go to Petoskey, only eight students could take the course. The cost of tuition and transportation and the additional number of students who could take the course convinced the board of its need. A teacher will be hired for this course.

The board also voted to offer a commercial foods class and have this class provide a school lunch program in the high school building. Mrs. C.A. Odmark will supervise this class.

The hiring of two teachers for the 1971-72 school year was approved. They are Kathleen Wagner, a recent Oakland University graduate with BA degree, who will teach Fifth Grade and Janet Langeland, a 1971 graduate of the University of Michigan, who will teach special education.

Tuition and enrollment policies for resident and non-resident students was approved. A definition for each was given in the policy that was approved; it was decided all non-resident students must live with a parent, parents or legal guardian while attending the Charlevoix schools, pay 75 percent of the tuition on the day of enrollment and the remainder on the fourth Friday of September. Vocational non-resident students from neighboring school districts may attend as vocational students only with the sending district paying the tuition.

It was decided to ask for bids for the repair of a sewer east of the band room and for installing a sewer or septic tank for the concession booth being constructed by the Sports Boosters. Bids for excavation, electric and plumbing will be asked.

House Bill 5326 which would offer financial aid to schools on a unit basis rather than individual basis was read by Supt. Miller and discussed briefly.

House Bill 5326 which would offer financial aid to schools on a unit basis rather than individual basis was read by Supt. Miller and discussed briefly.

Dale Burge presented an athletic department financial report which revealed $2,047 was on hand at the end of the school year. He added that supplies now on order would cut this figure to less than half.

He spoke briefly on the program, advised that policing football games was one of the major problems involved in crowd control and asked that the board consider fencing in the field to help solve the problem.

A letter from the Sports Boosters club was read. The letter asked that the school withdraw complimentary tickets to administrators; school board members, teachers and others to whom tickets had been issued in the past. The club also asked that the football field be cared for to save it from ruin. Joe Beaudoin attended as a representative of the club. Mr. Miller answered by saying he felt it was an insult to principals Vane Smith nand Max Novak who must attend all events without additional compensation to police rather than watch any game. The letter also asked that timekeepers and announcers be asked to purchase tickets. It was pointed out that in most instances these people worked for little or nothing and if they were paid, turned the check over to the Varsity Club as in the case of Lawrence Feindt.

It was determined that few teachers, other than those working at games, used their tickets; the same applied to board members and others. It was pointed out that complimentary tickets were sent to local doctors after they had given free physical examinations to all football candidates. In conclusion, Mr. Miller advised that this was one of the fringe benefits in the master contract for Teachers.

In answer to the request for attention for the football field, Harold Kaufman, business manager, advised that the mowers had been repaired, the grass cut and the watering system will go into operation as soon as a broken meter is replaced.

In other action, the board approved a resolution to issue tax anticipation notes in the amount of $100,000 dated Sept. 1, 1971, and maturing Mar. 1, 1972 and $100,000 dated Oct. 1, 1971 and maturing Apr. 1, 1972.

Signatories for activity and other funds in various school offices were approved and the plan to determine board policy would be continued.

July 27 was set as the date for the next meeting. Negotiations, quotations for fencing the athletic field and bids for milk, bread, gas, oil and insurance will be accepted at that time.

Cottage Patrol Is Sold

The Northern Cottage Patrol owned by John Martin has been purchased by Philip C. Ward of Frankfort, who plans to move to the area shortly.

To be known as the Northwestern Resort Patrol, the firm will specialize in inspections of resort property during the absence of the owners.

The patrol checks doors and windows for possible break-ins and weather damage and makes monthly reports to the owners. Damage and break-ins, of course, are reported immediately.

Fees are determined by the number of inspections requested per month.

Ward says he also plans to do routine carpentry maintenance work for his customers, at an hourly rate.

Ward, 31, was born in Frankfort and graduated from Frankfort High School in 1959. He has been a member of the Frankfort City Police Department for 10 years and a Benzie County deputy sheriff for three years.

In addition, he operated his own resort patrol company in Frankfort which he recently sold.

Ward and his wife, Janet, have two children, John, 5, and Ann, 10 months.

"Our biggest problem right now is finding a place to live in Charlevoix," Ward says.

Neighbors Say A & W On Road Right-of-Way

Is the new addition to Bruce Withers' A & W restaurant on U.S. 31 South infringing on the highway right-of-way?

This is one of the questions members of the Charlevoix City Council wrestled with Monday night after a complaint was filed by a number of south side businessmen.

Al Smith, who owns the Villa Moderne Motel just south of the restaurant, told the council that the new building is so close to the highway that his own sign is not visible to southbound motorists.

He said he has suffered a marked decrease in business since the addition went up and asked the city to bear the expense of moving his sign closer to the road. He blamed the location of the building on a "goof" on the part of the city.

He was accompanied to the meeting by Jack Cross, Don Parsel, Brad Foster and Tim Smith, all of whom own businesses in the vicinity.

City Superintendent Thomas Hanna admits that there was an error in the granting of the building permit, since he thought the property was zoned C-1 rather than C-2. C-1 would permit construction of the addition up to the lot line. C-2 requires a set-back from the highway and is intended for such businesses as gas stations and motels.

However, the council agreed to waive about five feet of the 10-foot set-back requirement after construction was started.

The state Highway Department maintains a 100-foot right-of-way from Carpenter-st. south, measuring 50 feet from the centerline on each side of the highway.

When the highway was reconstructed four years ago, property owners were asked to move back their signs beyond the highway right-of-way.

After presenting their problem to the council, Smith and his party left the council chambers. They returned 45 minutes later and reported that they had measured the distance from the A & W addition to the centerline of the highway. They said the restaurant wall begins only 46 feet, 2 inches from the centerline and that the overhang infringes even further onto highway property.

The council promised a complete investigation of the matter.

In other business the council:

--Heard a complaint by Robert Sommerville that an unoccupied house at 112 Palmer-st. owned by Mrs. Norma Pike of Cross Village continues to pose a fire and health hazard, even though Mrs. Pike has made some attempt to clean up the property. He said the grass was cut but that clippings had been left on the back porch. City Attorney Robert Hoffman said the city will have to determine the extent of the hazard before action can be taken. Sommerville and his neighbors made a similar complaint about the property last month.

--Approved a display of fireworks for the Venetian Festival Saturday night.

--Renewed the Sundew dock lease for one year for $1.

--Received a letter from Charlevoix Hospital outlining increased rates. Private rooms are $49 a day, semi-private, $42; pediatrics and wards, $39; isolation, $49; and nursery, $21.50.

--Received letters from Sen. Philip A. Hart, Sen. Robert Griffin and Rep. Philip Ruppe promising cooperation in retaining the Air Force Bomb Scoring Site at Bay Shore, after the city wrote expressing an interest in keeping the installation. The council also received a letter from AF Col. Alvin E. Prothero saying: "At the present time we are

Road Projects In the Works

The state Highway Commission has accepted bids for widening and paving 4.3 miles of Thumb Lake-rd. from U.S. 131 east and bituminous paving on 1.4 miles of Compten-rd. from Boyne Falls south.

Cost of the two projects is estimated at $120,000.

Bids were received by the Commission June 16 and contracts will be awarded shortly.

The work is scheduled for completion in November, 1971.

Hodgkiss and Douma of Petoskey recently completed the laying of the non-skid paving on Petoskey-rd. in Charlevoix from Dixon-ave. northeast to Nicholls-st., under contract with the state Highway Commission.

To Dedicate Plaque For Crash Victims

The biggest and best Venetian Festival in the 41-year history of the event is in store for the weekend, according to Chamber of Commerce Manager Tom Merta.

The festival will start with the opening of Sehl's Northern Show carnival in the High School parking lot at 7 p.m. Friday and close Sunday evening with a folk gospel concert in East Park.

Inbetween will be all of the traditional Venetian weekend activities, including a gigantic street parade Saturday afternoon and the Boat Parade Saturday night, followed by fireworks over Round Lake.

Last year, the Boat Parade and fireworks attracted more than 25,000 people to Charlevoix.

Other major attractions are the Miss Charlevoix Beauty Pageant and Talent Show Friday night at 8 p.m. at the High School (See pictures of the candidates on Page 14), the annual Pet, Doll and Dress-up Parade scheduled for 4 p.m. Saturday in East Park and a gymnastics demonstration by Palaestrum gymnasts at 3:15 Saturday in East Park.

A solemn note will be sounded at 1:15 Saturday at the dedication of a plaque commemorating the crash of the B-52 in Lake Michigan Jan. 7.

Killed in the crash were Lt. Col. William Be Lemmon, 38; Maj. John M. Simonsy, 39; Maj. Donald F. Rousseau, 37; Maj. Gerald W. Black, 32; Capt. John E. Weaver, 27; Capt. Joel G. Hirsch, 26; 1st Lt. Dennis D. Ferguson, 25; Tech. Sgt. Jerry M. Achey, 33; and 1st Lt. Douglas Bachman, 25.

The families of the victims have been invited to attend the dedication of the plaque, which will take place at the East Park bandstand. Later the plaque will be moved to Kennedy Park, near the site of the bomber crash.

At the conclusion of the dedication ceremony, pilots of the 2nd Fighter Interceptor Squadron from Wurtsmith Air Force Base will state a fly-over in a "missing man" formation. The vacant space in the formation is in honor of airmen killed in line of duty.

The street parade will be led by Grand Marshal Carl Betz, best known for his role in the TV show "Judd for the Defense." Betz is appearing at the Cherry County Playhouse in Traverse City in the play "The Girl in the Freudian Slip."

C of C Manager Merta says there were 37 entrants in the street parade at press time, including floats and queens from Mackinaw City, Bellaire, Ellsworth, Elk Rapids, Gaylord, East Jordan, Boyne City, Petoskey, Central Lake and Cheboygan.

Dignitaries expected to march in the parade include State Sen. Robert W. Davis and state Rep. Richard Friske. Other "possibles" are Sen. Robert Griffin and Gov. William Milliken.

The Chamber of Commerce and the city are attempting to secure permission from the state Highway Commission to hold the parade on Bridge-st., rather than State-st. as has been the route in past years.

If permission is received in time, the parade will form on Carpenter-ave. near the high school athletic field and proceed north to Robinson-st., then to Bridge-st.

If State-st. is used, the parade will form on State-st. near the blinker light and move north through the city.

Big Wage Hike Ends Phone Strike

The voice with the smile is back.

The Communications Workers of America and the Bell Telephone Co. reached agreement Monday on a new contract providing a 33.5 percent wage increase over three years.

The settlement ended a six-day strike against the telephone company and workers began returning to work Monday. Service is expected to be back to near normal by Wednesday.

Although local telephone service continued during the strike, many Charlevoix residents reported difficulty in placing long-distance calls. During the strike, switchboards were manned by supervisory personnel - mostly by male.

Forbrig-Cunningham Rites Solemnized

Gail Susan Forbrig and Donald Cunningham repeated their marriage vows Saturday, July 10, in a late afternoon double-ring ceremony at the Bethany Lutheran Church, the Rev. Duone Imig officiating.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Hal Forbrig and Mrs. Arthur Cunningham and the late Arthur Cunningham.

As 125 guests watched, the bride was escorted down the aisle by her father to an altar decorated with white carnations and pink roses. A basket of garden flowers were placed in front of the pulpit.

For her wedding the bride choose an empire gown of satapeul with Venise lace bodice and Venise lace trim at the cuffs of the long sleeves, and also at the neck and the edge of the chapel length train. The train was secured at the waist with a bow. Her elbow length veil was secured by a headpiece of lace florets.

Brenda Forbrig assisted her sister as maid of honor. Mrs. Robert Etienne, another sister of the bride, Ruth Peebles, and Carol Cunningham, sister of the groom were bridesmaids.

They wore identical floor-length gowns of green, pink and lavender floral print with mandarin collars and long sleeves with pink hair ribbons. Each carried a single long stemmed pink rose.

Cameron Cunningham, brother of the groom from Ferndale was best man. The groomsmen, who also seated the guests, were Jack Stockwell, Gary Forbrig and Glenn Cunningham. The last two are brothers of the couple.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Forbrig selected a pink dress with ivory crocheted lace and matching accessories. Her corsage was pink roses.

Mrs. Cunningham picked a turquoise dress with matching accessories and a corsage of white roses.

A reception was held at Stafford's Bay View Inn in Petoskey. The champagne dinner was given by the bride's parents.

Assisting with the punch and cake were Roxanne Drake of Owosso and Mary Pat Foran of Elsie.

After a wedding trip to the Upper Peninsula, the couple will live in Mt. Clemens where the bridegroom is a real estate salesman.

Grilled Beef Roast?

Beef for the grill will be easier on the budget if you select forequarter cuts, suggests a Michigan State University consumer marketing information agent.

"This is the season when demand pushes the price of steaks up and the price of roasts down," says Mrs. Sheila Morley. "The most economical buys will be chuck roasts, chuck steaks, rump, sirloin tip and round roasts."

Other reasonably priced outdoor cooking favorites are chicken -- young, tender broilers – and turkey. "If your barbecue has a rotisserie, don't miss the treat of barbecuing a young turkey," Mrs. Morley advises.

Frozen fillets of fish are another grill top treat. "Best of all, they're never very high in price," Mrs. Morley adds.

To complete your picnic, patio or beach supper, there are plenty of budget supporting fresh vegetables and fruits on the market, and more to come.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hamilton of Lansing called on her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Stafford Sunday afternoon.

Chiropractors Home From Convention

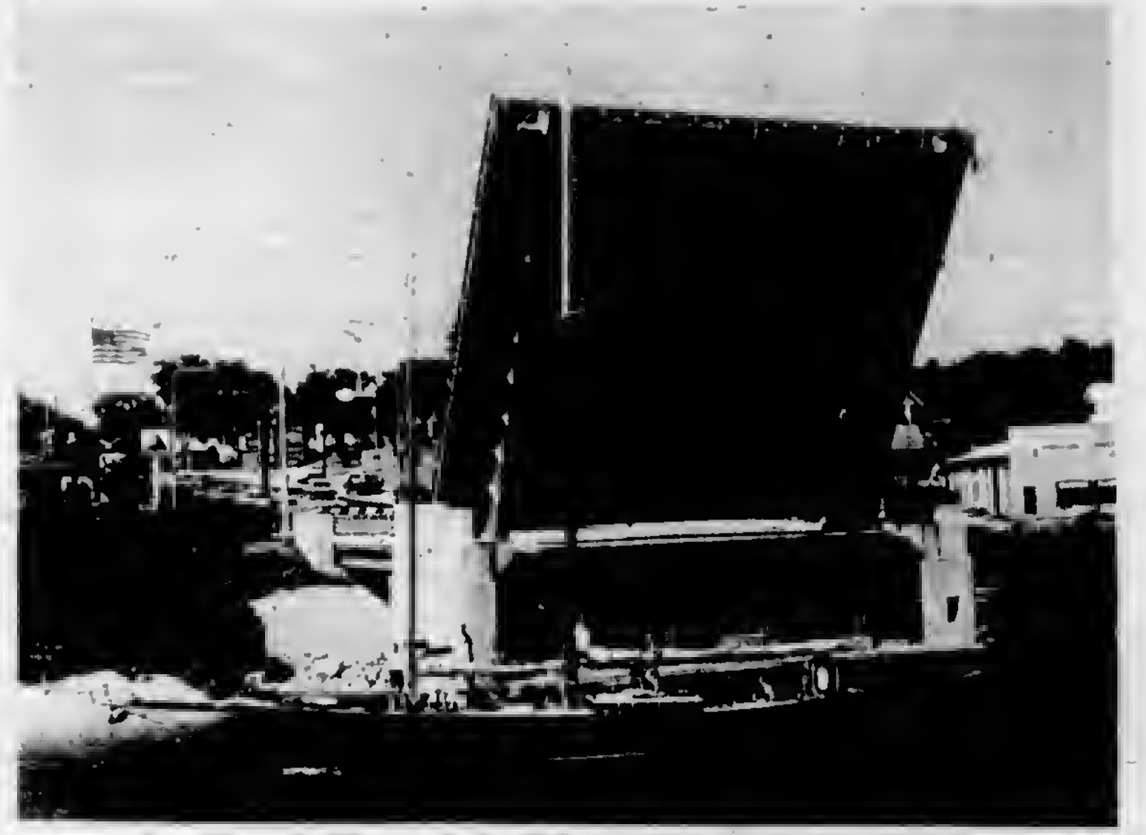
Dr. and Mrs. C.F. Whitehouse and Dr. and Mrs. Terry Grear, all of Charlevoix, have returned from Dallas, Texas, where they participated in a four-day educational seminar conducted by the Parker Chiropractic Research Foundation.

Almost 2,000 chiropractors and their assistants from all over the United States, several Canadian provinces, Australia, New Zealand, and Europe gathered July 1-4 at the Fairmont Hotel to attend the series of lectures and demonstrations on chiropractic research and improved techniques.

Featured at the seminar were such prominent personalities as Dr. Joseph J. Janse, president of the National College of Chiropractic in Chicago. Herb True, Ph., D., former professor at Notre Dame University, Rebecca Liswood, M.D., well-known marriage counselor and author from New York City, Miss America of 1971, Miss Phyllis George, Bob Richards, two-time Olympic Gold Medal winner for pole vaulting and Jeane Dixon, Washington, savant who predicted the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

John Gary, singer, entertained some 700 of the guests at a "Chiropractic Night with John Gary."

Dr. James W. Parker, founder and president of PCRF, has been offering these post-graduate seminars for 20 years. He commented, "It is highly gratifying to see so many doctors put forth to come here to fulfill their responsibility to their patients by studying and learning the very latest research developments of our profession."



BOATS of all descriptions are plying Charlevoix's waters now that summer is in full sail. The mast of this sleek black ketch which visited the city last week towered above the bridge portals. The city yacht harbor has been filled most days, with few vacancies even in mid-week.

'Charlevoix' Kidney Beans Recommended

A Michigan State University crop specialist, Larry Copeland, reports that switching acreage from uncertified navy beans to certified dark red kidneys offers growers several advantages.

Dark red kidney bean (Charlevoix) seeds are plentiful in northern Michigan and markets are getting stronger.

The Charlevoix seed was developed and is grown in Michigan.

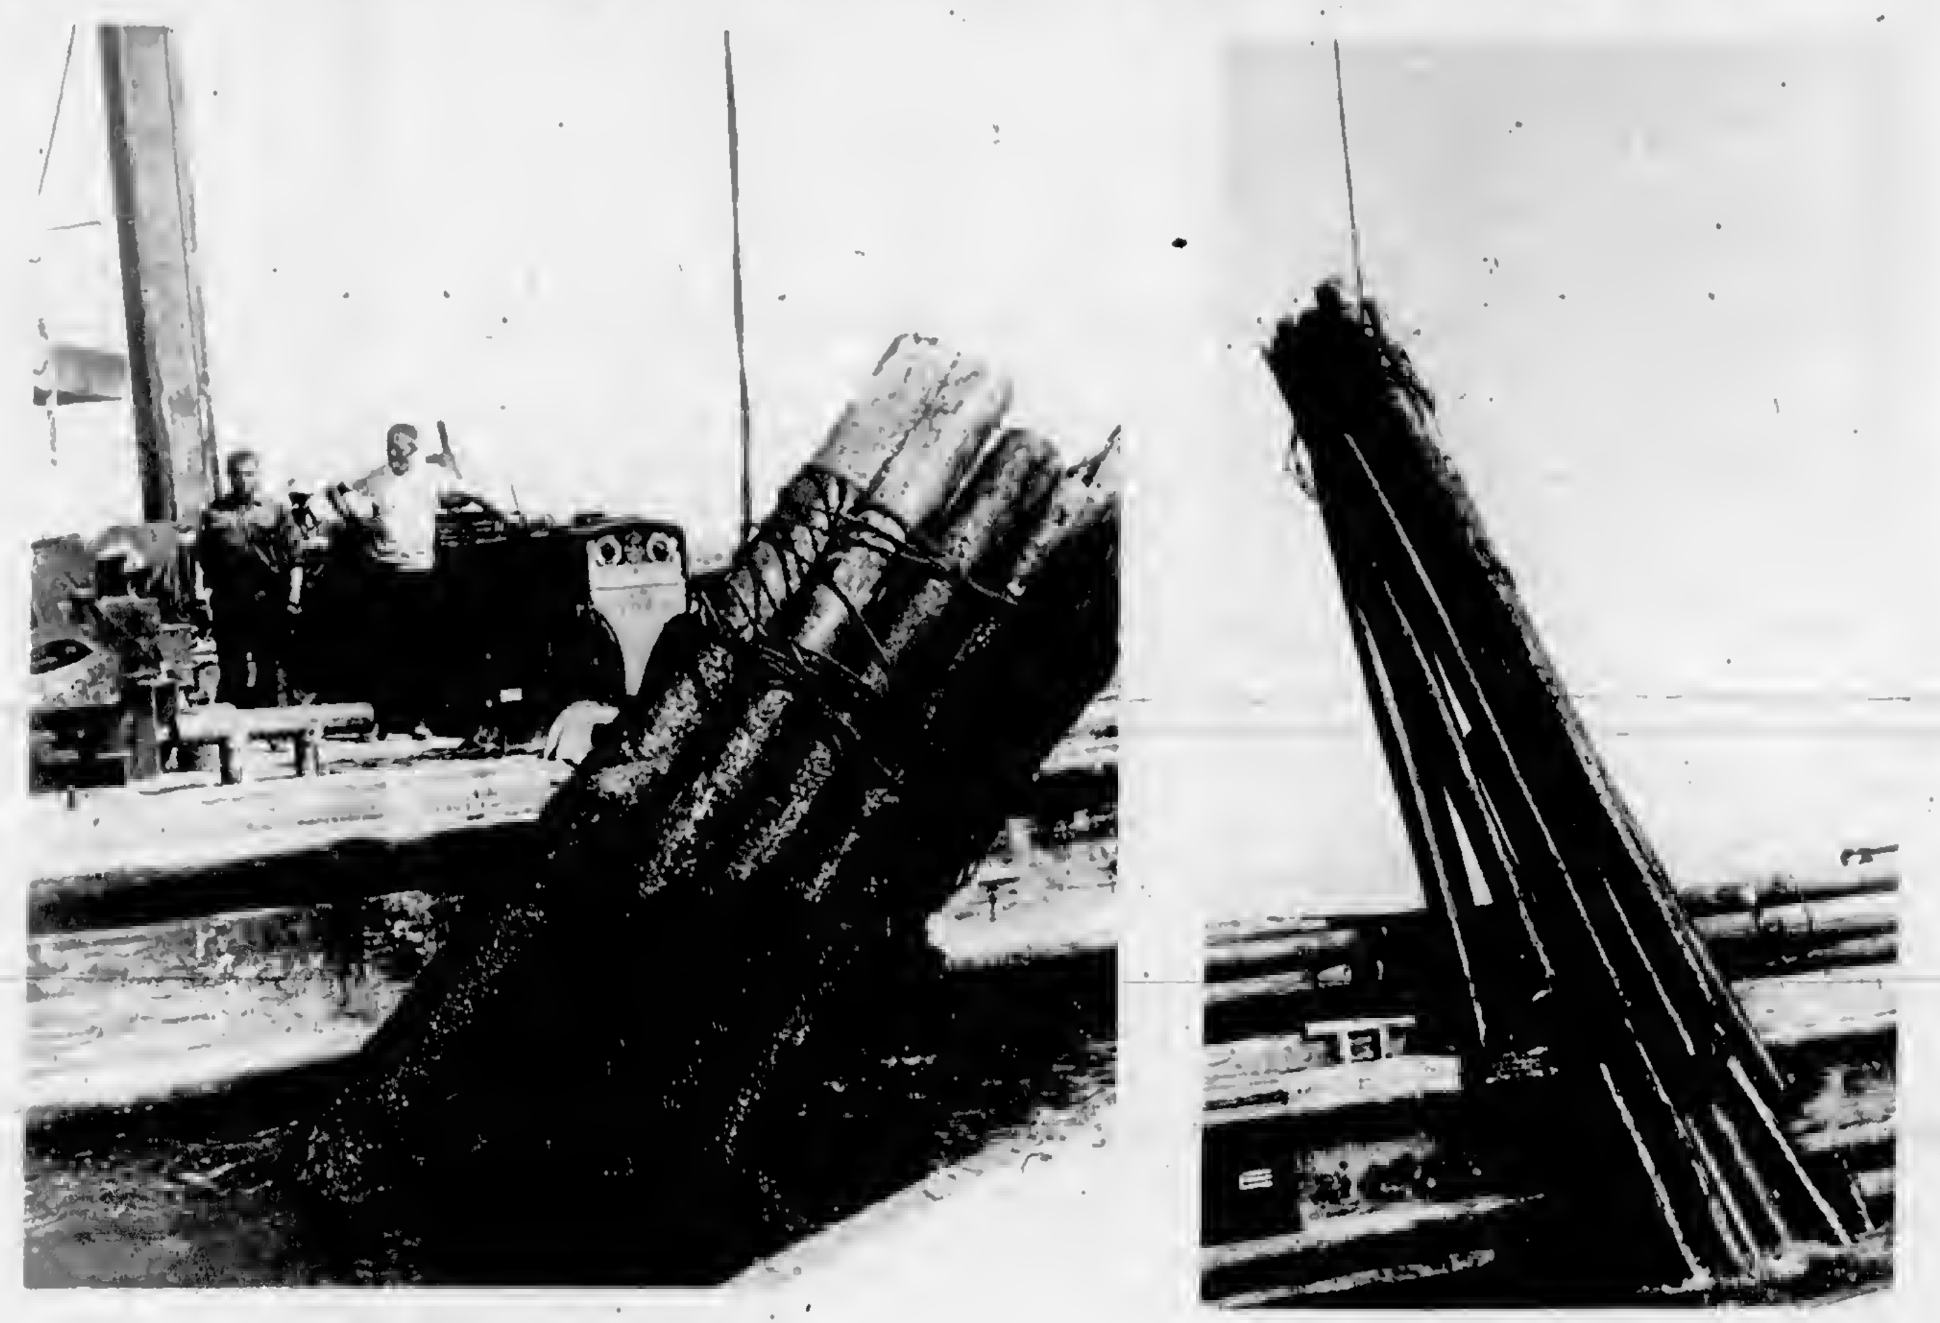
Sgt. Thomas G. Maxwell is spending a two-week furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Maxwell of Hayes Township.



THE LUEDKE ENGINEERING Co. of Frankfort sent its big sea-going crane to Charlevoix last week with plenty of work lined up. First job was removing cluster of pilings at entrance to Pine River Channel which were damaged by the freighter Fred Manske this spring. The big crane lifted the entire cluster with one hefty yank, but several piling came loose (upper right) and slipped back into the lake, necessitating a clean-up operation. The pilings had stood just off the city dock as long as many old timers can remember. They will be replaced

Lake Boaters Keep Coast Guard Busy

Coast Guard units of the Ninth Coast Guard District handled 233 search and rescue cases during the long Fourth of July weekend.

There were 662 people involved in these 233 cases. Out of these cases the Coast Guard estimated that 71 lives could have been lost. Out of a potential loss of live of 71 there was an actual loss of life of seven.

Lake Erie and Lake Michigan made up the bulk of 118 "engine failure" cases. "Engine failure" cases on Lake Ontario and Lake St. Clair were moderate, while on Lake Superior and Lake Huron they were light.

Capsizings, last year's chief cause of boating accident deaths, accounted for 16 cases. Thirteen of these cases were on Lake Erie and three were on Lake Michigan.

Other cases included 15 "overdues," 22 "out of gas," 12 "floodings or sinkings," three "collisions," three "fire," two "medivacs or medicos," and 29 miscellaneous cases.

The Coast Guard Auxiliary, a civilian volunteer organization that assists the Coast Guard, helped Coast Guard units in six of these weekend cases. They also handled 35 cases by themselves, greatly helping the Coast Guard to operate more efficiently in their primary function, saving lives.

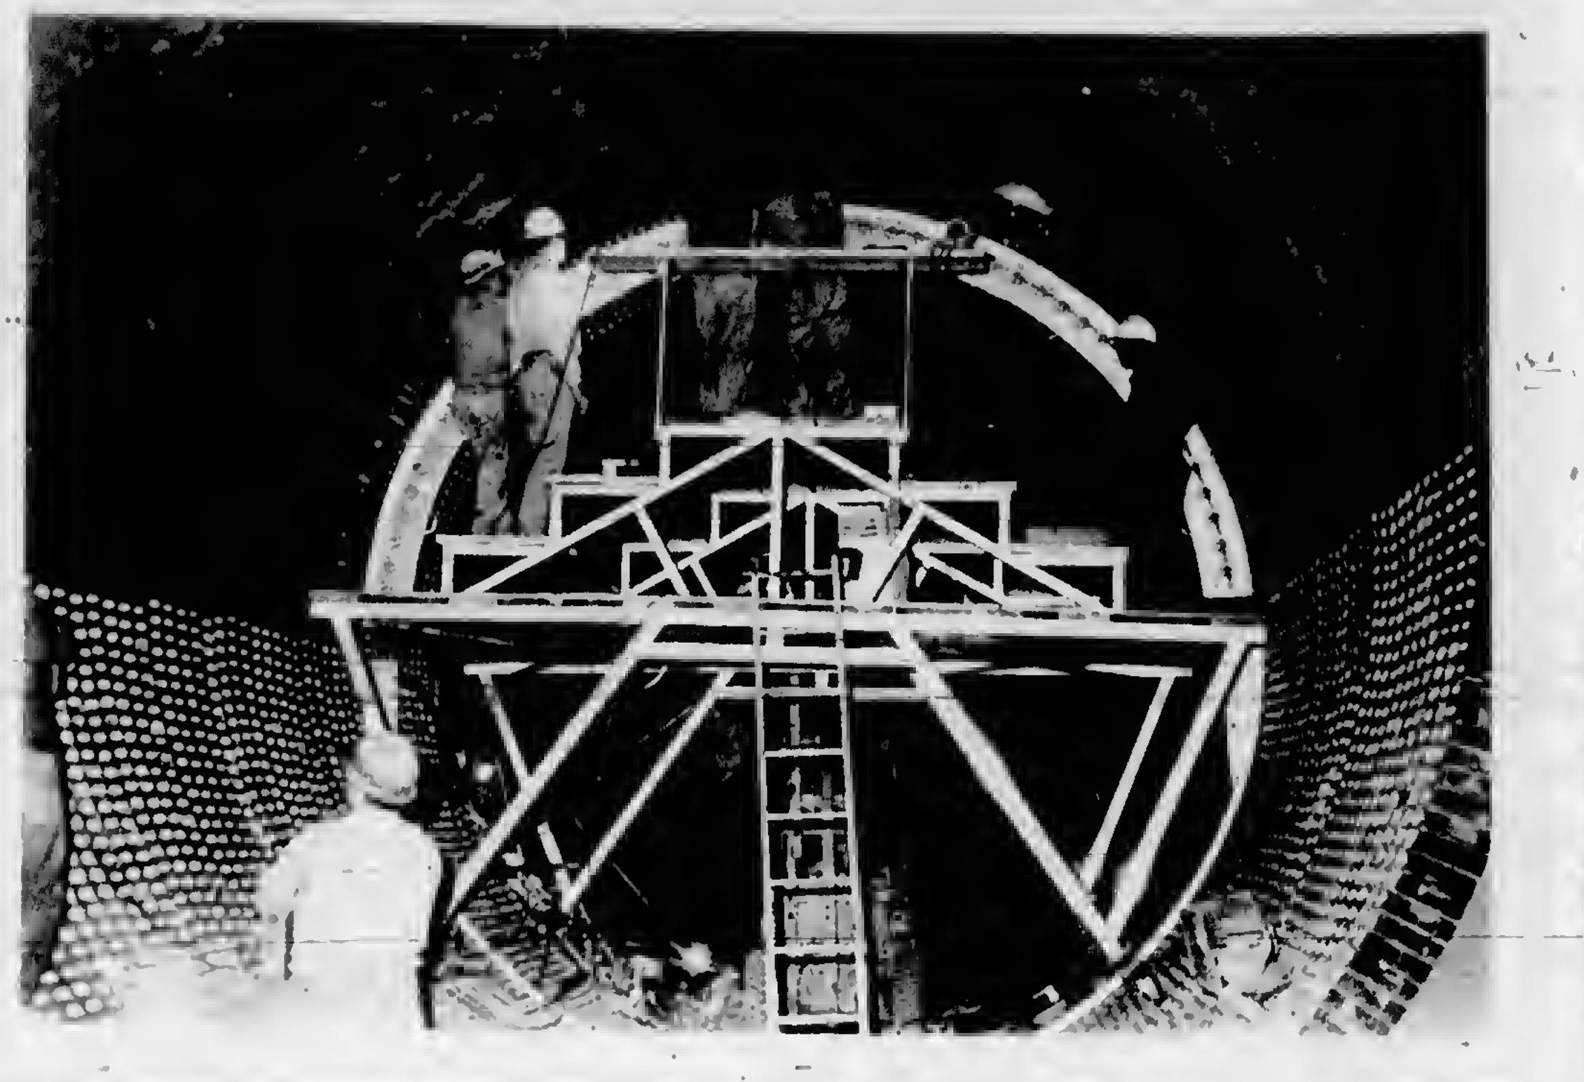
Medusa Re-Bricking 60-Feet of Cement Kiln



THE KILN at the Medusa Portland Cement Co. plant at South Point is shut down this week to allow workers to re-brick 60 feet of the 580 foot kiln. The kiln must be re-bricked from time to time because of damage to the firebrick lining. Only this time Plant Manager Fred Cohrs hopes the job will be speeded up by a recently purchased Pneumat-O-Ring, invented by Maury Drenkel of Kirkland, Wash. The device holds each ring of bricks securely in place until the key brick is inserted. Then the entire ring of bricks is tightened by pneumatic pressure. Then the ring is advanced and workmen install the next ring of bricks. Although the ring cost about $8,000, Cohrs says the company will save the cost on the first re-bricking job. The new firebrick costs $1,000 a foot, exclusive of labor to install it. Inventor Drenkel was in Charlevoix Saturday to see his machine in operation.

MEDUSA PLANT Manager Fred Cohrs examines "chain zone" about midway the 580-foot kiln for possible damage while the kiln is down for repairs. Thousands of lengths of chain are suspended from the interior of the kiln. The chains transmit heat to the cement slurry, speeding up the drying process.

Rep. Friske Joins Fight To Protect Does, Fawns

State Rep. Richard Friske (R-Charlevoix) today stated complete support for the suit filed by his colleague, John D. Payant (R-Kingsford), to block shooting of antlerless deer in the Upper Peninsula.

The suit was filed yesterday (Tuesday) in Dickinson County Circuit Court at Iron Mountain. Specifically, it seeks an injunction to prevent the issuing of any antlerless hunting permits in Dickinson County. However, the suit would probably have much wider implications if successful.

The suit is an unusual one. It is filed under the new law allowing Michigan citizens to sue public agencies to stop the destruction of natural resources. The case contends that the department's decision is likely to impair or destroy a natural resource--the deer herd in Dickinson County.

Named as co-defendants in the legal action are the Department of Natural Resources, the Natural Resources Commission and the Department's Director.

"As the plaintiff in the case, Rep. Payant doesn't think it would be appropriate for him to make any public statements on this matter," Friske explained. "However, I'm behind him 100 percent, and want to publicly acknowledge his efforts to stop the shooting of does in the UP this fall. Both of us think this would be a disaster for the UP deer herd.

"Rep. Payant and I are convinced that the department's decision, taken last weekend, to reinstitute doe hunting is an irresponsible and ill-advised position," Friske added.

"I am seeking to join Rep. Payant's suit on behalf of my constituents in Chippewa and Mackinac Counties and the five Lower Peninsula counties."

In addition to concentrating on the impact antlerless deer hunting may have on natural resources, the Payant suit also makes a case for the opinions of local residents. Included in the legal briefs are the results of an advisory question on the Dickinson County Ballot in last fall's election. Citizens were asked if the doe hunting moratorium, in effect in the UP last year, should be continued for a three-year period. The response was approximately 7,000 to 2,000 in favor of the three-year moratorium.

"My own district showed 75 percent to 15 percent in favor of a moratorium," Friske concluded.

Indian Fish Rights Referred to Kelley

In a letter to Michigan Attorney General Frank Kelley, Cong. Philip E. Ruppe, (R-Mich.) has asked that the Attorney General petition the Michigan Supreme Court to review its decision granting Indian hunting and fishing rights.

On April 5, 1971, the Michigan Supreme Court affirmed a treaty granting certain hunting and fishing rights to the Chippewa Indian tribe in Michigan.

Ruppe has asked that the State Supreme Court review its decision in the case to clarify two aspects.

First, there is some question whether the original treaty governed commercial as well as private hunting and fishing.

In addition, Ruppe asserted that the Michigan Supreme Court decision had failed to clarify the role of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources in managing the fish and game.

"While there is no question that this matter should be decided in the courts," Ruppe said in Washington, "I want to be certain that all the factors are considered in the decision. This can be readily accomplished by the State Attorney General exercising his right to ask the Michigan Supreme Court to review its earlier decision and clarify the role of the DNR and the commercial fishing and hunting aspects of the case."

The issue of Indian hunting and fishing rights in Michigan has become extremely heated. Clarification of that State Supreme Court decision will ease the potentially dangerous situation.

I SWAPPED FOR IT THROUGH THE WANT ADS

Governor OK's Spending Of More Rec Bond Money

Gov. William Milliken recently signed a capital outlay bill authorizing about $30 million in Michigan bond monies and federal funds to be spent on state and state-urban recreation projects of the Department of Natural Resources.

The approved spending total includes $23,885,380 from the state's $100-million recreation bond program and $6,440,000 in federal funds.

Of the combined amount from those two sources, $19,749,330 will go for the DNR's fisheries, forest-recreation, parks, and wildlife programs.

The parks allocation is $11,782,000 — about half of which will be used for land acquisition, another possible source of money to acquire recreation land in the Fisherman's Island area threatened by resort development.

The remaining $10,576,050 will be channeled into 20 state-urban projects, which are to be located within 30 minutes' driving time from population centers in Michigan.

About $4.6 million from that figure will be spent to provide added recreational facilities in Wayne County. The other $5.9 million under the latest state-urban appropriation will finance improvements to serve leisure-time needs in populous parts of such counties as Kent, Ingham, Oakland, Muskegon, Ottawa, Macomb, and Monroe.

Fisheries, $4,122,715; forest-recreation, $738,500; parks, $11,782,000; and wildlife, $3,106,115.

Major improvements from the fisheries capital outlay figure will include completion of the Platte River anadromous fish hatchery and the start of construction on a key warm-water fish hatchery in southeastern Michigan.

Most of the funds allocated for the forest-recreation program will be used to expand state forest campground facilities. Those monies will pay for development of 288 new campsites to accommodate an additional 86,000 camper-days at state forests in northern Michigan.

Approximately half of the DNR's parks appropriation will go for land acquisition to meet future needs for recreational space. The remaining amount will place main thrust upon developing about 550 modern campsites and adding some 6,700 parking spaces for state park day users.

The DNR will draw upon a large share of its wildlife funds to buy some 19,000 acres of top-priority lands for wildlife habitat improvements and added hunting opportunities. Under that effort, the DNR will expand holdings at southern state game areas, acquire key tracts in and around northern deeryards, and pick up prime wetlands acreage.

The DNR's recent appropriation of $23.8 million in recreation bond monies is the second to be made from that $100 million program approved by Michigan voters in 1968. Under the first allocation, approved a year ago, nearly $15 million was earmarked for state and state-urban recreational projects of the DNR.

COAST GUARD

THE U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Sundew will hold open house during the Venetian Festival from noon until 3 p.m. Sunday, July 25. The crew will be in full-dress uniform.

Here's How You Can Join the Boat Parade

All yachtsmen in the area are invited to participate in the annual Venetian Boat Parade Saturday, July 24.

Chairman Josh Barnes says strings of lights will be furnished on request, although such decorations are not necessary.

"It is the opinion of the committee that yachts, with just running and cabin lights, are, in themselves, a beautiful sight," Barnes says.

Barnes says every effort is being made to keep this year's parade — the high point of the Venetian Weekend — as simple as possible.

"All that is necessary is that you jot down some basic information about your boat (name, type of vessell, home port, owners and anything else of interest) and drop it off at the control boat which will be located just east of the railroad bridge between 8 and 8:30 p.m. the night of the parade.

"At the same time pick up your number which will be your position in the fleet.

"Please display the number on the port (left) side of the boat and get in approximate order before the start of the parade at 8:45 p.m.

"Boats will follow at approximately 45-second intervals and should maintain five mph to the stake boat, then 2½ mph to the southwest corner of Round Lake, then resume speed and disperse, being sure to remain clear of the other boats coming through.

"If you have borrowed lights, please return them to the Chamber of Commerce building within one week after the parade."

Barnes says that in the event of inclement weather Saturday, the parade will be held at the same time Sunday, July 25.

Yachtsmen with questions should contact Barnes at 547-6584 or C of C Manager Thomas Merta at the Chamber office on Bridge-st.

Jewish Services Listed

Temple B'nai Israel, the Jewish Congregation of the Petoskey area, has resumed its religious, educational and cultural programs for the 1971 summer season.

Sabbath - Worship services will be conducted every Friday evening throughout the summer at 8:15 p.m. at the Temple, corner of Michigan and Woukazoo-sts., Petoskey.

An Oneg Shabbat, the traditional hour of Sabbath fellowship, follows the services.

Registration for the Religious School is now taking place, and classes are scheduled to begin shortly.

Among the other activities being planned by the congregation this summer are Adult Education Groups, and a community observance of the 75th Anniversary of the Temple, in August.

The Temple is being served this year by Rabbi Howard Berman, of Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Rabbi Berman is available at the Temple every weekday from 9:00 a.m. to 12 noon, for consultation and to welcome visitors. Everyone is always welcome at B'nai Israel, and all Charlevoix residents and visitors are invited to attend its worship services and programs.

PETOSKEY'S "Firehouse Five" (the Epsilon Jazz Band) will take part again this year in Charlevoix's Venetian Festival Street Parade, scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday, July 24. In other years, the Firehouse Five also has performed on the bandstand in East Park.

Mainlining

By BETH BALDWIN

1971 will go down in history books as the year legislation was passed allowing 18 year olds and over to vote in all elections.

It will also be underlined in Michigan history as the year the Michigan Legislature voted to reduce the age of majority from 21 years to 18 years.

Actually, it is surprising that the Age of Majority bill made it through both houses and was passed intact. The portion of the bill that caused the most controversy was, of course, that which dealt with lowering the drinking age to 18. The main criticism was highway safety.

However, it is interesting to note that as the Detroit Free Press pointed out last Friday, "... 26.8 percent (or 14,000 arrests) of all Michigan arrests of persons between 18 and 21 (excluding traffic offenses) were for drinking or possession of alcohol by a minor."

This bears out what has been common knowledge for years. Those between the ages of 18 and 21 drink anyway, legal or not. And certainly there will be 18-year-olds who will abuse this privilege. But by the same token practically every individual can name at least one or two middle-aged persons who abuse it also.
